bury, according to law, not exceeding forty shillings." In 1648 Peter Noyes was "to see people ioyne in marriage in Sudbury." (Colonial Records, p. 97.)

In the early times towns could send deputies to the General Court according to the number of their inhabitants. Those that had ten freemen and under twenty, could send one; those having between twenty and forty, not over two. (Palfrey's History.)

We infer that if a person was elected to any town office he was expected to serve. It is stated in the records of 1730 that David Rice was chosen constable, and "being called up [by] the moderator for to declare his exception, or non-exception, upon which David Rice refused for to serve as constable, and paid down five pounds money to s^d town, and so was discharged."

Having considered the nature of the town-meeting, the place where works of a public nature were discussed and decided upon, we will now notice some of the works themselves. First, Highways, the Causeway and Bridge.

HIGHWAYS.

In providing means for easy and rapid transit, it was important for the town to make haste. Indian trails and the paths of wild animals would not long suffice for their practical needs. Hay was to be drawn from the meadows, and for this a road was to be made. Another was to be made to Concord, and paths were to be opened to the outlying lands. The first highway work was done on the principal street, which was doubtless at first but a mere wood path or trail. An early rule for this labor, as it is recorded on the Town Records, Feb. 20, 1639, is as follows: "Ordered by the commissioners of the town, that every inhabitant shall come forth to the mending of the highway upon a summons by the surveyors." In case of failure, five shillings were to be forfeited for every default. The amount of labor required was as follows: —

"1st. The poorest man shall work one day.

"2nd. For every six acres of meadow land a man hath he shall work one day.

and the fields used instead. A very merry morning it was for the men and boys when all hands were called out for this work. The train starts out with a single ox-team, but is joined by others as house after house is reached until reinforcements make a long train.

CARE OF THE POOR.

In 1649, it was ordered that certain persons "have power to speak with Mrs. Hunt, about her person, house [or home] and estate, and to take some care for her relief." The following vote was recorded years afterwards: that "Mrs Hunt shall have fifty shillings, out of a rate to be made this present February 1665, this in respect of her poverty." In 1669 [or 7] Mrs. Hunt was to have fifty shillings pension paid out of the town rate. In 1673, "because of the poverty of her famely, it was ordered that Mr. Peter Noyes do procure and bring sergeon Avery from Dedham to the Widow Hunt of this town to inspect her condition to advise, and direct, and administer to her relief, and cure of her distemper." Ten pounds were also to be put "into the hands of Peter Noyes with all speed to assist Mrs. Hunt with."

About 1663, a contract was made with Thomas Rice to keep a person a year, "if he live as long," for which he was to have five pounds sterling; and if the person kept had any, or much sickness during the year, the town was to give Mr. Rice "satisfaction to content, for any physic, attendance or trouble." In 1663, £7 were added to the present rate, "for the use of Thomas Tfling's sickness, and to pay for intendance of him." In 1664, John White was "exempted from paying his present rate to the town, and also unto the minister." Dr. Loring, in his diary, gives repeated instances of collections taken for the afflicted in the time of his ministry; as, for example, in 1750: "Lord's day, had a contribution for Thomas Saunders, laboring under a severe and incurable cancer; collected £16–8–0." In 1757 or '59, "had a contribution for our brother, Tristam Cheeny. £31 was gathered." About 1762, October 7th, public Thanksgiving: "A contribution was made for the wife of Asahel Knight of Worcester. £18 was collected."

late as 1751, the town voted that "for highway work, eight hours be accounted for a day's work, and two shillings shall be the price of a day's work, one shilling for a yoke of oxen, three pence for a good cart."

Commercial relations were not always carried on by payments in money, but sometimes wholly or in part in produce. Edmund Rice, in 1654, "for service as deputy," was to have "six pounds to be paid in wheat at John Parmenters senior, and so much more as shall pay seven pence a bushell for the carraige of it, to be paid within one week after next Michelmas." For work on the meeting-house, about the year 1688, "he was to have country pay, at country price." The country pay was to be "in good sound merchantable Indian corn, or rye, or wheat, or barley, or malt, or peas, or beef, or pork, or work." At a meeting of the selectmen, Oct. 25, 1678, it was ordered that "Mr. Peter Noyes, Peter Kinge and Thomas Stevens or any of them are appointed to collect of the Inhabitants of this town what may be wanted of the sum granted by any person or persons towards the new college at Cambridge in building according to an order by the Gen C * * *." This being attended to, the town received its discharge, of which the following is a copy: —

"Discharge. Received then of several persons of the town of Sudbury several parcels of corn amounting to (with the transportation from S. to Cam.) the full sum of what was there subscribed to contribute to the new building for the college.

"I say received by me, WILLIAM MANNING."

Sometimes payments were promised either in produce or money, as, in 1696, Benjamin Parmenter was to sweep the meeting-house, from April 1 of that year to April 1 of the next year, "for ten bushells of Indian corn, or twenty shillings in money." Whether Mr. Parmenter was to take which he chose, or the party engaging him was to give which they chose, is not stated. Sometimes the produce was rated, or paid for town rates, in accordance with what the produce was rated or paid for in county rates; as, in 1673, it was 4thly That the Persons appointed by the East India Company to receive and vend their Teas (by their obstinate refusal to resign their odious Commission) have shown a ready disposition to become the Tools of our Enemies, to oppress and enslave their Native Country, and have manifested such stupidity and wickedness to prefer private Interest to the good of their Country, and therefore can expect no favor or respect from us; but we leave them to accumulate a load of Infamy, proportionate to their vileness.

5th That whoever shall sell, buy, or otherwise use Tea, while subject to and poisened with a Duty, shall be deemed by us Enemies to their Country's welfare; and shall be treated by us as such. The Town by their Vote Ordered the foregoing resolves to be recorded in the Town Book, and a Copy of the same to be forwarded to the Committee of Correspondence at Boston, with our sincere thanks to that Respectable Town, for their Manly Opposition to every minsterial measure to enslave America.

With like spirit the town expressed itself in the following instructions to Peter Noyes, its Representative to the Court:

Sir, you being chosen by the inhabitants of this town to represent them in the Great and General Court or Assembly of their Province, we think proper at this critical Day, when our invaluable rights and privileges are so openly invaded to give you the following instructions.

That you invariably adhere to and steadfastly maintain (so far as you are able) all our Charter Rights and Priveleges and that you do [not] consent to give them or any of them up, on any pretense whatever. That you make use of all your influence, that some effective method be devised and pursued for the restoration of our violated rights and redress of all our grievances. Nowell, Thomas, Windsor, an early settler, though it is not thought that he had been at Dorchester; had wife Elizabeth, but no children; in his will, 1648, after small gifts to his kindred, Robert Wilson, and Isabel Phelps, devises a compet. estate to wife for life, fee to Christopher Nowell, son of Edward of Wakefield, Yorkshire. Yet he calls neither his brother. A remarkable conjecture may arise, from the moderate distance between Wakefield and Clitheroe, less than 40 miles, that the stock of this Windsor wayfarer and our Secretary of Mass. was in the sixteenth century the same, though Savage finds no evidence of their ever meeting in our country.

NOYES, NOYCE, or NOISE:—James, Newbury, one of the two first ministers, born 1608, at Charlestown, in Wilts. near the edge of Hants, between Amesbury in W. and Andover in H. S. of Rev. William, who was instituted, 1602, as rector of that diocese; in 1621 resigened in favor of Nathan Noyes. His mother was sister of Robert Parker, a very learned Puritan, driven to Holland for his heterodoxy and forms; he was bred at Brazen Nose, Oxford, as his nephew, Rev. Nicholas, in his acco. for Magn. III, cap. 25, Append., writes, and was called away by his cousin Thomas Parker, to assist him at the school of Newbury, in Berkshire. He married, 1634, Sarah, eldest daughter of Joseph Brown of Southampton, and embarked for New England in company with his brother Nicholas and cousin Parker, in the Mary and John of London, preaching a short time at Medford; was freeman, 1634, and invited to Watertown church, but in 1635 went to Newbury, and though younger than his collea. cons., died first, 1656. His will, made five days before, mentioned wife Sarah and children, brother, Rev. Nicholas Noyes, and cousin, Rev. Thomas Parker; the inventory shows good estate and children were Joseph, born 1637; James, 1640, H. C. 1659; Sarah, 1641; Moses, 1643, H. C. 1659; John, 1645; Thomas, 1648; Rebecca, 1651; William, 1653; Sarah, again, 1656; and his wife died 1691. Sarah married Rev. John Hale of Beverly.

Noyes, John, Boston: freeman 1676; was that year constable; married Sarah, daughter of Peter Oliver; had Sarah, John and Oliver, born 1675, baptised 1676, H. C. 1695.

Noyes, Joseph, Salisbury, 1640; had perhaps Mary, who married, 1657, John French of Ipswich; but this name in Geneal. Reg., III, 55 and 6 is Moys.

Noys, Joseph, Charlestown; married, 1656, Mary, daughter of Francis Norton; she died 1657, being bound on a voyage when he made his will, 1659, probably 1661, in which he calls Peter and Thomas of Sudbury his brothers and "father Norton's four daughters" his sisters; gives land in England. All which may indicate him as son of the first Peter.

Noyes, Nicholas, Newbury, younger brother of the first James, born 1616; came with him; freeman 1637, married Mary, daughter of Capt. John Cutting; had Mary, 1641; Hannah, 1643; John, 1646; Nicholas, 1647, H. C. 1667; Cutting, 1649; Sarah, 1651, died soon; Sarah, again, 1653; Timothy, 1655; James, 1657; Abigail, 1659; Rachel, 1661; Thomas, 1663; Rebecca, 1665, who died at 18 years. He was representative 1660, 79 and 80, and died 1701. Hannah married, 1663, Peter Cheney; and Sarah married, 1674, Matthew Pettingill.

Noyes, Peter, Sudbury, 1639; came in the Confidence, 1638, from Southampton, aged 47, with son Thomas, 15; daughter Elizabeth, and three servants; is called yeoman in custom house record, but after arrival gentleman. He was of Penton, in Co. Hants, which is near Andover; went home after short visit here, well pleased with what he saw at Watertown, and next year came again in the Jonathan, with several friends, and Nicholas, Dorothy, Abigail and Peter, all probably his children, besides John Waterman, Richard Barnes, William Street, Agnes Bent, Elizabeth Plimpton, and Agnes Blanchard, who Savage judges might be his servants, as he paid for their passages; but such was not Agnes Bent, for she paid for herself, for daughter Agnes, Thomas Blanchard's wife with her husband, and Richard Barnes, son of said Blanchard's wife, and probably Elizabeth Plimpton. Blanchard's wife with infant daughter died on passage, 15 days out, and Barnes' grandmother died this side of the Banks. He had share in first division of lands in the town, and again in the second and third, made 1640; was freeman 1640, selectman 18 years, representative 1640, 1 and 50; deacon of the church; died 1657. Three years before he gave his estate in old England to his eldest son Thomas, and in his will, of which Thomas was made executor, made the day before his death, names his other children, Peter, Joseph, Elizabeth, wife of Josiah Haynes; Dorothy, wife of John Haynes; Abigail, wife of Thomas Plympton; daughter-in-law, Mary, wife of his son Thomas; and kinsman, Shadrach Hapgood.

NUDD:—Thomas, Hampton, son, it is said of Roger; was a minor with his widowed mother, at Watertown, who, before 1645, married Henry Dow, and removed from Watertown to Hampton; Thomas married, 1659, Sarah, daughter of Godfrey Dearborn, and had seven children, of whom one was Samuel, and perhaps another Joseph.

NUNN:—Richard, a passenger in the Increase, from London to Boston, 1635, aged 19, but no more is heard.

NURSE:—Francis, Salem, in that part now Danvers; by wife Rebecca, daughter of William Towne, had John, Samuel, Rebecca, Mary, Francis, born 1661; Benjamin, 1666; Michael, and a daughter, who married William Russell; Rebecca married, 1669, Thomas Preston; and Mary, 1678, John Tarbell. The unhappy mother of these children suffered death in 1692; twice the jury failed to find a verdict, to which they last assented from her not giving satisfactory answers to their questions in open court, that from her deafness she failed to understand. Sir William Phipps, hearing this, prepared a reprieve, but by solicitation of others, weakened, withheld it, and the dreadful sentence was executed on 19th July; and he survived till November, 22, 1695, aged 77. Her sister, Sarah Cloyce, not less guilty, escaped with her life. Twenty years after the sufferer was hanged, the opprobrious deed was cancelled.

Jayson,

Thanks for your response re: Haynes. Let me explain it's been about 20 years since I dug through my husband's info. on the Haynes side. Found out some things this weekend.

First, I was incorrect that Thomas Asa Haynes' father is Asa P. Haynes. I missed a generation. Thomas Asa Haynes father was Andrew A. Haynes, son of Asa P. and Mary listed on 1950 DeKalb County census. I found a bio on Andrew A. Hanes under DeKalb County site. (Name spelled Hanes on bio).

Thomas Asa Haynes was born in 1869 according to information gathered from my husband's grandmother (Genevieve Lillian Haynes) before she died. Thomas Asa Haynes born about 1869 and died at the age of 87 in 1956.

Also, by mother-in-law (daughter of Genevieve Haynes) remembers Genevieve telling her the name of Asa was handed down for several generation on the Haynes side. If this is the case, no wonder all these Asa's showing up are confusing.

Thanks and I will be trying to dig up more info. and will let you know if I do.

"He that hath much to do, will do something wrong, and of that wrong must suffer the consequences; and if it were possible that he should always act rightly, yet when such numbers are to judge of his conduct, the bad will censure and obstruct him by malevolence, and the good sometimes by mistake."—SAMUEL JOHNSON.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.:
PRINTED AT THE JOURNAL OFFICE,

1865, aged eighty-three years. His son, Jeremiah T., was born on the old farm, August 24, 1820. He married Sarah A. Dennison, who bore him one son, Charles S., who lives in Brattleboro. His second wife was Augusta Carpenter, by whom he has two children.

David Thurber came with his family of nine children, by means of an ox team, from Richmond, N. H., in 1776, and settled upon the farm now owned by his grandson, Edward Thurber, on road 3. He represented the town in the legislature one term. He was a member of the Baptist church, and labored zealously to promote its interests. He died respected by the community. His son Edward, who was eight years old when his father came to Guilford, married Betsey Wells, and settled on the homestead farm. His influence as a pacificator won for him the respect and confidence of his townsmen. He had ten children, only two of whom are living. Amos, his son, now lives on road 3. Amos's first wife was Almira Worden, of Halifax; his present one, L. L. Thurber, the widow of his brother John W. Edward Thurber, a grandson of the pioneer of the family, who succeeded his father to the homestead farm, married Aurelia M., daughter of Capt. Jesse Wilkins. He has been a member of the Baptist church for fifty-one years, and is still an active religious worker. He has been a lister and assessor for several terms. The house he now occupies was built by his father in 1799.

Vine Haynes came from Groton, Conn., in 1778, and settled on the farm now owned by Russell L. Roberts, who married a granddaughter of his, on road 35. He was a carpenter and cabinet-maker, and endured many hardships and privations while clearing his land. He brought with him to his new home his wife, Molly Brown, and their six children. Three children were born to them after their settlement here. Among these was Asa, on the homestead, on which he always lived, in 1784. He, like his father, was a carpenter, and was also a Methodist minister. He married Sally Briggs, by whom he had nine children who grew to maturity. Five are living, among them a daughter, who became the wife of Russell L. Roberts.

James and Rufus Chase came from Rehoboth, Mass., during the Revolutionary war, and settled on the John H. Rudd farm. James afterwards removed to the west part of Dummerston, and lived to be ninety-three years of age.

John King came here from Connecticut about 1783, bringing his kit of joiner's tools with him upon his back. Some years after he returned to Connecticut and married Sarah Marvin, of Middletown, in that State. He returned with her to Guilford, and settled in the center of the town, removing a few years later to the farm now owned by Mrs. C. A. King, where both died at a good old age. Of their nine children, all of whom reached maturity, not one is living. Their son Joseph, who was born in this town, married Katharine Bangs. He was a carpenter, and died in 1861, aged sixty-six. Two of his nine children are living, Frederick H., at Miller's Falls, Mass., and Frank R., now living with his mother on road 30.

still living in Brattleboro. He leaves two children, Virgil W., who is a physician in New York city, and Augusta E., wife of F. A. Wells, residing in Brattleboro. Electa, daughter of Caleb Blanchard, married Lorenzo Allen, of Brattleboro, and died without issue, March 17, 1881. Edson C. married Mary A. Baker, of Brattleboro, and had one child, Minnie, who resides with her mother in Guilford. He died May 5, 1883.

Lovell and William Bullock, brothers, from Rehoboth, Mass., came to Guilford at an early day and settled on road 10, on the farm now owned by O. H. Halladay, which they cleared and on which they lived together for seven years, when William married and purchased the interest of his brother, who located on the farm now owned by his grandson, J. L. Bullock, on road 7, upon which he spent the remainder of his life. He was a prominent man, a representative from his town, and was familiarly called Capt. Bullock. His son Daniel was born upon that place in 1793, and died there in 1850. He married Emily, daughter of John King, and had two children, J. L. and Elizabeth, the latter of whom died young. J. L. married Sarah M. King, of Hinsdale, N. H., and has two children, Samuel M. and Lyman B. He occupies the old homestead, which was built about a hundred years ago, and which is now in a good state of preservation. He has in his possession an old shot-gun with which, it is said, was killed the last wolf in the town.

Samuel Melendy was an early settler on the farm now owned by Charles A. Squires, on road 16. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary war and was taken prisoner by the Tories, who took all his stock, except one calf, which one of his boys succeeded in withholding from them. He married Sarah Gale, by whom he had eleven children, all of whom grew to maturity. He died Sept. 20, 1813, aged seventy-two years, and his wife, March 30, 1832, aged eighty-two. Asa, one of his sons, was born Feb. 12, 1781, and married Sally Moore, who was born May 11, 1793. He died Nov. 29, 1866, and his wife, March 24, 1865. Three of their eight children are living, Mary W., in Guilford, Edward, in Sheboygan Falls, Wis., and A. B., in Rogersville, East Tennessee. John, son of Samuel, lived and died upon the homestead. Jonathan also lived in the town.

Joseph and David Gaines, brothers, were early settlers in Guilford. Joseph located in the southeast part of the town and died here. His son Joseph, who accompanied him here, married Tabitha Stebbins and settled on the farm now owned by his son Joel, on road 56. He was a farmer, and had ten children, eight of whom grew up. He died in 1869, and his wife in 1878. His sons Joel and Horace, who are farmers, occupy the old homestead. David Gaines lived and died in the town. He had two sons, Samuel and David, but none of the family are living. [illegible] of Joseph

Joseph Weatherhead, from Rhode Island, was an early settler in Guilford. He located on the farm now owned by Henry Thomas, on road 37. He died in the town. He had three boys, Joe, Jerry and John, and two girls. Jerry, who was born in Guilford, married Abigail Wilder and settled on the scituated, as advantageous to yᵉ Enemys approach & dangerous to yᵉ Repellant, yet (by yᵉ help of God) yᵉ garrison not onely defended yᵉ place from betweene five or six of yᵉ clock in yᵉ Morning till about One in yᵉ Afternoon but forced yᵉ Enemy with Considerable slaughter to draw-off.

Many Observables worthy of Record hapned in this assault, Vizᵗ That noe man or woman seemed to be possessed with feare; Our Garrison men kept not within their garrisons, but issued forth to fight yᵉ Enemy in theire sculking approaches: Wee had but two of our townesmen slaine, & yᵗ by indiscretion, none wounded; The Enemy was by few beaten out of houses which they had entered and were plundering; And by a few hands were forced to a running flight which way they would; The spoyle taken by them on yᵉ East side of yᵉ river was in greate pᵗˢ recovered.

Furthermore p'mitte yoʳ humble Petitionʳˢ to present a second Motion, And let it be acceptable in yᵉ eyes of this our Grand Court Vizt.

That whereas by an Act of Our late Genˡˡ Court Tax rates are leavied upon Our towne amounting to £200 (as appeareth pʳ Warrant from Our Treasurer, which said sum̄ was leavied by Our Invoice taken in yᵉ yeare before Our greate damage susteyned. It is yᵉ humble & earnest request of yoʳ Petitionʳˢ to commiserate Our Condition in granting to us some abatement of yᵉ said sum̄, for yᵉ ensueing considerations, Vizᵗ ffirst Our towne to pay full for their Rates then taken, which in greate pᵗᵉ they have now lost by the Enemys invasion may seeme not to savour of pitty no not of equity. Secondly if yᵉ Service p'formed at Sudbury (by yᵉ help of yᵉ Almighty) whereby yᵉ Enemy lost some say 100, some 105, some 120, and by that service much damage prevented from hap'ning to other places whereby yᵉ Country in generall was advantaged, reason requires some favorable consideration to yoʳ Servants of Sudbury. For if it be considered what it hath cost Our Country in sending out some forces some of which pᵗᶦᵉˢ have not returned with yᵉ certaine newes of such a number slaine as with us, is it not reasonable that this service soe beneficiall should not be considered with some reward which may most easily be effected by issueing forth an Act of your grace in a sutable abatemᵗ of yᵉ said Sum leavied, with yᵉ conferring of a Barril of Powder & sutable shott in regaurd that yoʳ Petitioners have spent not onely theire owne stock of either, but much of yᵉ Towne stock. To which humble and Equitable Motions if Our honᵇˡᵉ Court shall benignely condescend, You will deeply oblidge yoʳ humble petitioners not onely to pray for yᵉ pʳsence of yᵉ Lord to be with youᵘ in all yoʳ arduous affaires with the blessing of The Almighty upon all yoʳ Undertakings but shall for Ever remaine

HAYNES

WALTER HAYNES, born in England, 1583; died at Sudbury, Massachusetts, February 14, 1664; married Elizabeth. Walter Haynes, together with his wife and five children, sailed from Southampton April 24, 1638, in the "Confidence;" the list of passengers includes: Walter Haynes, aged 55; his wife, Elizabeth; sons, Thomas, John, and Josiah, all under 16 years of age; and daughters, Suffrance and Mary, who were all his children with the exception of his oldest daughter, Elizabeth, who married Richard Gourd and remained in England. He was from Sutton, Mandefield (Mandeville), Wiltshire, and was a "weaver."

It is supposed that he first settled in Watertown but removed the same year or the next to Sudbury, where he was one of the original settlers. His will, written May 25, 1659, and signed by him but evidently without witnesses, and again signed by him before witnesses on March 4, 1663-4, mentions wife, Elizabeth; sons, John and Josiah, and daughters, SUFFRANCE TREADWAY and Mary Noyes. It also mentions his daughter, (Elizabeth) Gourd, in Old England. He died February 14, 1664; inventory of estate, February 28, 1664. (Registry of Probate, No. 10939, Probate Office, Middlesex county, East Cambridge, Massachusetts.)

Nathaniel Treadway was granted land at Lake Quinsigamond in 1664, with John and Josiah Haynes, brothers of Suffrance Haynes.

Children of Walter and Elizabeth Haynes:
I--Elizabeth, b. in England; m. Richard Gourd; did not come to America.
II--Thomas, b. in England; d. at Sudbury, Mass., July 28, 1640.
III--SUFFRANCE, b. in England. (See following.)
IV--Mary, b. in England; d. March 1, 1697-8; m. Thomas Noyes, who d. Dec. 7, 1666; she m. (second) a Mr. Bacon.
V--John, b. in England, 1621; d. abt. 1697; m. Oct. 13, 1642, Dorothy Noyes.
VI--Josiah, b. in England, 1623; m. 1654, Elizabeth (Noyes) Freeman, daughter of Peter Noyes and widow of John Freeman.

SECOND GENERATION

SUFFRANCE HAYNES (III), daughter of Walter and Elizabeth Haynes, born in England and came to America with her parents in 1638; died at Watertown, Massachusetts, July 22, 1682; married Nathaniel Treadway (Bullard and Allied Families, p. 249). He died July 20, 1689. (Watertown, B. M. D.)

John Haynes in his Blue Book, page 40, written about 1772, says: "Suffrance Haynes was wife of one Josiah Treadway of Watertown." However, no name of Josiah Treadway of Watertown, Sudbury, or Framingham (V. R.), until the marriage of Josiah, son of Nathaniel and Suffrena Treadway, 1674. History of Framingham (Barry, 1847), says: "Sufferenna wife of Nathaniel Treadway was daughter of Elder Edward How." (Bullard and Allied Families, p. 249.) But probably a mistake, for no mention on records of Framingham, Watertown, Sudbury of any of the surrounding towns of any Suffrenna How, or any other Nathaniel or Josiah Treadway, other than those already mentioned. Their daughter, Elizabeth Treadway, was born according to Watertown B. M. D., February 3, 1646, not August 3, 1646.

HAYNES

4, 1835, Margaret R., daughter of James and Margaret (Riddle) Dobbin, of New York City; she was born in New York City; her parents were born near Dublin, Ireland. One of her paternal uncles was a clergyman of the Church of England. Children, all but the eldest and the youngest, born in New York City: Alice Rebecca, November 29, 1836, died March 15, 1837; Charlotte Bailey, December 23, 1837; James Dobbin, January 10, 1839; Josephine, February 28, 1841; George Washington, March 17, 1843; Mary Greenwood, November 29, 1846; Margaret Louisa, February 17, 1848; Eliza Miller, March 24, 1850; David Dyckman, see forward; Charles Henry, May 9, 1856, died January 19, 1858.

(IX) David Dyckman, son of George Washington and Margaret R. (Dobbin) Allerton, was born May 29, 1853. He was educated in public and private schools, and at the Wilcox Military Academy, at Stamford, Connecticut. He was planning to enter the United States Military Academy at West Point, but abandoned this idea and entered commercial life as clerk in a grocery store. Later he was a clerk in a cheese house and in a clothing store. In 1880 he became connected with the Erie Grain Elevator Company and was made manager of the corporation in 1895, a position he has filled up to the present time. He is a member of the New England Society of New York and of the following named clubs: Engineers', Atlantic Yacht, New York Canoe and Rocky Mountain. In political matters he entertains independent views, and he is a communicant of All Angels' Protestant Episcopal Church.

Mr. Allerton married, July 28, 1886, Mary Emma Mathews, of Bricksburg, New Jersey, born October 20, 1859, died in 1891. They had no children.

HAYNES The Haynes family in England dates back to the time when surnames came into use. The American line probably extends to Robert Haynes, who was born about 1476 and who was living in 1546, when his will was dated. The will of Alice Haynes, mother of the American immigrant Walter, is printed in the New England Genealogical Register (vol. 39, p. 263). She was of Semley, Wiltshire, and was born about 1550, died in 1623.

(I) Walter Haynes, the immigrant ancestor, was born in Sutton Mandifield, Wiltshire, England, in 1583. He owned a house and other buildings on the island of Purbeck, in the southeast part of Dorsetshire. He came to New England in the same ship with Peter Noyes, Yeoman, of Benton, Southampton, with his wife, Eliza Haynes, and Thomas, John and Josiah Haynes, sons under sixteen, daughters Suffrance and Mary, and servants John Blandford, John Rediat and Richard Biddlecome, arriving in Boston in 1638. His family was closely connected with the Noyes family. About a year after coming to Massachusetts, Haynes removed from Watertown to Sudbury, having received a grant there December 22, 1639. He became one of the foremost citizens of that town, being on its first board of selectmen in 1639 and serving ten years altogether in that office. He was perhaps the first to build a house on the west side of Sudbury river, and is believed to have built the old Haynes garrison house which stood until the middle of the nineteenth century. The Haynes homestead was in the northeast section of the town, called the Pantry district. Haynes was admitted a freeman May 13, 1641; was deputy to the general court in 1641-44-48-51; was a member of the Artillery Company of Boston. He learned the trade of linen weaver in England, but was a farmer in Sudbury. He died at Sudbury, February 14, 1664-5. His will, dated May 25, 1659, with codicil March 4, 1663-4, proved April 4, 1665, bequeathed to wife Elizabeth; sons Thomas, John and Josiah; sons-in-law Thomas Noyes and Roger Gourd; and to his daughter (wife of Gourd) a tenement in Shaston, Dorsetshire. Children: Thomas; John, mentioned below; Josiah, married Elizabeth Noyes; Suffrance, married Josiah Tredway; Mary, married Thomas Noyes; a daughter, wife of Roger Gourd.

(II) John, son of Walter Haynes, was born in England, in 1621. While he is named among the children coming with his father in 1638, he was living with his cousin Reed or Rice, in Watertown, according to the manuscript of John Haynes, mentioned below. He was admitted a freeman in 1646, and was deputy to the general court from Sudbury in 1668. He married, October 13, 1643, at Sudbury, Dorothy, born in England, 1620, daughter of Peter and Abigail Noyes. Her father was a deputy to the general court from Sudbury in 1640-41-50; was selectman of Sudbury twenty-one years; admitted freeman May 13, 1640; commissioner, and a leading citizen. John Haynes died in 1692, leaving a will dated that year. Children: Elizabeth, born July 16, 1644; Mary, 1647; John, mentioned below; Dorothy, 1651-2; Peter, April 7, 1654; Joseph, September 7, 1656; Thomas, 1658; James, March 17, 1661; Daniel, May 16, 1663; Rachel, February 12, 1665; Ruth, April 7, 1668; David, May 4, 1671.

New England's Generation

THE GREAT MIGRATION AND THE FORMATION OF SOCIETY AND CULTURE IN THE SEVENTEENTH CENTURY

Virginia DeJohn Anderson

participants all agreed on the singular importance of the event. Every emigrant understood the voyage to be a unique experience, a rite of passage that clearly marked a fundamental shift in the course of his or her life. For months beforehand, the colonists had confronted a welter of unfamiliar tasks in their preparations for departure, having to liquidate their English estates, purchase large quantities of provisions, and arrange for passage on a New England–bound vessel. As they finally made their way to their ports of departure and boarded their respective ships, however, the emigrants, whose preparations had compelled them to dwell on highly individualistic concerns, increasingly recognized the bonds that tied their fates to those of strangers embarking with them. The events of the voyage strengthened those bonds and helped the passengers to understand the meaning of their common enterprise. In a very real sense, then, the voyage marked the beginning of the emigrants' gradual transformation into New Englanders.

I

Although leaders of the Great Migration offered advice on how best to prepare for the move to the New World, the emigrants relied principally on their own common sense, adapting general prescriptions to individual circumstances. Landowners, for instance, faced the particularly delicate task of disposing of their most significant asset – real property – to best advantage. Consider the predicament of Nathaniel Tilden of Tenterden. The Kentish yeoman's decision to emigrate came rather late in life, after he had spent decades accumulating land to pass on to his heirs. This land constituted the family's greatest capital resource, but now Tilden had to figure out how to dispose of it so that the family could leave and yet not ruin their economic position.

Tilden ultimately decided not to sell but to rent his Tenterden estate. Presumably, the rental payments would either find their way across the Atlantic or, more likely, constitute a fund of credit on the books of some English merchant to whom Tilden could turn for imported goods. Either way, the Kentish estate would continue to support the family despite its removal across the ocean. The canny yeoman had contrived a way to furnish his family with much needed capital in the New World at the same time that he kept the title to his Old World property in case they needed to return. Although it is difficult to tell if this scheme worked exactly according to plan, Tilden did include the income from his English estate among his assets when he wrote his will several years later. Far from forcing him to neglect his responsibilities as a husband and father, the decision to emigrate had instead compelled Tilden to be especially creative in fulfilling those same duties.[2]

Ingenious as this solution was, it is not surprising that other landowning emigrants followed suit. Samuel Hall, another Kentish yeoman, left behind "Land in England to the valewe of 20 li p[er] a[nnum]" when he sailed to Charlestown in 1637. Hall did not long enjoy the fruits of his well-laid plans, for he died within a couple of years of his arrival in Massachusetts. His widow, Joan, and infant son, Samuel, however, would benefit from his foresight and find the additional income particularly necessary as they adjusted to life without him. Another emigrant, Peter Noyes, rented out part of his English property to his sister, probably to obtain money to pay for his family's passage. After he sailed in 1638, he retained possession of a house and land near Andover in Hampshire. This property provided Noyes with an annual rent of about £20 during his lifetime and, after his death in 1657, supplemented his three sons' portions. Like Noyes, the surgeon Comfort Starr retained English lands for two decades after his move to Massachusetts, and presumably received some sort of rental payment in cash or credit. Colonists clearly recognized the value of a transatlantic infusion of capital as an addition to the subsistence provided by their New England estates. Both Thomas Besbeech and Edward Johnson

[2] Tilden's will is printed in Mayflower Descendant, III (1901), 220–2. His inventory (ibid., 222–3) omits real estate and does not mention a rental payment (although the amount of "Debts hopefull & Desprate" was £27), so it is impossible to assess the value of the Tenterden property.

acquired a considerable amount of property in Massachusetts, yet both continued to own English land to their deaths – which occurred some forty years after their emigration.[3]

Renting out property in England and using the income to supplement a New England estate was obviously a prudent solution to one problem of emigration, but it was also a scheme beyond the reach of most emigrants. Virtually all of those who adopted this strategy were older men who had accumulated substantial amounts of land prior to their emigration. Tilden, Noyes, Starr, and Besbeech were all aged forty-five or more, and Edward Johnson was thirty-nine when he rented out his Kentish estate in 1637. Moreover, Tilden, Hall, and Noyes all were yeomen, acutely aware of the value of their freeholds and doubtless reluctant to give them up. Some land might have to be sold or rented to acquire the cash to pay for provisions and passage, but since their estates were clearly substantial, they could afford to retain some portion of them. Other men were less fortunate. Younger emigrants, who had not yet received their inheritances or who had not had the time or means to accumulate property

For Noyes, see also Sumner Chilton Powell, Puritan Village: The Formation of a New England Town (Middletown, Conn., 1963), 5. The wills of two other emigrants also mention English estates. Walter Haynes (Middlesex no. 10939) apparently deeded his lands in Dorset to his son-in-law Roger Gourd; in his will he bequeathed "the say[d] deed" to his daughter Elizabeth Gourd – who had remained in England – and her heirs. The will of Joseph Parker, a twenty-four-year-old tanner who sailed on the Confidence in 1638, mentions an estate in Romsey, Hampshire. Since Parker listed Newbury as his residence at the time of his removal from England and was quite young when he sailed, this estate was probably bequeathed to him after he had already settled in Massachusetts; his will is printed in The Probate Records of Essex County, Massachusetts, 3 vols. (Salem, Mass., 1916–20), III, 278–81. On the emigrants' retention of English property, see also David Cressy, Coming Over: Migration and Communication between England and New England in the Seventeenth Century (Cambridge, 1987), 180–90.

through marriage, or saving and purchase, would have to depend almost exclusively on what New England could provide for their livings. Men who had been tenants in England had no choice but to return that land to its owners when they were ready to leave. Husbandmen like John Moulton, Henry Dow, and Richard Carver farmed sizable tracts in Norfolk but could not convert them to capital, and instead had to rely either on their savings or on the sale of personal property for the seed money to fund their transplantation to New England.[4]

For urban artisans, the disposition of real estate proved less of a problem. Since their holdings were usually modest, craftsmen generally divested themselves completely of whatever real estate they held before leaving England. Nicholas Busby, for example, sold his tenement in Norwich to another of the city's weavers rather than leasing it.[5] For Busby and other emigrant artisans, the sale of their property was the simplest and most sensible procedure. Not only could few of them have expected to earn a return comparable to the £20 per annum rents that farmers like Samuel Hall and Peter Noyes could charge for their more extensive holdings, but all would have realized that their earning power derived from their craft work. Artisans could afford to dispose of their English property because their greatest resource – their skill – was eminently transportable.[6]

[4] N. C. P. Tyack mentions that these men rented land in Norfolk; see his "Migration from East Anglia to New England Before 1660" (Ph.D. diss., University of London, 1951), 431, n. 44.

[5] Anna C. Kingsbury, A Historical Sketch of Nicholas Busby the Emigrant (n.p., 1924), 5–6.

[6] Among the emigrants studied here, eight men listed English property in their wills. Half of these – Thomas Besbeech, Samuel Hall, Peter Noyes, and Nathaniel Tilden – were clearly farmers. Walter Haynes, a linen weaver, and Comfort Starr, a surgeon, lived in small towns (Sutton Mandeville, Wiltshire, and Ashford, Kent) and probably derived part of their living from the land. As mentioned in footnote 3, the tanner Joseph Parker probably inherited his English estate after he moved to the New World. The only urban artisan who, as far as I can tell, retained English land was Edward Johnson, a joiner from Canterbury, and his Old World estate was not urban property but land in the "parish of Herron Hill." Farmland, it seems, was the only English land worth retaining.

What artisans did retain were the tools of their trades. Nicholas Busby freely sold his Norwich houselot but evidently never contemplated disposing of his looms. He and other emigrant weavers, such as Nicholas Batt, Walter Haynes, and Thomas Payne, all brought looms and "tackling" to their New England homes.[7] Not to have done so would have seemed an act of utter foolishness, for any artisan arriving in Massachusetts without his tools would have operated under inordinate disadvantages, since adequate replacements could not be bought, and probably could not be made, in New England. Most emigrant craftsmen seem to have assumed that they would earn at least part of their livings in New England through the practice of their trades. With experienced colonial observers like William Wood announcing that the men best suited for the work of settlement included "an ingenious carpenter, a cunning joiner, a handy cooper, such a one as can make strong ware for the use of the country, and a good brick-maker, a tiler and a smith, a leather dresser, a gardener, and a tailor," sensible emigrants could only have concluded that it was worthwhile to pay the freight charges even on bulky equipment. Thus, as they prepared for departure, the ingenious carpenter John Emery and the cunning joiner John Thurston remembered to pack their woodworking implements. Anthony Morse, Joseph Coleman, and William Gault each tucked his wooden lasts and other "toules for the shumaking trad" into the crates and bundles that held his other possessions. In Norwich, the locksmith William Ludkin likewise assembled his wide variety of files, chisels, and hammers to be packed up with the rest of his family's belongings. Such men would no sooner have dreamed of sailing without their tools than without their wives.[8]

Thomas and Mary Oliver, Metcalf's fellow parishioners at St. Edmund's in Norwich, had also been cited before the archepiscopal court in 1633, and set sail for Massachusetts the same year as Metcalf. Other emigrants leaving in 1637 were John Pers and John Baker, two more Norwich residents in trouble with church officials; Joan Ames, the widow of the revered Puritan divine William Ames; and Margaret Neave and Adam Goodens, whose names appeared on Separatist lists in Great Yarmouth. The Puritan beliefs of other emigrants should not be underestimated merely because they avoided direct conflict with bishops and deacons. John Winthrop's religious motivation has never been in doubt even though he was never convicted of a Puritan offense. Winthrop's "General Observations for the Plantation of New England," like Metcalf's letter to the citizens of Norwich, emphasized the corrupt state of England's ecclesiastical affairs and concluded that emigration "wilbe a service to the church of great consequens" redounding to the spiritual benefit of emigrants and Indians alike. Other explicit statements of motivation likewise stressed the role of religion. Roger Clap, who emigrated in 1630, recalled in his memoirs that "I never so much as heard of New-England until I heard of many godly Persons that were going there" and firmly believed that "God put it into my Heart to incline to Live abroad" in Massachusetts. Thomas Antrim of Salem, for instance, died possessed not only of a loom and tackling but also of various amounts of cotton, woolen, and linen cloth, along with several pairs of "cource" sheets that were probably of his own making. Even so, Antrim's principal support came from his farm and herd of cattle. John Pers of Watertown, who likewise earned his living mainly from agriculture, persisted in calling himself a "weaver" until his death. Nicholas Busby initially tried to combine weaving and farming in Watertown but – evidently finding rural life not to his liking – soon moved to Boston, where he opened a dry-goods shop and continued to weave part-time. At the time of his death, he had six pounds' worth of "Cloth in the Looms."[12]

Other emigrant clothworkers pursued several activities at the same time, obviously hoping that their multifarious efforts would produce economic security. Thomas Payne, formerly a Suffolk weaver, owned a farm in Salem, wove cloth part-time, and also became involved in running a local mill. His bequest of who emigrated in 1637, claimed for himself the title of yeoman less than a year later, after he had acquired a freehold farm in Watertown. William Stephens, an Oxfordshire husbandman, similarly began to call himself a yeoman after settling in Newbury. Nathaniel Tilden, Nicholas Butler, and Peter Noyes – who had all been called yeomen in England – concluded that their freehold ownership of substantial New England estates (and, perhaps, their ability to leave the task of actually working those farms to others) entitled them to assume the rank of gentleman.[75]

The eagerness with which these colonists assumed their new titles suggests that they took satisfaction in their new status as independent freeholders. But their efforts to obtain the farms that conferred that status always occurred within a social, economic, and cultural framework that strictly circumscribed individualistic behavior. Preachers warned their flocks that, as one of them put it, “a man that hath competency may not pray for more enlargement in the world”; he might move his family to obtain an adequate subsistence, but he could not seek merely to gain “more worldly advantage to himselfe.”[76] To do otherwise risked valuing one’s temporal above one’s spiritual estate. Moreover, colonists understood that their efforts to gain eco-

[75] The term “yeoman” did not have a precise legal definition in this period, but it generally indicated freehold status; see Mildred Campbell, The English Yeoman in the Tudor and Early Stuart Age (New York, 1942), 23–6. Carver called himself a yeoman in his will (see Suffolk County Probate Records, Vol. 1, 22–3), as did Stephens (Probate Records of Essex County, I, 153). Tilden was labeled a gentleman in his inventory (see Mayflower Descendant, III [1901], 220), as was Noyes in his (Middlesex County, docket no. 16074). Butler was called a gentleman in a 1652 deed (see Suffolk Deeds [Boston, 1880–1906], Liber I, 196). Although Tilden, Butler, and Noyes called themselves yeomen at the time of their voyages, their English estates may not have been held exclusively as freeholds. Noyes, for instance, held land in copyhold in Weyhill, Hampshire; see Powell, Puritan Village, 8.

1817, and is still active at the age of seventy-eight years. Her father was the sixth consecutive Richard Waldron, descended from William Waldron, brother of the famous Major Waldron, first President of the once republic of New Hampshire. The original ancestor, who came to America from England in 1634, and was known as Recorder William Waldron, settled at Dover, N.H., then a part of the Colony of Massachusetts, in 1636. The family, numerous members of which have distinguished themselves in different walks of life, have resided in Strafford County, New Hampshire, for many years, occupying a position of wealth and influence. Dr. Hayes's maternal grandmother was a daughter of Richard Kimball, of New Hampshire. The parents of Dr. Hayes, who were both teachers in early life, were married in the month of December, 1841. They reared five children, three sons and two daughters: Mary A. Hayes married R. G. Hayes, of Dover, and died at the age of twenty-one; David resides at the old homestead, having a wife and one child; Lizzie K. also lives at the home; Dr. J. G. Hayes, of Williamsburg, Mass., has one son.

Irving B. Hayes, the third son, received his primary education in the common schools, and at the age of fourteen began his higher studies under the tuition of his brother and his cousin. At the age of seventeen he entered Dartmouth College, where he was graduated in 1883, when he was twenty-one years old. He followed civil engineering for three years, and then studied medicine at the University of New York, graduating from Long Island College Hospital in 1889. He commenced the practice of his profession in Atlanta, Ga., where, in company with his brother, he resided until 1893, when he came to Florence, where he now has a very large and exceedingly profitable practice. He is a searching investigator into the scientific principles of his useful profession and one of the coming lights of the regular school of medical practice.

On January 29, 1895, Dr. Hayes was most happily wedded to Miss Agnes F. Crier, of Florence, daughter of John and Sarah (Irwin) Crier. Her parents were natives of England, and are now deceased, the father having first passed away. The mother, being left a widow, succeeded in providing her daughter with a good education, which was obtained at the schools of Holyoke and in Boston. Mrs. Crier became well known and highly respected in Florence, where she was actively engaged in church work; and Miss Crier was a very successful music teacher previous to her marriage. Dr. Hayes is a Fellow of the Massachusetts Medical Society of the Hampshire County District and a Master Mason. The pleasant home where he now resides was purchased by him in 1894.

RUSSELL L. ROBERTS, a respected citizen of Northampton, was born in Gill, Franklin County, Mass., November 10, 1824, son of Alsetus and Betsey (Robinson) Roberts. His paternal grandfather, whose wife was a Miss Brooks, was a farmer in Gill; and in that town Alsetus Roberts was born and passed his life, dying in 1853, at the age of fifty-eight. Mrs. Roberts was born in Greenwich, Mass. She came of a long-lived family, her grandmother, Sarah (Smith) Robinson, living to the age of one hundred and two years, and her brothers and sisters outliving the allotted age of man. Mrs. Roberts died aged ninety-two years. The surviving children of Mr. and Mrs. Roberts are as follows: Russell L., the subject of this sketch; Horatio N., a dentist in Alton, Ill., who has one son; Holland F., a farmer in Gill, unmarried; Lyman A., a printer in the employ of the government for the past ten years at Washington, who has a wife, one son, and two daughters, and who served three years in the Civil War. Those deceased are: Sarah C., Holland, Smith, and Mary Jane.

Russell L. Roberts was reared to farm life, attending the district school regularly until ten years of age. After that, until he was eighteen, he went to school only in the winter, working upon the farm during the summer months. When a little over nineteen years old, he bought his time of his father for forty dollars, and worked four years in the woollen factory. He was then employed for a while at cutlery work in Shelburne Falls; and in 1854 he moved to Portage, Wis., where he worked at carpentering. He finally came East to take charge of the farm of his father-in-law, which he now owns. He removed to Northampton in 1891, taking up his abode at 68 High Street, in the comfortable dwelling which he erected in 1884. Besides his home property and the farm which formerly belonged to his father-in-law, he owns two lots in Northampton, where he grows corn and potatoes. Mr. Roberts has retired from active work, and is living quietly at his home on High Street.

On September 27, 1847, Mr. Roberts was united in marriage to Reuma R. Haynes, of Guilford, Vt., daughter of Asa and Sally (Briggs) Haynes, the former of Guilford, the latter of Leyden, Mass. Asa Haynes was a notable man in his day, strong mentally, physically, and spiritually. He was a carpenter by trade, and was active in evangelical work, a zealous member of the Methodist Episcopal church, preaching forcibly and earnestly. At one time he had charge of the Methodist Episcopal church at Hatfield. He broke one leg three times, the third fracture crippling him for life; but the brightness of his spirit was undimmed, and he preached eloquently from his bed of pain. He conducted a farm for family needs; and this, as already stated, Mr. Roberts, his son-in-law, took charge of and owns to-day. Asa Haynes died in 1868, in his eighty-fourth year. His wife died in 1861, at the age of seventy-eight. At the time of her death nine of their twelve children were living. Mr. and Mrs. Haynes left no property, but were tenderly cared for in their last days by Mr. and Mrs. Roberts. Mr. Roberts's mother also spent her last years with them.

Mr. and Mrs. Roberts have had five children, all of whom have passed away. Two died in infancy, and Leuetta A. was fatally scalded when but a little over four years old. Russell J. Roberts died in December, 1885, aged thirty-eight years, leaving a widow and two children, one of whom, William H., is with his grandfather. Emerriah Roberts, who was a jeweller at Northampton, died in November, 1886, at the age of thirty-one, leaving a wife and one daughter, Lulu May Roberts. Mr. and Mrs. Roberts belong to the Methodist church, of which he has been a member nearly fifty years, and which she joined when five years of age, receiving baptism by immersion at that time.

LYMAN RICE, a lifelong resident and a prosperous farmer of Belchertown, was born there, September 29, 1812. His father, Horatio Rice, also a native of Belchertown, received a good common-school education, and, adopting agriculture as an occupation, purchased a farm in his native town about the year 1810. Here he resided for the remainder of his life. He

NOYES

DESCENDANTS OF

OF SUDBURY, MASS.

By FREDERICK HAYNES NEWELL.

BOSTON:
DAVID CLAPP & SON, PRINTERS,
115 High Street,
1893.

Reprinted from N. England Historical and Genealogical Register for Jan., 1893.

P.O. 1173 - 8-27 - N.E. Hist. Gen. Soc.

DESCENDANTS OF WALTER HAYNES AND PETER NOYES, OF SUDBURY, MASS.

The following facts were obtained for the greater part from a copy of an old manuscript, the original of which was written by John Haynes (b. 1684) describing the families of his great grandparents Walter Haynes and Peter Noyes, who came to this country together and located in Sudbury. This was written later than 1772, since it gives that date, and was probably prepared when the writer of the original was nearly 90 years of age. The manuscript was found among the papers of his grandson Samuel Haynes (b. 1737) by the latter's grandson Wm. F. Haynes, and a copy was made by his cousin Clark Lewis Haynes (b. 1807) the grandfather of the present writer, Frederick Haynes Newell.

Savage's Genealogical Dictionary gives many of the more important of these names and dates, and a comparison shows a remarkably close agreement in details. The old manuscript, however, gives much information of the fourth generation and children succeeding —facts not otherwise recorded so far as has been ascertained. For historical narrative concerning Walter Haynes, Peter Noyes and their sons, reference should be made to the History of Sudbury, Mass., by Alfred Serano Hudson, published by the town in 1889.

1. Walter^{1} Haynes was born in England in 1583, in the town of Sutton, Mandeville, county of Wilts.* He also owned a house and out-buildings in the village of Shaston, situated in the island of Purbeck, in the south-eastern portion of Dorsetshire. He, with family and servants, arrived in Boston in 1638, in ship Confidence (see Savage, also Register vol. ii. p. 108). In the same ship came Peter Noyes, yeoman, of Penton, county of Southampton, with children and servants.

Walter Haynes was a linen weaver, and was 55 years of age when he came to this country. About a year after his arrival, he with others removed from Watertown, having obtained a grant for a township named Sudbury, where they settled Dec. 22, 1639. He was made freeman 1640, was representative in the years 1641, 1644, 1648 and 1651, and was one of the Selectmen of Sudbury for ten years. He died Feb. 14, 1665, aged 82. (See Whitman's History of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, 1842, p. 97.)

Zadok fought in the Revolutionary War in the Battle of Bennington in August 1777. At that time he was a resident of Hampshire Co. MA. In 1787 Zadok signed a petition to the Governor of MA, asking him to spare the life of Jason Parmenter of Bernardston who was condemed to hang for his part in "Shay's Rebellion". Between 1787-1795 the family lived in Leyden MA, Cambridge NY, and Shaftsbury, VT. By 1795 the family had moved to Bernardston, MA. Zadok was the deacon in the Methodist Church at Bernardston which held services in his home. Zadok and Sally moved to Adams Twp., Washington Co. OH in the spring of 1815 with some of their adult children; he purchased 100 acres for $1350 in 1816. The following year he bought some land in sections 12 and 5 in the same township along the Muskingham River. In his will, Zadock named Sally as well as five sons and three daughters. The eldest son only received a dollar, apparently having already received his share of his father's estate. The balance went to the other sons, at one-quarter of the estate each, but each had to give a legacy to a specific sister. Son Ansel was to give $100 to his sister Asenath Jacobs, son Zara was to give $110 to his sister Sally Haynes, and both Marcus and Franklin were to give their sister Polly Very $40 each. Ansel was named the executor. An accompanying list of Zadock's estate, and who bought what items, revealed he possessed many goods. Ansel bought many items. Similar items, and amounts, were purchased by the other sons, sons-in-law, and others. Zadok's elder children may have been from wife Harriet Seymour or Harriet Parmenter.

BRIGGS

HISTORY OF NEW SALEM MASSACHUSETTS

Prepared for the Celebration of the 200th Anniversary
August 7, 8, 9, 1953

HISTORICAL INFORMATION COMPILED BY MRS. FLORENCE COGSWELL COX

HAMILTON I. NEWELL, INC.
AMHERST, MASSACHUSETTS

There was a blacksmith shop opposite the grist mill that was in operation for many years.

The first school building was on the road toward Cooleyville. The schoolhouse in district No. 6 was built of brick and was discontinued in 1936. This building was on the road to North Dana.

One of the oldest houses in Millington was the so-called Albert Ballard house. In 1871 this property was owned by G. W. Cleveland. The earliest record of this house is a transfer from Jonathan Maclellan to Benjamin Stacy in April, 1808. Probably the house was built many years earlier. As originally built there was a large kitchen with fireplace and brick oven on the south, a small bedroom at the west end, and pantry on the east, two large rooms on the north, connected by a small hall, with a fireplace in each of these rooms. In the kitchen ceiling were the hand-wrought hooks on which strings of apples, etc. were hung to dry. The large outside door in this room was double, nailed together with hand-wrought nails, hung with long hand-wrought arrowhead hinges, and locked by a wooden bar. The doors to the attic and cellar were opened by wooden latches with latch strings. At some time an ell was added and rooms finished off in the big open chamber. The big hand-hewn beams were fastened together with wooden pegs. Some of the boards in the partitions upstairs were very wide.

After the property had changed hands many times in the years from 1836 to 1871, Albert Ballard purchased the property in 1879 and retained it until the Metropolitan District Water Supply Commission took it over. The house was taken down, the parts marked, and moved to Dorset, Vermont, for re-erection.

The families of Moore, Newton, Hamilton, Ramsdell, Weeks and Goodnow were all associated with Millington.

Cooleyville Road

The New Salem creamery was situated on the left, just out of Millington, to which most of the farmers for miles around sent their cream to be made into butter. A man by the name of Louis Beebe took charge of the creamery for a longer time than anyone else and excellent butter was made, winning first prize at different fairs.

There was a school house just west of the creamery on the other side of the road. Next, coming on our way from Millington, just on the border of what is now Quabbin Reservoir, once lived Dexter Briggs. He was a farmer and did work for his neighbors with his pair of oxen. Farther on up through the valley on our left were buildings owned, the first by a man by the name of ? ? ? Briggs, the second by a Charlie Ross and last by Charlie Johnson. Then as one crosses Carey brook continuing on up the hill, on the left stood a large building owned at one time by Varney Putnam and later on by Wells Wheeler. The next dwelling was owned by Sarah Shaw, then Damon Brown. The building now used by the State was once owned by Captain Coolidge and later known as the Whitney Haskins place. This building stands across from the corner of what is known as the south hill leading to New Salem Center. On the west side of the road at the corner, there once was a tavern known as Cooks Tavern; going down the hill on the right one would find an old cellar hole, where once stood the Major Brown place. Then the J. A. Titus place was situated on the right side of the road; then as we cross the brook on our left was the Elbridge Shaw home, and on the right a saw mill owned by Willard Putnam. There was a small building once used as a store situated nearby which, later on, was moved up the road and occupied by a family by the name of Arnot. This was on the road leading to Prescott.

Dr. Albert Haskins lived with his sister Carrie Haskins just above and beyond the sawmill, a section which some people of the town called Puppeyville. It was said that a man once lived there who had a lot of puppies. Across the road from the Haskins place was the "old yellow house", where many different people have lived. Fred Haskell lived there as long as anyone, his father, Martin Haskell lived there first, followed by Fred and his wife and little nephew Louis Golden. Dr. Haskin's father, Elan Haskins, had a blacksmith shop just west of his home on the big brook (Hop Brook).

Daniel S. Freeman owned the next place, as later did his son, Dr. Sanford Freeman, then Harry Barber. Just a little ways beyond was the Aden Thompson place, later owned by Smith Orcutt, then by Lorenzo Eaton, and at the present time by Edward Eaton. Then situated across from the corner where the road leads to Prescott was school No. 3 which took the place of the old red schoolhouse. A short distance west of the school house was the old cheese factory owned by Willard Putnam. Then came John Upton's place; farther on that of Daniel Ballard, and finally the house of Miss Mary Vaughn and Catherine Connor. Near the corner on what is now the Whitaker Road was the Fred Kellogg place, later owned by Willard Bryant, then by Fred Ballard and at present by Norman Haney. Then came the Freeman place, where five generations of Freemans have lived. On the Russell Road there was a large house owned by Asa Russell, later on by Walter, Fred and Frank Russell. The houses on Carpenter road were first that of C. Fred Carpenter, then at the top by a man by the name of C. A. Briggs, the second by a Charlie Ross and last by Charlie Johnson. Then as one crosses Carey Brook continuing on up the hill, on the left stood a large building owned at one time by Varnum Putnam and later on by Willis Wheeler. The next dwelling was owned by Sarah Stone, then Damon Brown. The building now used by the State was once owned by Captain Coolidge and later known as the Whitney Hutchins place. This building stands across from the corner of what is known as the sandy hill leading to New Salem Center. On the west side of the road at the corner, there once was a tavern known as Cooley Tavern, going down the hill on the right one would find an old cellar hole where once stood the Major Brown place. Then the J. A. Town place was situated on the right side of the road, then as we neared the bridge on our left was the Ethridge Stone home, and on the right a saw mill owned by William Putnam. There was a small building once used as a store situated nearby which, later on, was moved up the road and occupied by a family by the name of Sawyer. This was on the road leading to Prescott.

Dr. Albert Hutchins lived with his sister Laura Hutchins just above and beyond the sawmill, a section which some people of the town called Whizzerville. It was said that a man once lived there who was a lot of peppery. Across the road from Dr. Hutchins place was the "old yellow house", where many different people have lived. Ivers Haskell lived there as long as anyone, his father, Marcus Haskell lived there first, followed by Ivers and his wife and little nephew Lewis Godden. Dr. Hutchins father, Elias Hutchins, had a blacksmith shop just west of his home on the big brook (Hop Brook).

Daniel S. Freeman owned the next place, as later did his son, Dr. Sanford Freeman, then Harry Parker. Just a little ways beyond was the Aaron Thompson place, later owned by Smith Orcutt, then by Emerson Eaton, and at the present time by Edward Eaton. Then situated across from the corner where the road leads to Prescott was school No. 3 which took the place of the old red schoolhouse. A short distance west of the school house was the old church, for many years used by Sanford Putnam. Then came John Lipton's place, further on that of Daniel Ballard, and finally the home of Miss Mary Vaughn and Catherine Conner. Near the corner on what is now the Whitaker Road was the Fred Kellogg place, later owned by Willard Bryant, then by Fred Sanford and at present by Stephen Haney. Then came the Freeman place, where five generations of Freemans have lived. On the Rugg Road there was a large house owned by Asa Russell, later on by Walter, Fred and Frank Russell. The homes on Carpenter road were first that of C. Fred Carpenter, then at the top

EXPLANATIONS

The following records of births, marriages and deaths include all entries to be found in the church records; in the cemetery records, and in many private records found in family Bibles and other sources. These records are printed in a condensed form in which every essential particular has been preserved. All duplication of records has been eliminated, but differences in entry and other explanatory matter appear in brackets. Parentheses are used when they occur in the original record; also to indicate the maiden name of a wife.

When places other than New Salem and Massachusetts are named, they are given in the printed copy. Marriages are printed under the names of both parties. Double-dating is used in the months of January, February and March, prior to 1752, whenever it appears in the original, and also whenever from the sequence of entry in the original the date may be easily determined. In all records the original spelling of names is followed, and in the alphabetical arrangement the various forms should be examined, as items about the same family may be found under different spellings.

From the fact that in 1855 all the records of births, marriages and deaths of New Salem were destroyed by fire, none of such records are available, save the period of 1843 to 1850, copies of which years are on file at the State House in Boston. These have been considered in this work as original records. The church records have fortunately been preserved and have been incorporated, as well as considerable material from the records of Franklin and Hampshire Counties, and from other public and private sources bearing on the vital statistics of this community.

The seal of New Salem has been omitted on the title page. Although a design of a seal is used by the Town Clerk on legal papers, it has never been reproduced for use on printed matter.

sales were made to others, and the set-remove from Rhode Island seem to have as it was called, and to have belonged to the Baptist denomination. Following them came other inhabitants of Rhode Island, many of them settling farther to the north in what was then East Hoosuck, or No. 1, now Adams, and of these very many were Quakers. To this difference in religion is probably due the fact that the New Providence settlement was not incorporated with East Hoosuck into the town of Adams in 1778, in which contingency probably there would have been no Cheshire; for, according to the Rev. John W. Yeomans in Field's History of Berkshire, it was the wish of the New Providence settlers to be incorporated with Adams, and during 1778 the inhabitants of East Hoosuck were twice called on to vote on the question of extending the charter so as to embrace New Providence, but each time rejected the proposition. New Providence Purchase must, however, have been subsequently annexed (by an Act of which we fail to find mention,) to the town of Adams. For, for some years prior to 1793, we find the people residing upon it, dating their letters from Adams, and the church established on the hill calling itself the Baptist Church in Adams. The present south line of Adams is evidently the old south line of East Hoosuck, so that it seems reasonably certain that the part of Adams which at the incorporation of Cheshire in 1793 went into the new town, was just the New Providence Purchase, and that it had been annexed to Adams after the incorporation of that town. The list given in appendix shows the conveyance recorded in the first ten books of the Pittsfield Registry of Deeds running to persons named as residents of Rhode Island. It included all the surnames given by Dr. Field in his history of early and prominent settlers of Cheshire and many more, and there is reason to suppose that most of the persons named in it became residents on the land conveyed to them.

To return to the first settlers—we find that Capt. Joab Stafford attended the general assembly at Newport in May, 1762, as a deputy from Coventry. In 1778 we find him empowered as Colonel Joab Stafford, to issue his warrant to some principal inhabitant to the newly incorporated town of Adams, requiring him to warn the inhabitants thereof to assemble for their first Town Meeting, and on the 21st of August 1801, we find him describing himself as Joab Stafford of Cheshire, Gentleman, quit-claming to Allen Briggs of Adams, Gentleman, Daniel Reid, Yeoman, and Timothy Mason, Gentleman, both of Cheshire, for $400 all the remnant of his land in the New Providence Purchase, including 14 acres, "on which an execution was sometime since extended in favor of Ruloff White against me." Doubtless the court records would disclose the cause of action ; but it is better not to peer too curiously into the gallant Colonel's embarrassments.

One of the witnesses to the deed is Richard Stafford, perhaps his son, and it is acknowledged before Ezra Barker, as a justice, a son of one of his

Here the story ends. Whether Deacon Irish was sent again to minister to them in holy things without their consent, whether the stumbling blocks were eventually removed, so bringing them all over into the new church—minus the Sixth Principle—or whether the dissenters ever occupied the Pork Lane church again, we are entirely unable to state, for here the record ends, and the church with its Sixth Principle drops out of the history of Cheshire.

In 1792 the brick school house was built on the hill opposite the present church. The spot upon which it stood, with the play ground surrounding it, was a gift to the town from Squire Ezra Barker. It was a square structure, with windows on three sides. Between the two south windows was an elevated platform upon which was a high desk for the teacher's own use. On either side of his desk, and extending across to the adjoining corners thence around the room were three tiers of benches, known as the back seat, the middle seat, and the low one. Entering school in this building, as many children did at three years of age, they were promoted as they grew in stature, from year to year until they finally attained to the dignity of the highest seat, the only gradation that this school knew. In summer a lady taught the children of the hamlet. In winter, when the large boys and girls came to the new school house, a master handled the ferule, made the quill pens, taught Webster's elementary from B-a-ba, ker-ker, Baker, to incompatibility, and ciphered with the big boys through the "Rule of Three."

In this building the town meetings were held after 1793, and attention given largely to highways, bridges, and schools. It is scarcely possible at this late era to follow all of these roads, and the changes that have taken place. Such a course would require the services of a civil engineer, and even then the undertaking would be fraught with extreme difficulty, would fill of itself an ordinary history, and be dull reading at last. Streams were bridged, and roads improved as time and travel demanded that they should be. The money being appropriated for the use of schools, districts were laid out, and school buildings erected as rapidly as the population made them necessary.

In 1793, the subject of incorporating a town, that should comprise an area of 1,800 acres taken from the adjoining towns, was much agitated. The first record that we find is headed "Concerning the town of Cheshire being incorporated:"

"We the subscribers do hereby Covenant, Promise, and engage to each advance the several sums of money to which our names are herein sit towards paying the charges of the Committee appointed by the General Court and to see the money paid in to the Clerk for that purpose by the first Monday in September next."

NOTES ON PIONEER LEYDEN FAMILIES

ALEXANDER. Solomon came to Leyden from Conn. His son, Elisha B. Alexander, was a pioneer veterinarian and Captain in the State Militia. His children married into the Gates and Babcock families. William settled on the old farm at the head of Alexander Road. Elisha D. Alexander was a carriage-maker. Draper Alexander, a descendant of Elisha D., ran a saw mill in West Leyden. He was a veterinarian, Deacon of the West Leyden Church, and delivered babies!

BRIGGS. Owen was one of the guard which helped precipitate the downfall of Benedict Arnold. A great-grandfather, John Briggs of Portsmouth, R. I., swore allegiance to King Charles in 1639. He was Inspector of Arms, builder of stocks, ran an "Ordinary" and was witness at a witch trial. Enoch, a great-grandson, was Quartermaster of a Newport cavalry regiment from 1765 to 1766. He came to Leyden with his wife, Judith Wilbur, riding pillion in the Spring of 1777 at which time he bought of Deerfield's Jonathan Ashley, 104 acres Leyden land for 250 lbs. He built one of Leyden's earliest frame houses on the County Road. His house, the present List place, still stands close to the Leyden stones which mark his grave. His son, Owen, served with Conn. troops during the Revolution. It is said he set out from Leyden on the famous "dark day." Owen's grandson, Alden Bradford Briggs, married Sarah Elizabeth Arms. Their son, Henry Kirk Briggs, born 1867, undoubtedly was named for Leyden's sculptor, Henry Kirke Brown. The name of "Kirk" has been carried down through eight generations of the Briggs family to Hazel Kirk Briggs Mills of Deerfield. The Bradford and Alden names also tie in with this family. Hence, it is connected not only with Mayflower pioneers, but with Leyden's outstanding citizen, Henry Kirke Brown.

A mysterious Zadoc Briggs, listed as a Revolutionary soldier in 1777, first appears on Leyden records as a Fence Viewer, April 7, 1788. After signing the Jason Parmenter petition (in 1787) we find him living near Wm. Dorril in 1790. In 1795, however, he faded out of the Leyden picture when he purchased Bernardston lands from Parmenter and others.

BARDWELL. Robert, of London, a soldier in R. I., 1675. Was a sergeant under Capt. Turner in the Falls Fight, 1676. After the war, he settled in Hatfield where he was proficient in making wool hats. His great-grandson, Consider, settled in Leyden ca. 1791 at which time he married Anna Benjamin. Of his eight children born in Leyden, two became bankers: Jarvis, President of the Shelburne Falls Bank; Samuel, a banker in Iowa. Fanny, b. June 27, 1799, married Peter Bliss of Leyden. In the 1798 Leyden property evaluation list, the homes of Consider Bardwell and Peter Bliss are listed.

BROWN. Charles, of Suffolk, England, first Brown in America of the sculptor Brown line. In 1863, the sculptor's brother, Samuel C. Brown married Sarah McCloud of Rowe, Massachusetts. Their daughter, Ellen L. Brown, now in her 96th year was born on the old homestead in Leyden. Reverting to the "doctoring" strain in her grandparent's family, Miss Brown went early into the nursing profession, after working in the Leyden store to save money for her training. She soon became a registered nurse and when the first hospital was organized in Greenfield, she became head nurse under Dr. Willard H. Pierce, leading physician of the area. In later life, Miss Brown helped compile a voluminous manuscript biography about her illustrious uncle, Henry Kirke Brown, and today has in her possession the Brown portraits of her grandfather and grandmother, along with attractive pictures of the old Brown homestead in Leyden. Some time ago, Miss Brown designed and framed a unique floral piece made from her father's hair.

BUDINGTON. Jonathan, born in Groton, Conn., Oct. 1, 1732, was a sea Captain and visited England, the West Indies and China. His son, Jonathan, by his first wife, Priscilla Hyde, was captured during the Revolution while privateering on the high seas and died on a British prison ship. Jonathan, Sr. also was captured, but was released.

When 60 years of age, Jonathan Budington took up land in Leyden in exchange for a debt owed him by a Deerfield "merchant." Budington built a log cabin "in thickly wooded wilder-till the following spring. During that summer a third fortification was erected in the town of Adams, beyond Hoosack mountain, and named Fort Massachusetts. This finished the line of defenses ordered and paid for by the Province. Other means of safety were adopted, and houses were fortified and mounts built in Vernon, Bernardston, Colrain, Charlemont and Charlestown. West of the mountain similar works were constructed at Pittsfield, Stockbridge, and Sheffield. These were built, some at private cost, and others by the towns in which they were situated. Generally the town fortifications were used as places of refuge for the inhabitants in times of sudden assault. In cases of imminent danger they were garrisoned by the Province troops or volunteers paid by the government.

Commanding Officers in Hampshire County.

Col. John Stoddard succeeded to the command in this county, on the death of Col. Samuel Partridge, which occurred in 1740. He also had charge of the frontier defenses. Capt. Ephraim Williams of Hatfield, was entrusted with the oversight of the western line of fortifications, with headquarters at Fort Massachusetts, and Major Israel Williams of Hatfield, was appointed commissary of the Western Department.

Soldiers and Dogs were Enlisted, but no Fighting Occurred.

Five hundred soldiers were ordered to be raised in 1744, two hundred of whom were to be sent to the western frontiers. Constant scouting was carried on from the forts, under the supervision of Capt. Williams. Dogs were pressed into the service, and accompanied many of the scouting parties, but evidently they did not accomplish all that was anticipated. Abundant signs of the enemy were discovered, but no collision occurred, and no assault was made by the Indians in this section. It is not known that any Northampton men were engaged in this campaign. Undoubtedly some of them enlisted, and were employed in the duties already named, but no company from this town appears among the muster-rolls. During the year both sides were engaged in preparations for the conflict. The burden of building the fortifications and scouting fell upon the militia from the northern section of the county, as very few troops, if any, were sent from the east. A company of soldiers from a Worcester regiment was sent to Northampton, and ordered to do duty on the frontiers in the summer. The French, in the meantime, were organizing their Indian allies, in readiness to take the field the following year.

The Town Adopts a New Method of Defence.

While the battle was afar the people of Northampton remained inactive. Ordinary precautions were undoubtedly taken, but no systematic defensive measures were entered upon till the latter part of the year 1745. The system of fortifications adopted in former years was no longer tenable, even if in existence. A new method better adapted to existing conditions of warfare, had been devised. It was not till December that the matter was brought before the town for action, though it must have formed a topic for general discussion throughout the year. It was then decided by a "great majority that something should be done to fortify themselves against the enemy," and a vote was passed to make "mounts and fortifications." The whole matter was put into the "custody" of a committee who were instructed to report on "Wednesday next." Accordingly on the 25th of December, the committee offered their suggestions. They concluded "that for the present 'tis not best to do any more than to make mounts and flankers according to the Inclinations of those that are to be defended by them," and that it was not expedient to do anything "by way of publick Tax or Expense." They also proposed that the town should be "divided into proper Squadrons & that Each Squadron fort Such Houses and in Such manner as they think best for themselves." Fifteen squadrons were proposed by the committee, and the limits of each district defined. This action of the town seems to have been unsatisfactory, and it was never carried out. Probably the most unpopular feature of the proposition, was that which had reference to the manner of paying the expense. As these squadrons evidently formed the groundwork of the plan of fortifications adopted the next year, they are copied in full :—

"Josiah Parsons hath determined to be by himSelf as we Are Informed." He lived on Market Street, his lot extending to the cemetery.

Mounts Ordered to be Built.

In the following May an order was adopted to build "mounts or places to watch and ward" in different parts of the town. They were constructed of hewn timber, were about "8 foot Square," & a floor to Stand Upon about Six or Seven foot from the ground, were covered overhead with boards so as

ZADOK BRIGGS OF BERNARDSTON, MASS., AND WASHINGTON CO., O.

The first known record for Zadok Briggs was his conscription for military service in the Battle of Bennington, Aug. 1777. He reported to the induction center at Northampton, Hampshire Co., Mass., with a group that included Allen Briggs of Cheshire, and Jacob Briggs of New Salem, Hampshire Co. In 1777 Hampshire Co., Mass., included Hampden, Hampshire, Franklin, and Berkshire Counties. The group inductd marched toward Bennington, Vt., but met the victorious American soldiers returning with British prisoners, and returned with them, service 7 days. In Oct. of 1777 he reported for service on the Northern line of 32 days. From the Census records it would appear that Zadok Briggs was about 18 yrs. of age at this time. There is no evidence for his parents. He could have been from Middleborough or East Taunton as were several Briggs families in the New Salem area.

Zadok Briggs was a resident of Leyden, Mass., in 1887 when he signed a petition to Gov. James Bowdicine of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts asking him to spare the life of Jason Parmenter of Bernardston, who was condemed to be hung for his part in "Shay's Rebellion." The reprieve was granted by the Governor. On 7 April 1888 his name appears in the Leyden Town records as "fence viewer" for the township.

In the 1790 Census of Leyden, Mass., Zadok Briggs was under 45 yrs. of age, with 2 males under 16 yrs., and 4 females. In 1800 he was a resident of the next Twp., Bernardston, with 3 males under 10 yrs., 1 male 10-16 y., 1 male 26-45 y; 1 female under 10 y., 2 females 10-16 y., 2 females 16-26 y., and 1 female 26-45 y. He sold his property in Bernardston in 1815 and the family moved by wagon to Washington Co., Ohio, where he d. Adams Twp., Washington Co., O., ab. Nov. 20, 1823. His will, exec. 26 Apr. 1822, was filed for prob. 24 Nov. 1823, and prob. 12 Dec. 1823; he md. ab. 1880? 1780 ? Sally ------; she d. Washington Co., O., 1826 and the property was distributed in 1828. No grave stones could be found for Zadok Briggs and his wife in Adams Twp.

While working in the gold fields in Amador Co., Francis Asbury Briggs dropped dead from Malaria contracted while crossing the Isthmus of Panama. Left alone the young boy intended to return to his home in Iowa, but was "shanghaied" on the San Francisco warf by a man gathering a group who wished to return to the East Coast. On the trip to the Isthmus, this man began to train them as an army and they learned that he intended to overthrow the government of Nicaragua. The men turned their guns on him and forced the ship to return to San Francisco Harbor. Decason

INTRODUCTION

The New Hampshire 1776 Census is an alphabetized listing of 9,348 males together with their place of residence and whether they were for or against the Revolutionary War. The original spellings of all names have been maintained as a service to researchers looking for any of these persons in other primary sources. The source of the census, the "New Hampshire Association Test of 1776", has long been out of print.[1] It therefore seems fitting in this bicentennial year to make available the most complete listing of the New Hampshire inhabitants of 1776.

The population of New Hampshire in 1776 was about 85,600. This estimate is based upon a 1775 population of 81,300 increasing into 1776 at the 5.3% growth rate experienced during the years 1773-1775.[2] If these assumptions are accurate, then this census represents from 44% to 66% of the New Hampshire population in 1776. (The 44% figure is obtained by multiplying the ratio of 4 people to every white male, aged 16 and over, reported in the 1790 census of New Hampshire by 9,348 and then dividing the answer by the estimated 1776 population.[3] A 66% estimate is based upon an average family size of 6 as a multiplicant of 9,348.[4]) In either event, the approximately 50% of New Hampshire towns whose returns are preserved in the State archives are a valuable contribution of the past. Table 1 lists those 88 towns that recorded the revolutionary association of every male inhabitant of lawful age except idiots, lunatics, and Negroes.[5]

An analysis of the 1776 census shows that 91.6% of the recorded persons gave their written assent to oppose the British invasion of the United American Colonies. Of those who did not sign the Association Test, only 1.4% refused on grounds of religion or conscience or other reasons not disloyal. Of the religious group there were 63 Quakers (.6%). The remaining 7% refused to sign without any explanation. A final item of academic interest was the extent of literacy. Only 86 persons (1%) among the 8,548 signers were unable to write their names.

Acknowledgement is extended to Professor Dennis Barlow at Worcester Polytechnic Institute for his programming advice and assistance. A special thanks also to Kenneth Biddle and my daughters, Jalene and Lanae Holbrook, for their technical assistance.

EXPLANATIONS

1. The fact that a birth, marriage, or death is recorded in Taunton does not prove that it occurred there, unless it is so stated in the record. When places other than Taunton and Massachusetts are named in the original records, they are given as they appear there; but when Taunton is named, the initial letter only is used, except in unusual phrases.

2. In all items from town records the original spelling is followed, and no attempt is made to correct errors appearing in the records.

3. A baptism is not printed, if it occurs within one year after the recorded date of birth of a child of the same name and parents or if it is clear that the child baptized is identical with the child of the birth record; but variations found in the baptismal record are added to the birth record.

4. The birth of a married woman is recorded under her maiden name, if it is known. But if the maiden name cannot be determined, the entry appears under the husband's name, with a dash enclosed in brackets, i. e., [———], to signify that the maiden name is unknown. If it is not known whether the surname is that of a married or unmarried woman, "? m." is placed in brackets after the Christian name.

5. Marriages and intentions of marriage are printed under the names of both parties. When both the marriage and intention of marriage are recorded, only the marriage record is printed; and where a marriage appears without the intention being recorded, it is designated with an asterisk.

6. Additional information which does not appear in the original text of an item, i. e., any explanation, query, inference, or difference shown in other entries of the record, is bracketed. Parentheses are used to show variations in the spelling of a name in the same entry, to indicate the maiden name of a wife, to enclose an imperfect portion of the original text, and to separate clauses in the original text.

7. The Taunton fire of 1838 destroyed the original town records. To replace them a copy of the early records of births, marriages, and deaths was made, under the direction of the town officials, from all original sources available, and this compilation has been used as the basis of the present printed volume.

8. The Vital Records of Rhode Island, compiled by James N. Arnold, contain many Taunton items, which have not been incorporated in this volume.

BRIGGS, CLEMENT [1621, Plymouth]

CLEMENT BRIGGS

ORIGIN: Southwark, Surrey
MIGRATION: 1621 in Fortune
FIRST RESIDENCE: Plymouth
REMOVES: Weymouth by 1630

OCCUPATION: Fellmonger.
EDUCATION: Made his mark to his deed of 8 October 1637 and deposition of 29 August 1638. Inventory included books valued at 6s.
ESTATE: In the 1623 Plymouth land division, "Clemente Brigges" was granted one acre "beyond the first brook to the wood westward" as a passenger on the Fortune [PCR 12:5]. In the 1627 Plymouth cattle division, "Clemont Briggs" was included in the company of John Howland [PCR 12:10].

On 8 October 1637 "Clement Briggs of Wessaguscus" sold to "John Browne of Plymouth ... four acres of land of the upper end of that lot of land that appertaineth unto me the said Clement Briggs and that the said John Browne doth also agree that the said Clement Briggs shall have for him & his heirs forever the like quantity of four acres of land out of the land of the said John Browne lying at the lower end and adjoining to the residue of the land of the aforesaid Clement Briggs at Joanes River" [PCR 12:22]. On 29 August 1639 Clement Briggs sold to "Mr. Rob[er]te Heeks one acre of land in the upper fall near the Second Brook" [PCR 12:34].

In a compilation of Weymouth landholding, probably prepared about 1643, Clement Briggs held two parcels of land: "ten acres in the easter neck first granted to him" and "two acres upon the neck at the ferry" [Weymouth Hist 1:190].

In his undated will, probated 24 October 1650, "Clemant Brigs of Waymouth" bequeathed to "my son Thomas my home lot at Plimouth 20 acres ... and my biggest iron pot"; to "my son Jonathan 3 acres of my land joining to John Rees land that is not broke up and to enter it when he is of the age of 18 years and when he is of the age of 21 years to have so much as will make the portion 3 acres one fourth part of all my lands in Waymouth and after the decease of my wife it is my will he shall have one fourth part more"; to "my son Clemat my housing and the other half of my land in Waymouth and to enter it when he is of the age of 21 years"; to "my sons Thom[as], David, John, Rememb[er] my other land at Plimouth or in Plimouth jointly and equally amongst them; "one year after Clem[en]t do enter to the foresaid land he shall give his brother Rememb[er] 20s. and John 10s. and ... Jonathan shall give 10s. to his brother David and to brother Thom[as] 10s. in one year after he do enter to half my land"; wife to be executor and John Rogers and Robert Tucker overseers [SPR Case #101]. (This will was not recorded until the nineteenth century, at which time the copyist misread Remember as Edmund [SPR NS 1:456].)

The inventory of the estate of Clement Briggs, taken on 23 February 1648[/9?] and presented to court on 28 July 1659, totalled £65 7s., of which £36 was real estate: "one dwelling house and old barn," £4; "17 acres of planting land adjoining to the said house," £18; "one share of upland upon the eastward neck," £5; "3 acres near James Smith's house," £2; "one acre of salt marsh upon the westward neck near the ferry," £4; "about an acre of marsh more on the eastward neck," £2; and "land in Plimouth and Plimoth Pattent," £1 [SPR 3:151-52, Case #101].

On 7 June 1659 Plymouth court granted to "Thomas Briggs, son of Clement Briggs, deceased," one hundred fifty acres of land and twenty acres of meadow "in the way to Deadum from Taunton" [PCR 3:164].

On 8 June 1664 "Phineas Pratte and the Elder Bates, in the behalf of the children of Clement Briggs," not having "had their proportions of land with others of this jurisdiction formerly called purchasers or old comers," asking for consideration, Plymouth court granted "unto the said Phineas Pratt and unto two of the said Clement Briggs his sons, viz:, David Briggs and Remember Briggs, three hundred and fifty acres" of land in Plymouth Colony near the Massachusetts Bay line "near unto Waymouth," assigning two-thirds of the grant to Pratt and the other third to the sons of Clement Briggs [PCR 4:68].

On 19 March 1671 twelve acres of marsh land were laid out to "the children of Clement Briggs," by order of court 29 October 1668, adjoining "their Great Lot" [PCLR 3:214; PCR 5:5].

In her will of 13 November 1683, probated 11 August 1691, "Elizabeth Briggs of Weymouth" bequeathed to "my son David" (£10, brass kettle, brass pot, and great Bible), to "my grandchild Clement Briggs" (£15, if he renounces further claims on estate), to "my son Remember Briggs" (remainder of estate, he to be executor); in a codicil of 11 November 1685 Elizabeth Briggs noted that her son David had died since the making of her will, and reassigned David's bequest of £10 to her grandson Clement Briggs, and the rest of David's legacy to Remember Briggs [SPR Case #1873].

BIRTH: By about 1600 (the deposition of 1638 implies that in 1616 Briggs had already been a servant of Mr. Samuel Latham for a few years).
DEATH: Weymouth by 23 February 1648[/9?] (date of inventory).
MARRIAGE: (1) By 1 March 1630/1 Joan Allen (1 March 1630/1: "Mr. Tho: Stoughton, constable of Dorchester, is fined £5 for taking upon him to marry Clement Briggs & Joane Allen ..." [MBCR 1:83]); she died by 1640. (On 6 March 1637/8 at a Quarter Court at Cambridge Clement Briggs gave a bond of £10 for the appearance of his wife at the next court; at the same court Arthur Warren was presented "for keeping company with Clement Briggs's wife, [which] was found to be true" [MBCR 1:219]. At a Quarter Court on 5 June 1638 Clement Brigg's wife was "enjoined not to come into the company of Arthur Warren" [MBCR 1:233].)

(2) By 1640 Elizabeth _____; she died between 11 November 1685 (date of codicil) and 11 August 1691 (probate of will), probably at Weymouth.
CHILDREN (all born Weymouth):

With first wife

i THOMAS, b. 14 June 1633 [NEHGR 8:348]; m. Ann _____ [BrPR 2:65].

ii JONATHAN, b. 14 June 1635 [NEHGR 8:348]; m. by about 1664 Experience _____ [TAG 33:83-86].

With second wife

iii DAVID, b. 23 August 1640 [NEHGR 8:348]; d. between 13 November 1683 (date of mother's will) and 11 November 1685 (codicil to that will), apparently without issue.

iv CLEMENT, b. 1 January 1642[/3] [NEHGR 8:348]; m. by 1669 Hannah Packard [SPR 7:1-2].

v REMEMBER, b. say 1645; m. by 1686 Mary _____ (eldest child of "Remember and Mary" b. Weymouth 4 November 1686).

vi JOHN, b. say 1647; named in his father's will; no further record. (He is not named in the will of Elizabeth Briggs, which might be evidence that he was not her son, but he was almost certainly dead before she wrote her will; if he had been a son of Clement Briggs by his first wife, he should have appeared in the Weymouth vital records for the 1630s and early 1640s. There is no evidence that he is any one of the men by the name of John Briggs later appearing in New England.)

ASSOCIATIONS: On 29 August 1638 "Clement Briggs of Weymouth fellmonger" deposed that "about two and twenty years since this deponent then dwelling with one Mr. Samuel Lathame in Barmundsey Street in Southwarke, a fellmonger, and one Thomas Harlow then also dwelling with Mr. Rob[er]te Heeks in the same street, a fellmonger, the said Harlow and this deponent had often conference together how many pelts each of their masters pulled a week." Briggs goes on to tell in detail how many pelts had been handled a week "for the space of three or four years," possibly implying that he had in 1616 been servant to Samuel Latham since about 1612. The deposition was apparently taken at the request of ROBERT HICKS, who may have been involved in a lawsuit in England [PCR 12:34-35].

CLEMENT BRIGGS-1, the first by that name to come to America arrived on the second vessel to reach the New England shores; he landed at Plymouth, Mass. unexpectedly from the small 55-ton ship FORTUNE, on Nov. 19, 1621, with 34 others and among its passengers were Elder Wm. Brewster's eldest son Jonathan, John Winslow, Gov. Thos. Prence, Wm. Palmer. They brought with them a Patent, from the New England Company, taken out in the name of John Pierce, one of the London stockholders, which covered the section in which they were to locate.

Now the Leyden Company of Pilgrims, before they embarked in the Mayflower, for this country formed a partnership in trade with some London merchants, commonly called "Merchant Adventurers". After signing the original contract, some of the London merchants withdrew and Robert Cushman, to prevent others from withdrawing, agreed with Weston to strike out that part of the contract allowing "each colonist to work for himself two days in each week" and in its place insert "that all labor should belong to the Company." This they refused to do without the consent of those they had left behind at Leyden, and Weston refused to deliver their clearance money and the Pilgrims after selling most of their goods to supply this money sailed for America, with their stores much depleted, which resulted in much suffering and hardship through the following two winters. Now Robert Cushman, who was in charge of the little company aboard the FORTUNE, came to persuade the Mayflower Pilgrims to sign this contract with Weston; in this he failed. The original contract was for seven years at which time all property was to be divided. In 1626, the Colonists bought the London Company's interest.

years:--"The destruction of the early records of Newport and North Kingston, has destroyed probably any chance of connecting the Briggs families of Rhode Island with their English ancestors or with the families of the same name in New England. In Rhode Island alone there seem to have been three distinct families and over the line in Mass. as many more. Mr. Sam Briggs paid little attention to the R. I. Briggs families beyond what information he could pick up in the printed records, and what facts he could learn from persons by the name of Briggs whose names he happened upon. Savage cannot be followed because he made a grave mistake in connecting the Kingston family with the Portsmouth, R. I. family. His statement is proven to be wrong both by wills and deeds. I do not feel sure that Mr. Austin is correct in placing the father of Ebenezer Briggs, as the son of John Briggs-1 and Frances. I am inclined to think that, from the age of John-1, father of Ebenezer, when his children were born, the dates at which those children were married, that he was really. John-3, son of John-2, whose records have been destroyed. "I think without doubt that the Thomas and Daniel whom Austin gives to John-1, and Frances conditionally, belong in another family, and that Mr. Austin is in error."

(256) CLEMENT BRIGGS, the first Briggs emigrant to America and progenitor of a considerable proportion of those who bear the name in America now was probably born about 1600. We got our first view of him in a section of what is now a part of London in the District called Southwark, where he was a "Felmonger" or tanner and dealer in hides. This information is fortunately preserved in the Plymouth Colony Records, Vol. XII: 34, 35. On the 29th of August 1638, he acknowledged the sale of some land at Plymouth, Mass. to Robert Heeks (Hicks) and on the same date made the following interesting and curious deposition, the object of which is not at all clear.

"The deposecion of Clement Briggs of Waymouth, felmonger, taken at New Plymouth the XXIX day of August in the fourteen--the year of the now Raigne of our Souvaraigne Lord Charles (1638) by the Grace of God of England &c. before Thomas Prence of New Plymouth, gentleman Gouvernour and William Bradford of the same, Gentleman assistant of the said gouernment &c. This deponant deposeth & Sayth that about two and twenty yeares since, (1616) this deponent then dwelling with one Mr. Samuell Lanthame in Barmundsey (Bermondsey) Streets in Southwarke a felmonger and one Thomas Harlow then also dwelling with Mr. Roberte Heeks (Hicks came with Clement Briggs to Plymouth on the same ship) in the same street a fellmonger, the said Harlow and this deponant had often conference how many pelts eich of their masters pulled a week. And this deponant deposeth and sayth That the said Roberte Heeks did pull three hundred pelts a week and diuers tymes six or seuen hundred & more a week in the killinge season, wch was the most part of the yeare (except the tyme of lent) for the space of three or foure yeares. And that the said Roberte Heeks sould his sheeps pelts at that time for fourty shillings a hundred to Mr. Arnold Allard, whereas this deponents Mr. Samuel Lathame sould his pelts for fifty shilling P. C. to ye same man at the same tyme and Mr. Heeks pelts were much better ware.

Signing with a mark was at that time common and not necessarily evidence that the signer could not write. Clement and his wife both left books, see his inventory and her will below.

Clement must have been born about 1598 according to his own statement. (Russell Briggs, A 200) But I have been unable to find this "statement."' The following reference almost surely refers to Clement Briggs and it is very desirable that it be looked up in England, as it will probably shed some light on Clement's reasons for coming to Plymouth Colony.

Index to Chancery Proceedings. Bundle B 6, Briggs et al contra Latham et al. James I. (1603-1625). The Parish Church Registers of "St. George the Martyr" 1602 ff. of Southwark, London and St. Thomas 1614 ff. should be searched for records of Clement Briggs. St. Savior's Southwark, Surrey and St. Mary Magdalene, Bermondsey contain no reference to Clement Briggs but the following Briggses are named who may be suspected of being his father. Richard, John and William.

References to a Samuel Latham occur in the Registers of St. Mary Magdalene, Bermondsey, 1548-1609 as follows:

Also, daughter of Samuel Latham, christened 30 Aug. 1606 and buried 4 Sept. 1606.

Samuel, son of Samuel Latham, christened 17 Jan. 1607 and buried 23 Jan. 1607.

that the will of Alice Wade made 1610 proved 1616 directs that her body is to be buried in Billesdon, Suffolk and mentions a Prudence Latham wife of Samuel Latham.

References to a Robert Hicks occur in the above Register as follows: Thos., son of Robert Hickes christened 19 Feb. 1603 and buried 23 April, 1604.

John, son of Robert Hickes, christened 12 Oct. 1605.

Sara, daughter of Robert Hickes, christened 25 Oct. 1607.

Robert Hicks was a leather dresser in London and supposed brother to Sir Baptist Hicks a mercer of London, knighted 1605 and afterwards became Viscount Camden. He came in the Fortune and his wife Margaret and 3 children came in the Ann in 1623. He married in England Elizabeth Morgan and had children; Elizabeth who m. John Dickarson, Thomas, John and Stephen. He married second, Margaret Winslow and by her had children: Samuel, Ephraim who m. 1649, Elizabeth, daughter of John Howland, Lydia who m. Edward Bangs and Phebe who m. 1635, George Watson. Another son Daniel m. Elizabeth Hanmore. Robert Hicks d. 1647.

Clement Briggs arrived in Plymouth, Mass. in the 55-ton ship "Fortune", 9 Nov. 1621. The "Fortune", Thos. Barton master, was the second ship to come to the new colony. Governor Bradford in his History of the Plymouth Plantation says: "In November, about that time twelfe month that themselves came, ther came in a small ship to them unexpected or looked for, in which came Mr. Cushman (so much spoken of before) and with him 35 persons to remaine and live in the plantation. Most of them were lusty young men, and many of them wild enough, who little considered whither or aboute what they wente. The plantation was glad of this addition of strength, but could have wished that many of them had been of beter condition. I shall remember one passage more, rather of mirth then of waight. One the day called Christmas-day, the Gov. caled them out to worke, (as was used,) but the most of this new-company excused themselves and said it wente against their conscious to work on that day. So the Govr. tould them that if they made it a mater of conscience, he would spare them till they were better informed. So he led-away the rest and left them; but when they came home at noone from their worke, he found them in the streets at play, openly; some pitching the barr, and some at stoole-ball, and shuch like sports. So he went to them, and tooke away their implements, and tould them that was against his conscience that they should play and others worke." A ship Fortune possibly the same ship brought (according to "Proceedings of the Surveyors' Association of West New Jersey" P. 177) the first European Visitors to Little Egg Harbor, N. J. It was commanded by the Dutch Captain Cornelius Jacobsen Mey in 1614 during the season for birds' eggs (May or June). They gathered immense quantities of gulls' and other meadow birds' eggs.

According to the Plymouth Colony Records (XII. 5) Clemente Brigges was allotted one acre of land in 1623. "These lye beyond the first brooke to the wood westward." and 22 May 1627 (Plymouth Colony Records XII:9) he received one of the four "heyfers" which were brought over in the ship "Jacob". 5 Mch. 1639-40 he was named in the records as one of the 58 "purchasers" and "Old Comers" of New Plymouth. (Plymouth Colony Records 11.177).

Some time between 1627 and 1630 he removed to Dorchester, where he married in 1630 or 1631 Joan Allen, for officiating at which ceremony, Thomas Stoughton, the constable was fined œ5 at the March Court in 1631. (28 Sept. 1630 "Thomas

Stoughton was chosen constable of Dorchester to continue for a year and after till new be chosen.") The Records of the Governor and Company of the Massachusetts Bay in New England, Vol. 1.83:

"A Court of Assistants, holden att Boston 1th of March 1630-31. Mr. Tho: Stoughton, Constable of Dorchester, is fyned v œ for takeing upon him to Marry Clemt Briggs & Joane Allen, & to be imprisoned till hee hath paid his fyne." but 6 Sept. 1638, the fine referred to was discharged. In Bradford's letter of 1631 to John Winthrop he is mentioned as having removed to Dorchester. From Dorchester he removed to Weymouth, before 1633, where his oldest son Thomas, was born in 1633. In the Weymouth Records the dates of birth of 4 of his sons are given: Thomas, b. 14-4 (June) 1633, Jonathan b. 14-4 (June)--1635, David b. 23-6 (Aug.) 1640, Clement b. 1-11-1642 (Jan. 1, 1642 new style.)

He next is mentioned as violating a law forbidding settlers to allow Indians in their houses. "At a Court, holden at Newe Towne October 6th, 1634 Clemt Briggs is ffined Xs for entertaineing an Indean without leaue, & is cnioyned forthwith to discharge himselfe of him." (Record of the Gov. Mass. 1:132)

"At a Generall Court, held at Boston, the 6th day of the 7th Month 1638. Dicto, (6 Oct. 1634) Clement Brigs, being fined 10 shs, is discharged by the Court." (Rec. of the Gov. Mass. 1:244.)

The next reference to him in the record is the Plymouth Colony Records 12:22 when as a resident of Wessaguscus (the name justly previously having been changed to Weymouth) in consideration of five shillings he traded 8 Oct. 1637 four acres in the upper end of his lot of land to John Browne for four acres of John Browne's land "Lying at the lower end and adjoyneing to the residue of the land of the aforesaid Clement Briggs at Joanes Riuer." Signed by the "marke of Clement M. Briggs." Jones River was 3 miles north of Plymouth and is now in Kingston, Mass.

Savage, a descendant of Clement Briggs, in his Genealogical Dictionary, published 1862 which gives notes of 3 generations of those who came to New England before May 1692 makes the following observation on Clement's wife:

"Grievous is our feeling of regret at finding the Court in June 1638, led to forbid the wife to come into the company of Arthur Warren, as we are compelled to fear the marriage was imprudent." The records (Rec. Gov. Mass. 1:219) are as follows: "At a Quarter Court, held at Newetowne the 6th day of the first month (March) 1637-1638. Clement Briggs is bound in Xœ for his wifes appearance at the next Quarter Court. The presentment of Arthur Warren, for keeping company with Clement Briggs wife, was found to bee true."

1.233 "At a Courte of Assistants, held at Cambridge, the 5th day of the 4th Mo. anno 1638, being a Qrter Courte. Clement Brigs his wife is enioyned not to come into the Company of Arthur Warren."[0] ø Arthur Warren was of Weymouth. He was married soon after 1638. (Frank V. Wright, Salem, Mass.) (Owned 4 lots in Weymouth in Feb. 1651/2. Land bounded on the east and south with Hingham line, on north with land of Walter Harris, the common on the west. A daughter Abigail Warren was born 27 Oct. 1640 and married 10 May 1661 John Wright and died 6 Apr. 1726 in Waburn.

29th Aug. 1638 he acknowledged the sale of one acre of land at Plymouth to Robert Hicks and on same day he made the affidavit (as set forth above) before Gov. Thomas Prence regarding his work in Southwarke. Prence also came in the Fortune and had land in Weymouth. He was governor in 1634, 1638 and 1657 to 1673. It was doubtless the land allotted to him in 1623. Plymouth Col. Rec. XII. 34, 35. "Memorandum the XXIXth day of August 1638 that Clement Briggs acknowledged that for good and valuable consideration hee hath sould vnto Mr. Roberte Heeks one acre of land in the vpper fall neere the second Brooke & all his right title and interest into the same To have and to hold the said acre of land vnto the said Roberte Heeks his heires and Assignes for euer to there onely proper use and behoofe foreuer. ø48ø--Prince Govr. 1638." Then follows the deposition referred to above.

The next reference gives us no light on his doings, but seems to vindicate his honesty in some transaction. Rec. Gov. Mass. 1:247. "A quarter Courte, houlden at Boston, the 4th day of the 10th Month anno 1638. Clement Brigs was not found guilty of extortion, & so was discharged." The next two references in the Plymouth Colony Records rever to his land near Jones River. 1.123. 1639, 3 June. Land granted to John Browne (referred to above) bounded as follows: "All that parcell of land lying on the south side Joanes Riuer rangeing along the said riuer vp to the great swamp called Joanes Riuer Swampe, the landes of Clement Briggs and Mr. Thomas Prence lying on some part of the south side thereof." 1.163. 5 Oct. 1640. "The Court doth order, that Mr. John Howland, Francis Cooke, Josuah Pratt and Thomas Cushman shall range the bounds of the landes betwixt Mr. Thomas Prence and Clement Briggs at Joanes Riuer, and to set them forth according to the auncient boundes & Markes formerly made betwixt them."

Another reference in the Plymouth records (XII:133) mentions his land at Joanes' River 3 Feb. 1648." Mr. Edmond ffreeman senior of the towne of sandwidg in the coliny of New Plymouth in New England in America gentleman doth acnowlidg that for and in consideration of the full sum of three score and fifteene. pound Sterling to him alredy payed by Mr. Thomas Willit and Mr. William Paddy * * * sould an house and land at Joaneses Riuer sometimes apertaineing vnto Mr. Isaac Allerton being bounded by the lands of Mis ffuller on the one side and with the lands of Clement Briggs and Christopher Winter on the other side the nether end buting vupon Joanes River aforesaid and so extending it self in length vp into the woods * * *."

Isaac Allerton about this time was in Manhattan (N. Y.) or New Haven and possibly may not have ever lived on this land but Clement Briggs was doubtless one of the numerous victims of his promotion schemes as shown by the following from the Plymouth Colony Records 11.101. 2 June 1646.

Before he died in 1648 he had another wife, Elizabeth, as shown by a deposition on the inventory of his estate and her Will, etc. It is not improbable that she may have married Clement about 1639 as in her Will (quoted below) she uses the word "my" in reference to sons David (who was born 1640), grandson Clement and son Remember and does not mention other children.

The following abstract of his will on file at Boston in the Suffolk County Registry of Probate, dated 12-23, 1648 and proved (?) 24 Oct. 1650 is from the New England Historic Genealogical Record, 7:233, with the correction "Remember" in place of "Remond".

The estate was appraised by Robert Tucker, 23 last month (Feb.) 1648.

Testifyed before Mr. Bellingham 24-8-1650 upon oath. William Aspinwall, Recorder.

The envelope on the will was by a blunder of the Clerk labeled "Mary Mouth" for Weymouth, the residence of the testator. Also his inventory was labeled "Osomunt Bray"--full evidence of knowledge by the scrivenor of the old writing.

In the History of Southampton, Suffolk County, Long Island N. Y. it is stated that a lot in Southampton was granted to Elizabeth Briggs in 1651 for 16 shillings and May 10, 1652, Elizabeth Briggs, widow, was granted land by the Town. Reference to David Briggs (2b3) makes it really certain that this was the Elizabeth Briggs the wife of Clement (1b1).

The sons Remember, David and Clement were probably and John possibly by his second wife Elizabeth. His sons settled in Taunton or nearby excepting John who perhaps settled in Halifax, Mass. or Kingstown, R. I. (Hubert G. Briggs believes in Kingstown. Richards in his Memoir of Gov. George N. Briggs (who was a descendant of John Briggs of Kingstown, R. I.) assumes that he was descended from Clement Briggs. As far as I can find there is no reason for believing that Richard Briggs of Taunton (who married Rebecca Hoskins in 1662) was a son of Clement except that a certain Thomas Briggs, presumably Clement's son was joint owner of lands in Norton and Mansfield with Richard. No Richard is mentioned in the list of births of Clement's children in Weymouth down to 1643 or in Clement's Will and Richard of Taunton must have been of reasonable age when married in 1662. He has been confused by some genealogists with Remember but in 1668, the year that Remember applied to the Court for meadow land granted his father's children in addition to former tract, in Weymouth, near Bridgewater, Richard was engaged in settling Norton (the so-called North Purchase of Taunton). Therefore I have entered but six sons in the records as ##2b1-6 and very improbably a daughter Elizabeth #2b7.

2b1. THOMAS (of CLEMENT 1 b1) b. 14 June 1633 at Weymouth. D. before 1st April (the date of his inventory) according to . . . . But see under 3b3 which is contradictory and the following is more probable. He died between 1st April 1696, 16 March 1696 when he deeded land to son Samuel. 5th May 1696 Samuel youngest son of Thomas Briggs of North Purchase, administered his estate, the two elder sons refusing. The settlement of estate of Thomas dated 5 May 1696 gives his lands to sons Thomas, Daniel and Samuel. Eldest son Thomas is to have 18 acres where he has begun to make a settlement, Samuel to have father's dwelling house and Daniel to have another third part.

Susanna wife of John Cobb.

Received on 7 June 1659, 150 acres of land on the way to "Deadum" (Dedham). "150 Acres is granted to Thomas Briggs son of Clement Briggs, deceased, and 20 acres of Meddow, if it may bee had in the place desired, which is in the way to Deadum from Taunton, betwixt a pond and the Mill river which comes to Taunton, betwixt Taunton and Massapaugh Pond." Now Plymouth Records. 3L164.

This land was in North Purchase of Taunton (Norton) and he was one of the first settlers there, if not the first. "The second parcel of this Territory not included in the North Purchase was that owned by Thomas 2 Briggs. He was a son of Clement 1 Briggs, who was grandfather to the first settler of Easton of that name. 3.

Was of Taunton in 1668.

Was joint owner with Richard Briggs of lands in Norton and Mansfield. The northeast part of the North Purchase is now Mansfield and his will refers to him as of North Purchase. (Mansfield & Norton were one town until 1770.) Was one of the first settlers in the North Purchase. (Wm. L. Chaffin.)

He or another Thomas is referred to in 1681 in Taunton.

He left descendants in Taunton, Norton and Mansfield. (R. 15).

In 1643 no Briggses are named in a list of Taunton who were between ages of 16 and 60.

(In 1700 there was a Thomas Briggs "Grand Senior" in the first military company of Taunton.)

2b2. JONATHAN (of Clement 1b1) b. 14th June 1635 at Weymouth. D. 1688/9 in Taunton. M. Experience....

She survived her husband and with her eldest son Jonathan was granted administration (p. 1/2 Vol. 1 Bristol Co. Probate Records.) See below. She died after Feb. 8, 1698/9. Seven other sons, minors and five daughters are mentioned in the proceedings tho the names of the daughters are not there recorded. Two of their names are mentioned in the will of their brother Nathaniel, whom see.

In 1708 (the widow having probably died) an order of the Court for a division of the estate was carried out and the sons names there given were as follows: Jonathan, David, John, Thomas, Amos, Benjamin, Ebenezer and Nathaniel.

Another list adds Daniel.

Jonathan is referred to as living in Taunton in 1662, 1668 and 1672. He was a purchaser of the North Purchase in 1668 now known as Easton. (1st June 1668).

In 1682 his name appears among those who bore arms to church.

educated at Litchfield, in public and private schools. He began to study law in the office of Chief Justice Andrews, and continued with Mr. Hickox, a prominent lawyer of Litchfield. Having been admitted to the bar in 1884, he has practiced in Litchfield since then. In addition to the law, he has a large real estate business. He is a justice of the peace and has been on the grand jury and the school board. He is a member of St. Paul's Lodge, No. 11, Free and Accepted Masons; of Darius Chapter, No. 16, Royal Arch Masons, and of Buel Council, Royal and Select Masters. In religion he is an Episcopalian and in politics a Democrat. He has been auditor. He married, May 12, 1900, Marion, born November 22, 1863, daughter of Charles and Lucy (Merriman) Perkins, of Litchfield. They have no children.

BROWNE Charles Browne, immigrant ancestor, was born in England and became an early settler in Rowley, Massachusetts. He had a house lot there in 1647 and other lands, to which he added later. That he was a man of education is proven by the fact that he was for a time the town's school-master. In 1661 he was granted a lot, "to beate the drum for the benefit of the towne." His name appears in a list of freeholders of Rowley, January 28, 1677. It is also recorded as "Br Browne" among the church members in full communion, and "Goodwife Browne" united March 7, 1671. The wife of Charles Browne was Mary, daughter of William and Margaret Acy. Their marriage occurred 14-8mo.-1647, in Rowley. Charles Browne died in 1687, and was buried December 16. His wife died December 12, 1683. They had eight sons and one daughter.

(II) Nathaniel Brown, son of Charles Browne, was born in Rowley, Massachusetts, May 20, 1660. He shared in the distribution of his father's estate and received various grants of land. On June 29, 1707, he sold his homestead to Jonathan Wheeler, of Newbury, and soon thereafter removed to Groton, Connecticut. A deed of land in Groton, January 8, 1707-08, expressly states that he was "late of Rowley," and he and his wife were dismissed from the Rowley church to Groton, June 29, 1707. He purchased lands in Groton and was soon made an inhabitant. His home was at Poquonock Cove, where he bought two hundred acres of Gershom Rice. The town called upon him for service in various capacities and he was an honored townsman. In his will, proved June 24, 1731, he mentions sons and daughters, among them his son Nathaniel. His wife, whom he married in Rowley, June 4, 1685, was the daughter of David and Sarah (Wise) Wheeler. David Wheeler was the son of John Wheeler, and was born about 1625, in England, coming to New England in the ship "Confidence," in 1638. Sarah Wise was the daughter of Humphrey Wise, of Ipswich.

(III) Nathaniel (2), son of Nathaniel (1) and Mary (Wheeler) Brown, was baptized in Rowley in September, 1690, and was aged seventeen when his father removed to Groton. On May 30, 1717, after his marriage to Anna Haynes, which occurred July 11, 1715, he bought land at Poquonock Cove, but, March 30, 1722, he bought a one-third interest in a tract of two hundred acres in the north part of Groton (Ledyard). In his subsequent life he bought and sold lands quite extensively, acquiring finally a large tract, which he bequeathed to his decendants. His homestead was on the road from Mystic to Norwich, about three-quarters of a mile north of where the "Church Hill meeting house" once stood. He was probably identified with the Separatist movement and his son Nathaniel was ordained a minister of that sect in 1751. Nathaniel Brown died in July, 1770, aged eighty years, and his wife shortly afterwards. She was the daughter of Josiah and Elizabeth (Starke) Haynes, and was born November 3, 1696, in Groton. They had six sons and two daughters.

(IV) Ebenezer, son of Nathaniel (2) Brown, was born in 1725, in Groton, died there in July, 1799, aged seventy-four. The deeds passed in the settlement of his father's estate establish his line of descent. His homestead was originally a part of his father's tract. He was probably the Ebenezer Brown who served, April 6 to December 4, 1761, in Major John Durkee's company of Norwich. He deeded, during his life, lands to several of his sons, among them, November 13, 1786, a tract to his son John Brown. The wife of Ebenezer Brown was Ruth, daughter of Captain John Jr. and Sarah (Copp) Morgan, who was born April 9, 1733, in Groton, and married in 1750. She died in March, 1806. Her grandfather was Captain John Morgan, of Groton, a son of John Morgan and grandson of James Morgan, ancestor of many distinguished persons of that name. Her grandmother was Ruth, daughter of Benjamin and Mary (Picket) Shapley, the latter being a daughter of John and Ruth (Brewster) Picket, daughter of Jonathan Brewster and granddaughter of Elder William Brewster, of the "Mayflower."

(V) John, son of Ebenezer Brown, states in his application for a pension that he was born

The Planting of a New England Town

The Puritan exodus to New England began with the sailing of the "Mayflower" and the Pilgrims were, as Bradford says, "by the blessing of God the first beginers and (in a sort) the foundation of all the Plantations and Colonies in New England." The great migration however occurred during the years 1629-1640, in which Charles I governed without a parliament. When the Long Parliament met this migration practically came to an end, a fact which becomes at once apparent to the student of genealogy.

We are not concerned with the causes which led to this migration nor with those who left England at this time and founded colonies in other parts of the New World. We are interested in the planting of one of the towns of the Bay Colony, the type of people who came and their purpose in coming.

They were mostly from the middle classes, "men of substance, will-making families," and so exclusively English that, according to Savage, at the close of the eighteenth century more than ninety-eight out of one hundred of the New England people could trace their ancestry to England.

John Fiske, in his "Beginnings of New England," says, "They were drawn from the sturdiest part of English stock" and "In all history there has been no other instance of colonization so exclusively effected by picked and chosen men." Again, "It was the simple truth that was spoken by William Stoughton in his election sermon of 1668, when he said, 'God sifted a whole nation that he might send choice grain over into the wilderness.' "

Edward Johnson, in his "Wonder-Working Providence of Zion's Saviour in New England," 1654, writes, "The Lord Christ intends to achieve greater matters by this little handful than the world is aware of."

The compelling motive for their coming was to gain freedom of worship for themselves, according to their own interpretation of the teachings of the Bible:

> "Banished from paths he fain had trod,
> He turned his bleak face toward the West,
> To search the wilderness for rest—
> Banished from man, at home with God."

It was not, as has often been said, to establish a place of religious liberty; for religious liberty, as we now enjoy it, was the result rather than the intention of their coming.

In the summer of 1638, toward the close of the great migration, the ship "John" of London sailed, according to tradition, from Hull for New England. On board were about twenty families, nearly all of whom were from Yorkshire, under the leadership of Rev. Ezekiel Rogers, formerly pastor of the church at Rowley, Yorkshire, near Hull. He says in his will, "for refusing to read the accursed book which allowed sports on God's Holy Sabbath or Lord's Day, I was suspended and by it and many other sad signs of the times driven, with many of my hearers, into New England." Torre's list of rectors of Rowley shows that Ezekiel Rogers was installed 21 February, 1620, and that his successor, Thomas White, was installed 6 June, 1638.

It is probable that the following persons came with Mr. Rogers: Thomas Barker, Constance Crosby, Thomas Elithorp and Francis Lambert, from Holme-on-Spalding-Moor, a few miles from Rowley; Edward Carleton, from Barmston; Humphrey Reyner, from Gildersome; William Acy, from Eppleworth, near Hull; Hugh Chaplin, Maximilian and Joseph Jewett, from Bradford; Robert and John Haseltine, from Bideford in Devon; Ezekiel and Jeremiah Northend, cousins (both minors) and probably William Jackson were from Rowley; William and John Boynton, Jane Brocklebank, Thomas Nelson, John Spofford and Thomas Tenney.

Among the passengers on the "John" was the Rev. Jose Glover, "the Father of American Printing," with his family and his assistants, Stephen Daye and sons, who brought the first printing press to English North America. Glover "reached port before the ship made land," but the press was eventually set up and operated by Daye. The ship dropped anchor in Salem Harbor, but we know little of the whereabouts of the passengers during the next few months. They probably stayed in Salem, Boston or Ipswich. During the winter Mr. Rogers asked leave of Mr. Wilson's church in Boston, for himself and his people, to commune with them, and the request being granted, he made a statement of the religious position of his company.

About this time a company was being formed for the purpose of joining the new colony at Quinnipiack, now New Haven. Mr. Rogers was urged to join and appears to have thought favorably of it, but later decided not to go. Before winter was over, "after consulting with the ministers," he requested of the General Court a tract of land between Ipswich and Newbury, which was granted. The settlement was begun in the spring of 1639. "13 March, 1638-9, M^{r} Ezechi: Rogers, M^{r} John Phillips, & their company had granted them 8 miles every way into the countrey, where it may not trench vpon other plantations already settled." Part of this land had been preempted by Ipswich and Newbury settlers and the newcomers were forced to purchase from them at an expense of £800. The purchase money was contributed by those who were able and in the granting of the house lots the amount subscribed determined the size of the lot.* Those who were unable to contribute were, with one exception, given lots of an acre and a half.

* This distinction becomes more apparent when the rule of assignment of "rights" called "gates" in the commons is known. A one-and-one-half-acre lot was entitled to one and one-half gates; a two-acre lot to four and one-half gates; a three-acre lot to thirteen and one-half gates; a four-acre lot to twenty-two and one-half gates, and a six-acre lot to forty-five gates. A gate, or ox-gate or ox-gang in early English tenures was as much land as an ox could till; it might contain meadow, pasture and wood necessary for such tillage and varied in different counties and also according to quality, being from twelve to fifteen acres. In the old law Latin an ox-gang was "una bovata terrae." We find in early English

The company consisted of fifty-nine families, having been increased during the winter by about forty families, many of whom had preceded Mr. Rogers to New England. Among them were the families of Mr. William Bellingham, a brother of Gov. Richard Bellingham, Jane Grant, Thomas Mighill, and William Stickney. The larger part of them were, or soon became, freemen, which, previous to 1664, meant that they were members of some Congregational Church, had taken the freeman's oath, and were thereby entitled to vote. A town government was set up, although of the general affairs of the town nothing remains of record before August, 1647.

House lots were laid out along the Town Brook and its tributaries and at least three streets named: Wethersfield, for the birthplace of Mr. Rogers at Wethersfield, Essex; Holme, for Holme-on-Spalding-Moor; Bradford, for the home of the Jewetts. Holme Street is now known as Central Street; the larger part of Bradford Street and what was formerly Narrow Lane, is now Haverhill Street; Wethersfield Street retains its early name.

The training field and the cemetery were set apart at the time of settlement. The watch-house and later the powder-house stood on the elevation in the rear of Elder Humphrey Reyner's lot.

In the records of the Bay Colony, 13 March, 1638-9, the settlement is referred to as the "New Plantation." By act of the General Court, "4-7 mo., 1639, M^r Ezechi: Rogers plantation shalbee called Rowley."

The first church, the sixteenth in the Bay Colony, was organized 3 December, 1639, with Rev. Ezekiel Rogers as pastor. The first, second and third meeting-houses, built respectively in 1639, 1697 and 1749, stood on what was then called the common, now the site of the Center School-house. A public school is first mentioned in the Town Records in 1654, but it is probable one existed before that date.

13 May, 1640, "Rowley is granted two years immunity from publike charge in regard of their great losse, & charge by purchasing of land, & hindrance of planting last yeare. It is declared that Rowley bounds is to bee 8 miles from their meeting-house, in a straight line, & then a crose line diameter from Ipswich Ryver to Merrimack Ryver, where it doth not piudice any former grant."

This year a grist-mill and a saw-mill were built by Mr. Thomas Nelson, and in 1643, John Pearson built a fulling-mill, the first in the English Colonies.

The earliest town record extant is as follows: "The suruey of the Towne of Rowley taken the tenth of the eleauenth Anno Dñi 1643, by M^r. Thomas Nelson, M^r Edward Carleton, Humphrey Reyner, ffrancis Parrat, appointed for that purpose by the freman of the said Towne who also are to Regester the seuerall lotts of all the Inhabitants granted and laid out, and to leaue theirof a Coppy with the recorder of the Shire accordinge to the order of the Generall Court. books that eight ox-gangs made a plow-gang or plow-land called "carucata terrae," and eight plow-gangs made a knight's fee, or about a thousand acres. In Rowley the rights in the commons, or land not laid out, were always expressed by the term "gates."

the house Lotts in such seuerall streets, as are formerly mentioned in the book." This survey was taken more than three years after the incorporation but it is probable the lots were apportioned shortly after the settlement, perhaps even before the incorporation, 4 September, 1639. It is quite likely that the members of the committee above mentioned were those who did so apportion.

By 1645, sixteen additional families had arrived in Rowley, including those of James Bailey, Nicholas Jackson, John Pearson, Mark Prime and Edward Sawyer.

The first town meeting of which we have record was held "the 20th of the 11th (16)48. Thomas Barker, Humfrey Reyner, Mathew Boys, Williā Acee, Thomas Leuer, were chosen to order the affaires of the Towne this yeare.

Thomas Dickinson was Chosen Cunstable this yeare.

Mr. Richard Swan William Law Williā Jackson and John Scales were to be ouerseers of the Hy wayes and comon Gates and ffences and to see to the execution of all such orders as shall be made this yeare.

John Pickard is Chosen Marshill for gathering the ffines and fforfettures this yeare.

Ed Carleton ffrancis Parrat are chosen to assist the fiue men in Laying the ministry rate this yeare.

Ed Carleton Capt: Briggā Thomas Mighell ffrancis Parrat Mathew Boys Joseph Jewett and Mr. Rogers were Chosen to Judge and determine euery mans proportion of land . . ."

4 May, 1649, the middle fifth of Plum Island was granted to Rowley and the town then comprised all the land between Newbury on the north, and Ipswich and Cochicawick, now Andover, on the south and southwest, the other bounds being the ocean and the Merrimack River.

The original grants included Bradford (formerly called Merrimack), incorporated 1675, now a part of Haverhill; Boxford (once known as Rowley Village), 1685; Georgetown, 1838; Groveland (once a part of Bradford), 1850; and a part of Middleton set off from Boxford. A part of Ipswich, consisting of two farms of about one hundred acres each, was annexed to Rowley in 1785. In 1702 about twenty-five families of Rowley and Newbury united in building a meeting-house, and later a parish was incorporated under the name of "The Falls," afterward called Rowlbury, and in 1710, Byfield. In 1746, Linebrook Parish, consisting of part of Rowley and part of Ipswich, was incorporated.

The names of many of the early settlers still persist in the names given to the hills, uplands, meadows, brooks, etc., not only in the present Rowley but in towns once a part of the original grants: Bennet Hill Road, Carleton's Creek, Dresser Road, Haseltine's Brook, Hazen Swamp, Hobson's Hill, Hobson's Hollow, Johnson's Pond, Law's Point, Leighton's Corner, Nelson's Island, Northend's Island, Reyner's Meadow, Reyner's Pond, Sawyer's Island, Spofford's Hill, Stiles' Pond, Swan's Pond, Symond's Brook, Wheeler's Brook, Wicom's Spring, and Setchel's (Shatswell's) Meadow, the last named for the Ipswich man from whom it was purchased in 1639. Hunsley Hill was named for Hunsley in Rowley Parish, England.

Such in brief is the record of the planting of a New England town of the early days. There is something fine and substantial in this planting. The building of homes in the wilderness, the setting up of town government, the founding of the public school, the organization of a church all point to a desire for an intelligent, upright, law-abiding community.

> "unforced, uncalled to brook ritual restraints,"

Whatever New England is today, or ever may be, one thing is certain, we owe more to the Puritan who laid the foundation and built so much of English law and liberty into the superstructure, than to all other forces combined.

The answer to any criticism of the Puritan is New England.

AMOS E. JEWETT.

[*] Some doubt has been expressed as to Thomas Abbott (1-4) being the son of George Abbott (1) solely because George Abbott (1) appears to have two sons named Thomas alive at the same time. Hon. Samuel Symonds of Ipswich (1637), Deputy-Governor of Massachusetts, "a gentleman of Ancient family" had two sons named Samuel living at the same time. Samuel Symonds, Jr., of Ipswich, in his will dated 22 Nov., 1653, proved 28 Mar., 1654, mentions among other brothers, "I give unto my brother Samuell Symonds 20s." and in another item "I give unto my brother Samuel all my bookes" (Essex Deeds, 1 Ips.: 162). This brother, Samuel Symonds, was graduated at Harvard College, 1663, and died 1669, unmarried.

William Wild. He was first of Ipswich, and again of Ipswich in 1661, and probably earlier.

In 1640 Mr. Thomas Nelson had erected a saw-mill where Glen Mills now are, and soon after, certainly as early as 1643, he added a grist-mill.

John Pearson came about this time with quite a company, and erected, near Mr. Nelson's grist-mill, a fulling-mill, the first in this country.

Many of the first settlers were weavers. Johnson, in his "Wonder-Working Providence" (London, 1654) says of the Rowley people:

> "These people being industrious every way, soon built many houses, to the number of about three-score families, and were the first that set upon making Cloth in this Western World; for which end they built a fulling mill, and caused their little-ones to be very diligent in spinning cotton-wool, many of them having been clothiers in England."

Gov. Winthrop, under date of 12th of Fourth month, 1643, says:

> "Our supplies from England failing much men began to look abou them, and fell to a manufacture of cotton; whereof, we had a store from Barbadoes, and of hemp and flax; wherein Rowley, to their great commendation, exceeded all other towns."

Before 1660 other families appear of record as residents—some had come with Mr. Rogers as minors, others to work about the mills.

The following are the new comers who appear to have resided in this village before 1660.

James Bailey. Had wife Lydia and eight children; was fifty-one years old 1663; buried 10 Aug., 1677; will dated 8 Aug., 1677, proved 25 Sept., 1677. Descendants in male line now residing here.

PROEM.

The book used for recording the general affairs of the town of Rowley from 1639 to 1672 is much worn, mutilated, and nearly illegible, many leaves are missing, so that nothing remains of record before August, 1647. The printed copy begins on page 51.

Another book, containing the record of the laying out of lands and division of fences, was begun in 1643. It appears herein on the first fifty pages and thence chronologically in connection with the first named record.

There is a third book, styled "Book No. 1" of the town records, into which some matters from the first book have been imperfectly copied. Records therein, not found in the other two books, appear herein in proper order.

A list of those who had house lots in the first division is here given with a brief account of each :

George Abbott. Death not of record. The will of his son Thomas, dated 5 – 7 mo., 1659, and a deed recorded with the Essex Deeds, 1 Ipswich, 625, show four sons old enough to have been brought with him in 1639.

William Acy. Had wife Margaret and four children all brought with him 1639. His death is not of record. He made his will 22 April, 1689, "being very aged;" it was proved 30 Sept., 1690.

Thomas Barker. Had wife Mary; no children. He was buried 30 Nov., 1650. His will was proved 25 – 1 mo., 1651.

James Barker. Had eight children. Buried 7 Sept., 1678. His will, dated 3 – 7 mo. 1678, proved 24 Sept., 1678, mentions himself as "born at Stragewell, in Low Suffolk, in old England."

William Bellingham. No mention of wife or children. Death not of record. His will was proved 24 – 7 mo., 1650. He was brother of Gov. Richard Bellingham.

chased a warehouse that had been John Tinker's, on Mill Cove. Hill, though styled of London, had previously been at the south, for in 1668, he assigned to Robert Prowse, merchant, all right to a plantation in Maryland, with milch cows and small cattle, &c., which had been four years jointly owned and cultivated by them.

Mr. Hill was chosen recorder of the town, February 25th, 1669–70, and held the office till his death. His handwriting was compact and neat, but not distinct. He was also clerk of the county court at the time of his decease. His first marriage is thus recorded: "Charles, son to George Hill, of Barley, Derbyshire, Esq., was married July 16, 1668, to Ruth, widow of John Picket." Children—Jane, born December 9th, 1669; Charles, October 16th, 1671; Ruth, baptized October, 1673, probably died in infancy; Jonathan, born December, 1674. Ruth, wife of Charles Hill, died April 30th, 1677. Charles Hill married, second, June 12th, 1678, Rachel, daughter of Major John Mason, deputy governor of the colony. This second wife and her infant child died in 1679.

Charles Hill, second, married Abigail Fox, August 28th, 1701. Jonathan Hill married Mary Sharswood, the date not recovered.

Pasco Foote, died probably in 1684.

We can scarcely err in assuming that he was son of Pasco Foote, of Salem, and that he was the Pasco Foote, Jr., of the Salem records, who married 2d 10th month, 1668, Martha Wood, and of whose marriage three sons are the recorded issue, Malachi, Martha and Pasco.[1] He appears in New London as a mariner, engaged in the Newfoundland trade, and marries November 30th, 1678, Margaret, daughter of Edward Stallion. Three children were the issue of this marriage, whose births are not recorded, Isaac, Stallion and Margaret. Edward Stallion, the grandfather, by a deed of adoption, took the second son, Stallion, for his own child; and at the same time, Pasco Foote settled his house and land in New London, on his youngest child, Margaret. These deeds, executed January 6th, 1683–4, give us our latest information of Pasco Foote. His relict married James Haynes, in 1687 or 1688.

Stallion Foote died in 1710, leaving a wife, Ann, and an only child, of his own name, Stallion, who died suddenly at the house of John Williams, on Groton bank, January 9th, 1714–15, aged six years. On the 7th of March succeeding the death of the child, an entry was made on the New London record, of the following import: "Isaac, son of Pasco Foote, late of New London, deceased, and Margaret his wife, hath desired his name may be now recorded, Isaac, alias Stallion Foote." This person after 1715, disappears from our records.

Edward Culver, died in 1685.

He had lived at Dedham, where the births of three children are recorded: John, April 15th, 1640; Joshua, January 12th, 1642–3; Samuel, January 9th, 1644–5; and at Roxbury, where the record of baptisms adds two more to the list of children, Gershom, December 3d, 1648; Hannah, April 11th, 1651.[1] His arrival at Pequot is announced by a land grant in 1653. He purchased the house-lot of Robert Burrows, given to the latter by the town, and established himself as a baker and brewer. In 1664 he relinquished the homestead to his son John, and removed to a place near the head of Mystic, but within New London bounds, called by the Indians Chepadaso, and in one place recorded as Chepados Hill. During Philip's War, Edward Culver was a noted soldier and partisan, often sent out with Indian scouts to explore the wilderness.[2] In 1681, he is called "wheel-right of Mystic." The sons of Edward and Ann Culver, expressly named, are John, Joshua, Samuel and Joseph.[3] It is supposed that Edward Culver, of Norwich, 1680, having wife

Sarah and children ranging in birth from 1681 to 1694, and in 1700, an inhabitant of the new town of Lebanon, should be added to the list. If so, he was probably born after the removal to Pequot, or about 1654. The identity of his name, however, is the only evidence we can produce of the relationship.

John Culver was for several years a resident in New Haven, where the birth of a daughter, Abigail, is recorded in 1676, and son, James, in 1679.[1] He ultimately returned to the neighborhood of the Mystic. Joshua Culver, married in 1673, Elizabeth Ford, of New Haven, and settled in Wallingford.[2] Samuel Culver, about the year 1674, eloped with the wife of John Fish, and is not known to have ever returned to this part of the country. Joseph Culver settled on his father's lands at Groton.

Isaac Willey,[3] died about 1685.

Willey's house lot was on Mill Brook, at the base of Post Hill. He was an agriculturist, and soon removed to a farm at the head of Nahantic River, which was confirmed to "old goodman Willie," in 1664. It is probable that both he and his wife Joanna, had passed the bounds of middle age, and that all their children were born before they came to the banks of the Pequot. Isaac Willey, Jr., was a married man at the time of his death, in 1662; John Willey was one who wrought on the mill-dam in 1651; Abraham had married and settled in Haddam before his father's decease. No other sons are known. Hannah, wife of Peter Blatchford, is the only daughter expressly named as such, but inferential testimony leads us to enroll among the members of this family, Joanna, wife of Robert Hempstead, and afterward of Andrew Lester; Mary, wife of Samuel Tubbs, and Sarah, wife of John Terrall.

Isaac Willey married, second, after 1670, Anna, relict of Andrew Lester,[4] who survived him. The Willey farm was sold to Abel Moore and Chr. Christophers. John Willey married in 1670, Miriam, daughter of Miles Moore. He lived beyond the head of Nahantick, and when the bounds between New London and Lyme were determined, his farm was split by the line, leaving twenty acres, on which stood his house, in New London.

Abraham Willey, the ancestor of the Haddam family, married Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Mortimer, of New London.

James Morgan, died about 1685.

He was about seventy-eight years of age.[1] The earliest notice of him is from the records of Boston, where the birth of his daughter, Hannah, is registered, eighteenth day, fifth month, 1642.[2] He was afterward of Gloucester, and came with the Cape Ann company to Pequot, where he acted as one of the townsmen, from 1653 to 1656, inclusive. His homestead, "on the path to New Street," was sold December 25th, 1657. He then removed east of the river, where he had large grants of land. The following additional grant alludes to his dwelling:

> "James Morgan hath given him about six acres of upland where the wigwams were in the path that goes from his house towards Culver's among the rocky hills."

He was often employed by the public in land surveys, stating highways and determining boundaries, and was nine times deputy to the General Court. His estate was settled in 1685, by division among his four children, James, John, Joseph and Hannah, wife of Nehemiah Royce.

James Morgan, 2d, married, "some time in the month of November, 1666," Mary Vine,[3] of old England. This was the Capt. James Morgan, of Groton, who died December 8th, 1711. John Morgan married, November 16th, 1665, Rachel Dymond, by whom he had seven children. By a second wife, Elizabeth, supposed to have been daughter of William Jones, of New Haven,[4] and granddaughter of Governor Eaton, he had six other children. Lieut. John Morgan died in Groton, 1712. Joseph Morgan married, in April, 1670, Dorothy, daughter of Thomas Parke. He died in Preston,

INTRODUCTION

The Colver family is readily traced in the English counties of Dorset, Hereford, Oxford, Suffolk, Leicester, and Middlesex as well as in various parts of Ireland, and were, for the most part, of the landed gentry and yeomanry of Great Britain. The name is found in various forms of spelling, such as Colver, Collver, Coluer, Culver, Cullliver, Colvers, Colvar, Colvir, Colvur, Culvir, Calver, Kolver, etc., the variation arising principally from the poor spelling during the Middle Ages and the mood of the scribe who wrote the document, who would often spell the same word in two or perhaps more ways in the same record.

Several excellent authorities state that the Colver family originated in Saxony, the spelling of the name there being Kolver, and that the descendants in England and later in America were of Saxon ancestry. The history of the early Colvers in England gives evidence of their Saxon origin.

In America the various branches have invariably used one or the other of the two forms Colver and Culver, both of which are found in the old records applying to the same person.

The name seems to have been derived from the word Culver, meaning a pigeon or dove. The name Culverhouse is found in some parts of England and evidently means dovecote, probably from the fact that the person with whom the name originated kept a number of pigeons or doves.

In the southern part of England are several places with the word Culver, such as Culverden and Culverstone in Kent and Culvercliff in the Isle of Wight; all of which were doubtless places frequented by unusual numbers of wild pigeons or doves.

Some researchers claim the name was originally Colliver, derived from the Latin word Coluver, a snake or serpent, and that the heraldic crest is a right hand holding an uplifted club signifying a snake killer. This is unproven.

Families of the name Calver or Colver have been found in Derbyshire, Suffolk, and Leicester; but the indications are that Edward Colver, the Puritan emigrant, came from one of the southern counties in the vicinity of London. John Winthrop, in whose company Edward Colver came to America, recruited his band of colonists from the counties of Middlesex, Kent, and Essex; and as the name Colver or Culver is found in the Middlesex records, especially in some parishes of London, it is more than probable Edward Colver was a native of those parts.

Among the earliest records of the family in England were those of William Culvere of Herefordshire in the year 1273 and of John and William Culvard or Culverd of Oxfordshire at slightly later dates. There was a Richard Culver of Bristol in 1475. In the register of Kensington parish church there is a marriage in 1549 for Edward Colver and Alis Lincome. Other parish records show the following: 23 October 1552, their son Richard was baptized; 30 May 1563, William, son of Edward Colver, was baptized. Burial records at Kensington parish state that on 2 July 1556 Hughe Colver was buried; 1 October 1559, Richard, son of Edward Colver was buried; and in 1559 Alis, wife of Edward Colver, was buried.

The above record indicates that Edward Colver married a second time and that his son William was the child of the second wife. The Kensington records cease here.

The next records are found in the adjoining parish of Clerkenwell.

> Middlesex Sessions Rolls - Clerkenwell - 4 April 1596. Coroner's Inquisition-post mortem taken at Hardmondsworth, Middlesex, on view of the body of Edward Culver, there lying dead. The verdict was that on the 26th December 1595 between the hours of eleven and twelve P.M., the said Edward Culver, George Hulett, labourer, and Robert Glynne, yoeman, all of Hardmondsworth, aforesaid, quarreled and fought together with their fists, in which George Hulett with his teeth bit the middle finger of Edward Culver's left hand, so that the same left hand and the arm became infected and Edward Culver lived from the 26th of December to the 25th of March 1596, on which day he died of the wound.

Whether the Edward Colver of Kensington is identical with the Edward Culver of Clerkenwell is not proven; if they were the same person, he must have been an old man bordering on seventy years of age in 1596. The similarity of name and also the location would suggest some connection with Edward Colver, the Puritan.

On 11 May 1577, Benett Colver, the wife of William Colver, was buried at St. Alphage Church, Canterbury. Eight months later the second marriage of this William Colver is recorded in the same parrish. William Culver of St. Alphage, Canterbury City, vesturer, and Joshua Wright of St. Peters, widow, at Monkton, were married 11 January 1577/8. The baptisms of their two daughters, Libbell and Margaret Colver, are also recorded in the same parish.

Other Colvers-Culvers that have no bearing upon Edward, the Puritan, but are probably branches of the family that appear upon the registers of Canterbury. As early as 1475 a Richard Culver, weaver, lived at Bristol; but the family seemed to have clustered in the southeastern counties for the most part.

One William Culver of Herefordshire is mentioned in the Hundred Rolls of the reign of King Edward I, circa 1275.

On the original covenant entered into by some members of the Massachusetts Bay Colony at Boston on 20 September 1636, for the settlement of Dedham, Edward Colver signs his name as Colver.

The name is also Colver in the Dedham church and town records, on most of the family tombstones, and in all the family papers of the earliest days. In the mention of Edward Colver's marriage to Ann Ellis, the second marriage in Dedham church records, 19 September 1638, the spelling is again Colver.

The spelling Culver seems to have been first used by others in writing the name and by others in copying official town and county records. For example, in Litchfield, Connecticut, where numerous branches of the family resided from 1723 until many years after the Revolutionary War, wherever an original deed is found, the spelling is invariably Colver; but often in the copying or indexing of the deed, the copyist has written Culver.

The name is almost always found as Culver in the colonial histories and in the local histories of the various New England counties and towns where the branches of the family have resided. But in most of the instances where the name is Culver, it is the spelling employed by persons other than members of the family. The spelling Culver appears to have been used by others after the removal of the family of Edward Colver, the Puritan, from Dedham and Roxbury, Massachusetts, to the vicinity of New London, Connecticut, and more widely used as the descendants scattered to various parts of the United States.

The Puritans of Massachusetts and Connecticut, urged by a keen desire to better their condition and stimulated by the love of adventure under the leadership of John Winthrop and others, came to America and organized the Massachusetts Bay Colony. The Puritans came to the shores of New England in many companies and on various dates from 1630 to 1640. Winthrop had some twelve ships in his main expedition, which reached the vicinity of what is now Salem, Massachusetts, on 1 April 1630, with nearly eight hundred persons aboard after a voyage of seventy-six days.

On 30 July 1630, the Winthrop colonists removed to Charlestown, and on 17 September 1630, they settled what is now Boston, Massachusetts. The Puritan ideas represented a national liberty and a severe, but simple Protestantism.

The first General Court met at Boston in May 1631. We find the name of Edward Colver on the original covenant entered into by members of the colony at Boston for the settlement of Contentment, which was renamed Dedham, Massachusetts, 8 September 1636, one of the earliest records of Puritan affairs. At first there appears to have been a meeting 3 September 1635 at the court in Boston to consider the founding of a plantation on the Charles River. A second meeting is recorded 18 August 1636 and a third and final conference 5 September 1636. At last the convenant was signed 10 September 1636 by Edward Colver and others who were the founders of Dedham, Massachusetts (Dedham Records by Don Gleason Hill, Vol. 3, page 3, published 1892).

The name Dedham was taken from Dedham, Essex County, England. Dedham, Massachusetts is about ten miles southwest of Boston on the Charles River. It was at Dedham that the first white man was shot by an Indian in 1671. This event started King Philip's War in 1675.

In all probablility Edward Colver was a young man when he came with the Puritans from his home in England, settled in the Massachusetts Bay Colony, and later assisted in the founding of Dedham; for his marriage on 19 September 1638 to Ann Ellis (An Ellice) is second in the records of Dedham by the first town clerk, Edward Alleyn. Ann Ellis was the daughter of John Ellis, one of the first settlers of Dedham. Reverend John Allin, who was the first pastor of the First Church of Dedham, performed the ceremony. The congregation of this church was organized in July 1637 by John Allin and some thirty Puritan families who came from several parts of southern England. The church was, however, formally instituted in 1638, and Mr. Allin was then installed as the regular pastor.

In the records of the early Connecticut settlements, beginning with Edward Colver, the Purtian, who came from the Dedham-Roxbury district of the Massachusetts Bay Colony to New London, and extending over a period of nearly two hundred years, there are so many references to members of the Colver-Culver family that space here will not permit any detailed mention. In deeds for land and property; in church and town records of births, marriages, and deaths; in registered lists of cattle marks; in minutes of town meetings; in the chronicles of the assemblies of the colony; in the colonial war books, etc., it is evident that the early descendants of the family were very numerous, active, and public-spiriated. Shortly after the American Revolution the family began to scatter more generally and to seek homes in other states so that now it is no longer possible to speak of the family as "of Connecticut".

Numerous members of the Colver-Culver families have been noted for their leadership in religion, military duties, community developments, education, etc. The Colver family has been well represented in the American colonial wars and in the subsequent wars within the United States. It is impossible to give a full record of their achievements. The first Colver in this country, Edward Colver, the Puritan, and several of his sons and grandsons had creditable military records in the early Indian wars and are mentioned favorably in Connecticut, Massachusetts, Vermont, and New York colonial records.

Edward Colver served with seventy other Englishmen in the Pequot War in 1637, the first conflict with the Indians of New England. Serving in King Philip's War of 1675, Edward was commissioned as a lieutenant and served with distinction. Being mentioned as a noted scout at this period, Edward appears to have had considerable influence with the Pequots and other friendly Indian tribes.

In Soldiers in King Philip's War from Voluntown, Connecticut, on the enrollment lists are found the names of Edward; Edward, Jr.; Joseph; and Ephraim Colver. There are also records of many Colvers serving in the colonial wars and the French and Indian War preceding the Revolution. In the war of the American Revolution there are records of the services of many Colver-Culver men from Massachusetts, Connecticut, Vermont, New York, and others of the Original Thirteen Colonies.

Edward Colver of New England was the grandson of Rev. Edward Colver, born ca 1550, whom Queen Elizabeth presented to the Rectory of Hardmondsworth, County Middlesex, England, 2 September 1575, and who died 28 March 1594.

In 1881, James P. Snell published a History of Sussex and Warren Counties, New Jersey, which gives another version of the origins of the Culvers in England, as follows: "John Culver, born ca 1575-80 in England, had three sons: (1) John remained in England, inherited the estate; (2) Edward came to this country in 1635; (3) Joseph went to Ireland and remained, starting a new line."

Edward Colver sailed from the port of London in 1635 in one of the ships which carried John Winthrop's company of emigrants to America, but so far research has failed to reveal his parentage.

EDWARD COLVER, "The Puritan," founder of the Colver-Culver family in America, was born about 1600 (Colver-Culver Genealogy by Frederic Lathrop Colver) or in 1610 (Tercentary History of Maryland by Francis Barnum Culver), County Suffolk or County Middlesex, England. Probably 1610 is the more accurate date of birth as he would have been twenty-five years old when he came to America without his parents. Edward immigrated to America in a party brought over to the Massachusetts Bay Colony in the autumn of 1635, supposedly in the same ship with John Winthrop, the younger, later governor of Connecticut. He landed in Boston, which had been founded about five years before that time, fifteen years after the Pilgram fathers came in the Mayflower. Cora Grunwald of Ledyard, Connecticut thinks Edward could have arrived as early as 1633 on the Speedwell. This has not been proven.

Edward Colver was a millwright and wheelwright at the time of his arrival and continued his trade in America even though he took up farming as well.

Edward Colver was a member of the Massachusetts Bay Colony at Boston in 1635 and was evidently of an energetic and enterprising spirit. We find him very soon after his arrival taking part in a meeting, at the court house in Boston, which was called for the purpose of forming a company of colonists willing to push further out into the wilderness and start a new settlement. Later, land was given to each of the members, with the right to subdivide or sell as he wanted. The settlement proposed was situated up the Charles River and was first known as Contentment and later as the town of Dedham. Edward helped in the founding of the town of Dedham, Massachusetts, in 1636, his name being sixty-eighth on the list of one hundred and twenty four who signed the convenant. Dedham is located about ten miles southwest of Boston. Ten miles must have seemed a long way by ox team over the rough roads and through wilderness frequented by Indians and wild animals.

The Dedham Convenant not only shows that the first settlers wished to provide homes for themselves which they could own and where they would be free from obnoxious religious and political restrictions but also that they desired to build up and protect exclusively their own particular form of religious and political establishment, "barring all others and everybody and everything discordant with their own notions." The Dedham convenant, as recorded in the Dedham, Towne Book, "for the Entering, and Recording, of all such Orders as or shall be for the Couernment there of as followeth," was, in part:

> 1 We whose names ar here vnto subscribed, doe, in the feare and Reuerence of our Allmightie God, Mutually; and seuerally pmse amongst our selues and each to other to pffesse and practice one trueth according to that most pfect rule. the foundacion where of is Euerlasting Loue.
> 2 That we shall by all meanes Laboure to Keepe of from vs all such as ar contrarye minded. And receaue onely such vnto vs as be such as may be pbably of one

> harte, with vs as that we either knowe or may well and truely be informaed to walke in a peacable conuersation with all meekenes of spirit for the edification of each other in the knowledge and faith of the Lord Jesus: And the mutuall encouragmt vnto all Temporall comforts in all things: seekeing the good of each other out of all which may be deriued true Peace.

From the historians of Dedham, Massachusetts, a good idea can be obtained of the early days in New England and of some of the conditions under which Edward Colver lived. When he went to Dedham, he found the earliest settlers, who held the grant of the lands, denying admission to newcomers until it could be ascertained what provision could be made for them; and he, along with others, had to wait for a new survey of lands.

After a time, on 28 November 1637, according to the records in the Dedham Towne Book, it was "ordered that Edward Colver (written also Ed. Coluer) wheelwright shall haue twoe Acres layd out for ye present implyment in his trade & after to haue an addicion els wher as hal be found needfull. In the meane tyme to haue free liberty of taking Time for his trade very mans ppriety Reserved."

The next grant of land was made to him 19 July 1639, and a third on 6 February 1642 of three acres. A fourth grant of woodland was made 4 February 1644, and a fifth on 3 February 1645 of a small parcel of land. Some of this land Edward sold to Joseph Kent on 26 February 1643, and the balance of his Dedham holdings he sold to Daniel Fisher and Joseph Kent in 1651. He is mentioned in the minutes of the town meetings at Dedham 1 January 1643 and 1 January 1644 and was listed in many affairs in the town he helped to found.

Edward took part early in the Indian wars, fighting against the Pequot Indians in 1637, and from that time on was noted as an Indian scout, being on good terms of friendship with some of the tribes who accompanied him on his scouting expeditions. In the first Pequot War in 1637, he was sent by Colonel John Mason, who commanded the little band of ninety whites, to enlist the help of the Mohicans, with the result that Uncas brought one hundred and fifty of his warriors to take part in the battle. At daybreak on 4 June 1637, they surprised the Pequots in their strong-hold and utteraly exterminated them, with the exception of a few who escaped and fled to the Six Nations in New York Province. King Uncas held Edward Colver in great esteem and named his son after Colver's second son, Joshua. For this service Edward Colver received two grants of land, one of two hundred acres in 1652/3 and another in 1654 of four hundred acres. These grants were situated about four miles north of the scene of the battle. The two hundred acre lot was near the head of the Mystic River and the other about two miles further to the northwest (Land Records of Groton, Connecticut).

On 19 September 1638, Edward Colver married at Dedham, Massachusetts, Ann Ellis, daughter of John Ellis. Their marriage is the second entered in the records of the First Church of Dedham (The Town of Dedham by Don Gleason - 1881, which probably at that time consisted of a little congregation meeting in one of the houses of the settlers. The Rev. John Allyn was the pastor, having been ordained shortly before he performed the marriage between Edward Colver and Ann Ellis. Ann Ellis Colver was admitted to membership in the First Church at Dedham 17 September 1641, and her first child, John, was baptized two days later.

Edward Colver assisted the Winthrops in building a fort at Saybrook, Connecticut, at the mouth of the Connecticut River. He owned land in Dedham, but in 1645 removed to Roxbury, Massachusetts.

There is a record of an allotment of twelve and one-half acres of land to Edward Colver about 1648. In 1650 and 1651 he built a grist mill for Governor Winthrop. About 1653 the family moved again to Pequot (now New London) and purchased a lot from Robert Burrows. Edward was granted land 20 November 1653 of that year as "Goodman Colver."

In 1654 Edward Colver was granted land at Mystic near that of William Wellman. He exchanged it for other land belonging to Robert Park, Robert Burrows, and Hugh Roberts. He built a house with accommodations for travelers and a water power grist mill. In 1668 his son Joshua built a house north of Edward's. John Winthrop, Esq., was granted twenty rods of land on both sides of the Mystic River to bring down "tymber" from Lantern Hill. In 1674 Winthrop's two sons had a mill built at the head of Mystic River. John Lamb was to run it. The Winthrops decided they needed the land on which Joshua Colver's house stood for a mill house. In 1681 Governor Winthrop's son, Major John Winthrop, sued and lost the case, but sued again and again until John Winthrop won the case. Many of the people around testified--some for the Winthrops --some for the Colvers.

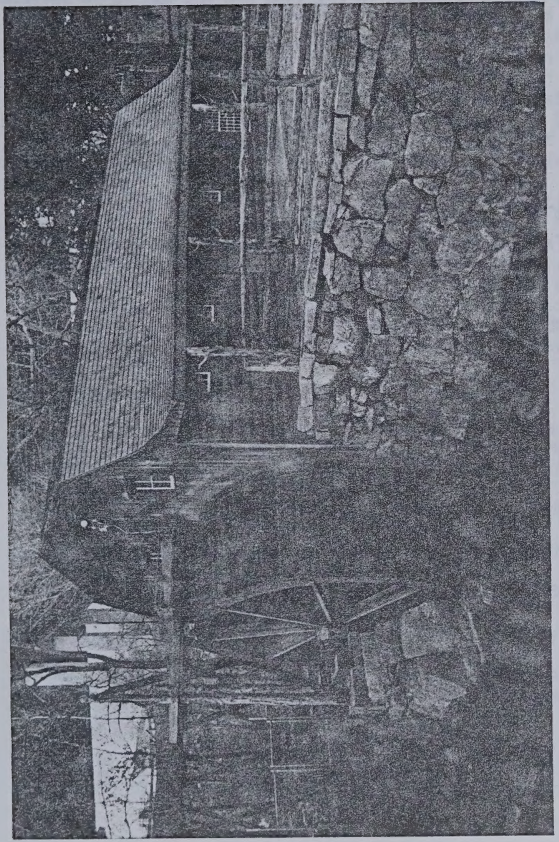
Thirty-five year old John Gallup, cousin of the Winthrops, said that Joshua Colver's house stood about eight rods from the brook of the Mystic River and affirmed it was above the high water mark. John Bennet testified that he paced the distance with Gallup and could testify to the truth of his statements.

For the Colvers, the testimony was quite different. It indicated that not only the house, but also the mill was below the high water mark and that the land did not belong to the Winthrops.

William Hough worked on the mill. He said he had been unable to do the lower work because of the tides. Joseph Colver testified that the tide had flowed up to the mill, many times even to the ditch of the mill wheel. John Packer said that John Lamb and John Bennet told him the wheel did wade in the back wash and that he himself had seen the wheel wade in the back wash.

John Burrows said the tide often hindered him from riding over at the usual place near the ditch. William Billings claimed that he got his feet wet by the height of the water even though he held them up. John Denison said the water "wetted His baggs at the riding place" and that the water was often higher than the trash that they lay along it. Aaron Stark said he commonly went "over Mistic River on a tree near the mill" and that the place was commonly called Paucatuck path to New London. James Avery said he remembered such a path.

James Morgan testified that he and Obadiah Bruen marked a black oak tree on Hugh Robert's land and the path was south of



The oldest grist mill stands in New London, Connecticut. Orginally owned by the Winthrop family, a mill has existed on this site since 1650. New London was an agricultural community, and a mill to grind the corn was needed. A town meeting in 1650 selected six men to build the mill. It is thought Edward Colver was one of the men that helped build the mill. The present mill is a reconstruction of the one which existed in the early 19th century.

this. John Fish and William Billings: tendered oath that they judged there was not a foot fall in a foote space."

The Winthrops later admitted that the mill was in the wrong place. In 1699 Peter Cary was placed in charge of repairing and rebuilding the mill. He said he asked nothing for his "Diet" nor for that of his son but wanted £7-04-00 for three months of hard "labour."

George Wheeler framed the mill. Samuel Adams was the millwright. He and his men worked 34 weeks at "4s" a week. James Cornish, Henry Williams, Samuel Coy, Ephraim Colver, James Springer, James Fanning, and Benjamin Burrows all worked on the mill. William Williams, William Stark, Peter Crary, Jr., and Samuel Fish carted timber, with Fish having his oxen on the job four Dayes". Fergus MacDowell furnished the nails. James Dean made the rest of the iron work.

The mill has long since gone back to dust. In the 1920's Ray Culver, a descendant of Edward, found Indian arrowheads and a stone pipe on this land that had once belonged to John Winthrop, Esq.

In 1675 when King Philip made war against the New England colonies, Edward Colver, then an old man of sixty-five, went out with his four sons, Edward Junior, Ephraim, Joseph, and Samuel, to fight against the noted Indian chief. They took part in the "Swamp fight" which occurred near Tiverton, Rhode Island, 19 December 1675, when the tribes again met with defeat and heavy loss. Edward Colver was the only soldier engaged in the "Swamp fight" who had participated in the previous Pequot War, and as the tactics of the battle were the same as on that occasion, it is thought that the old soldier may have aided Captain Dennison, who commanded the Connecticut men at the "Swamp," to plan that attack. The colonial records of Connecticut mention the services of Edward Colver as scout as follows: "The Councill ordered John Stedman and Edward Colver with some of the Indians to goe forth upon the scout betwixt this and Springfield to make what discovery they could upon the enemie to the eastward of the river" (Public Records of Connecticut, 1665-1677, Vol. 2, p. 408). And again under date of 16 March 1675: "An answer to a letter from Mr. Fitch was returned with an advice to him to encourage the volunteers and to improve Uncas and Ninecraft to draw off as many of the enemie as may be, they delivering up their arms and ammunition, & c., as also on advice to send home the garrison soldiers at Norwich; that Edward Colver with about 20 Mogeags and Pequots come up to Hartford forthwith, & c., as pr the letter on file will more at large appear" (Public Records of Connecticut, 1665-1677, Vol. 2, page 417).

Frederic Lathrop Colver cited the above information about Edward Colver. Francis Barnum Colver also says Edward fought in King Philip's War, in particular in the "Swamp fight" in 1675; but Donald L. Jacobus in his article in the American Genealogist, Volume 31, No. 3, pages 130-1, thinks the soldier here was more likely Edward, Jr., since Edward, Sr., would have been upward of sixty and it would seem more likely that the scout was his son Edward, who later as lieutenant was engaged in scouting (Colonial Records of Connecticut 2:408).

Edward Colver and wife Ann sold land in New London, 10 February

1661/2, both signing by mark. In 1664 Edward Colver deeded the homestead at Pequot to his son John. Edward moved to the farm of four hundred acres called "Chepadas", where he continued to live until after the close of King Philip's War.

Edward and Ann Colver sold property to "our eldest son," John Colver, 25 November 1667; the witnesses were John Fish, Joshua Culver, and Joseph Culver.

Edward Colver, "Sr", of New London, wheelwright, "in consideration of my own age and weakness of memory and understanding," gave land to his wife, Ann, 28 July 1682, signing by a mark (New London Deeds, 3:10, 29, 63). On 5 May 1662, Edward Colver was allowed to brew beer and make bread and was allowed on 9 January 1664/5 to sell liquors.

In 1678 Edward and his wife Ann deeded the "Chepadas" farm to their sons Joseph and Ephraim and moved to a house in the village of Mystic built by their son Joshua in 1668. The last years of Edward Colver was spent in this house on the Groton side of the Mystic River.

Edward Colver died in 1685 in the village of Mystic, Town of Groton, New London, in the colony of Connecticut. A small headstone bearing upon one face the roughly cut initials, "E. C." and another small headstone bearing upon one face the roughly cut initials "A. C." represent the original stones of Edward Colver and his wife, Ann Colver, in Wightman Cemetery. The inventory of Edward Colver's estate was exhibited and administration was granted to John Culver 2 June 1685 (New London County Court Records 5:108).

Edward and Ann Colver had the following children:

(2) 1. John Colver born 15 April 1640, Dedham, Massachusetts.
(3) 2. Joshua Colver born 12 January 1642, Dedham, Massachusetts.

THE COLVER-CULVER MONUMENT

Wightman Burying Ground, Groton, Connecticut

In his book Colver-Culver Genealogy (1910), Frederic Lathrop Colver indicated that Edward and Ann (Ellis) Colver were buried in the cemetery adjoining the site on which, in 1717, the First Baptist Church was built in Groton, Connecticut. A small headstone bearing upon one face the roughly cut initials "E. C." was believed to be that of Edward Colver.

Information gathered by Charles Colver of Covina, California, before visiting Wightman Burying Ground indicated there was a stone for Edward Colver, but none for his wife, Ann (Ellis) Colver. From this information Charles ordered a small marker for Ann (Ellis) Colver from a monument maker in New Haven and personally carried it to Groton in 1979 and installed it at Wightman Burying Ground. Then a stone with the roughly cut initials "A. C." was identified as that of Ann Colver, so the stone purchased by Charles Colver was placed as a foot marker for the Colver-Culver monument.

In 1982, Charles Colver, an eleventh generation descendant from Edward, decided to erect a monument to Edward Colver, the patriarch of the Colver-Culver family in America. He arranged with the monument maker in New London to provide the marker and install it at Wightman Burying Ground. This monument is in the form of a granite tablet which was the style used when Edward was buried. It weighs several hundred pounds. Charles conveyed his plans to a distant cousin, James Culver of Milwaukee, Wisconsin. James was immediately exhilarated about the project since he was also researching Colver-Culver family history and had previously visited Wightman Burying Ground. He completely agreed with the proposed design and size of the marker and volunteered to pay one-half the cost. This, he stated, "would truly make it a Colver-Culver venture."

The monument was installed at Wightman Burying Ground September 1982 in time for the annual meeting of the Wightman Burying Ground Association. The annual meeting regarding the Wightman Burying Ground is held annually the third Sunday in September at the cemetery. J. Lewis Chapman has been president since 1968. The monument was placed at an appropriate site in the cemetery, visible from the front and within a row of Colver-Culver graves.

Historians in the Groton area agree that the Wightman Burying Ground lies within the land that was originally granted to Edward Colver by the King for his services to the Crown in the Indian Wars. This probably started as a family plot, but then became a regular burying ground when the Baptist Church was built on the site in 1717.

Future generations can visit the graves of their ancestors and observe the permanent inscription honoring Edward and Ann, the founders of the Colver-Culver families in America. Hopefully, through the years to come, many descendants will visit the family shrine and trod upon the hallowed ground.

The cemetery can be reached in Groton, Connecticut, by taking Highway #184 (Gold Star Highway) toward Mystic. From its intersection with Highway #117 in Groton, continue 1.8 miles to Cold Spring Road. Turn right on Cold Spring and go 0.2 miles to cemetery on your right. The plaque on the cemetery gates reads "The First Baptist Church of Groton. Their first house of worship was erected in front of this burying ground in 1718. This was the JOSEPH COLVER (Edward^1) baptized 20 September 1646, Dedham, Massachusetts, died early in 1731, Groton, Connecticut; married (1) "unknown" and (2) 20 June 1716, Margaret Gallup, daughter of John and Hannah (Lake) Gallup, of Stonington, Connecticut. Joseph moved to Roxbury, Massachusetts, about 1645, and to New London, Connecticut, in 1653. Joseph was a millwright and wheelwright. In 1678 his father deeded to him the farm "Chepadas", which he owned near New London. Joseph later bought his brother Ephraim's share, and the farm was passed on to Joseph's son, Joseph, and then on down to the seventh generation of Josephs.

Joseph, his father and two brothers, Edward and Ephraim enlisted among the town Volunteers in King Philip's War with the help of the noted Indian Chief, Uncas, taking part in the same contest. The three brothers each drew "Cedar Swamp" lots for their services in this war. At the time of the war this land formed part of Narragansett township. It is now Voluntown, Connecticut (Soldiers in King Philip's War).

Joseph Cullver of New London conveyed 150 acres to "my brother Ephraim Cullver" of the same, 27 December 1700; Joseph Cullver, Jr. witnessed the deed (New London Deeds, 3:31). Joseph conveyed to his son Joseph on 7 May 1715; and Joseph, Sr., conveyed to his son Jonathan on 2 March 1720, mentioning a "brook which is the bounds between brother John and I" (Groton Deeds, 1:317, 482). Joseph Colver and Jonathan Colver, yeomen, of Groton conveyed 16 April 1722 to Nathaniel Colver; the acknowledgment reads that Joseph and his son Jonathan personally appeared.

It seems likely that Ann Culver who married Peter Crary at Groton in 1709/10 was daughter of Joseph, both because it is difficult to place her elsewhere and because Joseph for his second wife married Peter's maiden aunt, Margaret Gallup, and he probably became acquainted with her through his Crary son-in-law. Some two years after the marriage of this putative daughter Ann, an Ann Collver witnessed with Joseph a deed of his brother John. It seems probably that this was Joseph's first wife as this was in 1712 and he did not marry Margaret until 1716.

> ....that on 7 July 1717 Joseph Culver of Groton had posted his wife. The petition of "Margret Culuer wife to Jophef Culuer" of Groton, 26 Nov. 1717, states that "nothing withstanding the marage Covenant which we entered into the 20 of june 1716 about a fortnight after mardige my husband refused to let me lodg in the bed with him so that I was forced to lay upon the flore or harth which hardship occasioned sickness to come upon me....Sometime in October I got my own bed which I was forced to lay on the flor in a cold chamber tel sumtime in April after this he tould me he would not live with me. He said the house was his and therfor would have me to go out of it... sumtime in june last past...I left the house he refuses to let me go home to live with him as a wife but keeps the best of my clothing...also posted me in two towns and continues to vilifi and repoch me. I am under the infermitiss of age and not able to undergo such hardships....(New London County Court Files).

Someone else says Mercy Clark
" else says she married John C.

Margaret Culver of Stonington conveyed 15 December 1744 to Samuel Gallup all rights in lands of her father, Mr. John Gallup of Stonington, and of her grandmother Margaret Lake of New London (Stonington Deeds, 5:446).

Administration on Joseph Colver's estate was granted 23 February 1730/1 to John Lamb of Groton, with Joseph Bolles of New London surety. Joseph Collver, Jr., had renounced administration in favor of his brother-in-law John Lamb. Joseph and Timothy Collver certified that "the debts due to John Lamb for care and subsistence are very reasonable, Joseph being a blind man and very infirm and much troublesome" (New London Probate, File 1379). It thus appears from the testimony of two of the sons that Margaret may not have exaggerated very much in her woeful tale of her experience with Joseph.

There were many disagreements among the claimants, and some of the evidence furnished here and there in fragments of depositions relating to the evidence, found in the Archives, is of great interest. A memorial of Shubael Goreham to the General Court, presented April 17, 1741, states that several mistakes have been made in the list of No. 7, and petitions for authority to rectify such mistakes. He says that "Richard Taylor" and "Richard Taylor's heirs" appear; whereas, the latter item should have been "John Taylor's heirs." And again, two entries appear in the list 'William Gray is entered "for his father William;" and then "William Gray's heirs." Now, there were not two William Grays, but there was an Edward Gray. And another entered Joseph Crocker, where it should have been Josiah Crocker, etc., and so it is moved that the mistakes be rectified and that John Taylor, Edward Gray, and Josiah Crocker be placed in the list. But in November, 1742, another turn is given to the Crocker story by the following interesting deposition, which I give in full:

Ebenezer Goodspeed of Barnstable, being in the eighty-seventh year of his age, testifieth and saith that he being a soldier in the Narragansett wars so-called, under Capt. Thomas Howes, and he well remembers that Mr. Joseph Crocker, Dec^{d}. of said Barnstable was one of said Howe's soldiers, and I think it was the year of the Philip's war so-called begun, and I also remember said Crocker was out that year Sam^{l} Linnell was out in Pearces Fight, so called and he and the said Sam^{l} Linnell was the only English man of Barnstable that returned home from that fight, and he showed me his hat where it was shot through after his return from said Pearces Fight, and further I gave Col. Goreham, Joseph Crocker's name to return to the General Court some time ago, and I never heard or understood that Josiah Crocker of Barnstable was ever out in the said wars, and he was my neighbor and I should have known, if he had been out.

EBENEZER GOODSPEED.

Eben^{r} Goodspeed made oath etc. Nov. 13, 1742.

Jonathan Crocker testifieth to the same above as to Joseph Crocker and Sam^{l} Linnel, and also as to Josiah Crocker, Dec. 4, 1742. (York Registry of Deeds, v. 23, p. 105.)

It will be noted that Joseph Crocker's name stands in the list, as well as Gray's and Taylor's, but in the old partial list, in the Archives, the correction is made, and opposite "William Gray's," is written "Edward," while opposite "Richard Taylour's," is written the name "John." In the above lists I have made the corrections in regard to Taylour and Gray.

NARRAGANSET TOWNSHIP GRANTED TO CONNECTICUT VOLUNTEERS IN THE NARRAGANSET WAR, NOW VOLUNTOWN, CONNECTICUT.

Connecticut rewarded her Narraganset soldiers many years before the final action of Massachusetts Colony.

In October, 1696, Lieut. Thomas Leffingwell of Norwich, and Sergt. John Frink of Stonington, moved the Court of Connecticut, "that they, with the rest of the English volunteers in the former wars, might have a plantation granted unto them."

The Court, in answer, then granted them a tract six miles square, to be taken up out of some of the conquered land, where it might be had without prejudice to any former grant. A committee of the grantees made choice of a tract.

October 14, 1697, Capt. Samuel Mason, Mr. John Gallop and Lieut. James Avery were appointed a committee to view the said tract.

Upon the report of the above committee, the Court, in October, 1700, confirmed their former grant to a committee of seven, viz.: Lieut. Thomas Leffingwell, Lieut. Richard Bushnell, Isaac Wheeler, Caleb Fobes, Samuel Bliss, Joseph Morgan and Manasseh Miner, and the rest of the volunteers in the Narraganset War.

At a meeting of the volunteers, July 1, 1701, Capt. Richard Bushnell was chosen clerk, to make a list of the names of those who were volunteers in the Narraganset wars. Lieut. Thomas Leffingwell, Lieut. James Avery, Sergt. John Frink, Richard Bushnell, and Deacon Caleb Fobes, were chosen a committee to receive and decide the correctness of the claims presented. On the next day the volunteers voted to grant to Capt. Samuel Mason an equal share with the others.

From the old Proprietors' Record Book at Voluntown I have secured two lists of the grantees or "Volunteers." The first list was made in the order of the enrolment of the names, and was copied for Hon. Richard A. Wheeler, of Stonington, in 1860, by Elisha Potter, then Town Clerk of Voluntown, and published by him some years ago, in the Narragansett Historical Register. The other list is that of the "Cedar Swamp Lots," so called. This list was copied for me by the Town Clerk, Mr. Charles E. Maine, of Voluntown, and I am assured that it is correct. I have compared these lists, and while there are some few discrepancies in the spelling, and some names in each list not in the other, the lists are otherwise identical. For the convenience of readers I have arranged the second list here according to the numbers drawn for Cedar Swamp Lots. Mr. Wheeler's list marks the names of those deceased. The restrictions of the Connecticut grant to "English" volunteers shut out the Indians, who formed a large contingent of their forces, and also the white men, who were pressed into the service. In Massachusetts, thirty years later, all who had any hand in the Narraganset campaign, both from Massachusetts and Plymouth, whether volunteers or "impressed," were made grantees. Connecticut's volunteers, in 1701, were found to be about one hundred and eighty.

The names in Mr. Wheeler's List, not found in the Cedar Swamp List:

Thomas Brand.
John Larabe.

These last names were enrolled after the Cedar Swamp lots were drawn, and probably were assigned to the blank numbers.

LATER CREDITS FOR MILITARY SERVICE.

FROM JOHN HULL'S LEDGER.

The following names are gleaned from later Ledger Accounts of Treasurer John Hull. It will be seen that the credits of the Journal, heretofore given, close with the date September 23, 1676. The war continued for some time longer, and many whose names are already given did not there receive credit for their later service in the Journal accounts. Now the old Ledger helps out in these accounts, but also shows the new men engaged in the service; and I here add only the new names in general. This fortunate "overlapping" of the Ledger accounts occurs in the following way: In posting his Journal accounts, at first, Mr. Hull divided the Ledger pages for four accounts on each page. When he had filled the Ledger through the first time, he turned back, and used the spaces unused or unlikely to be used; and on most pages this gave four or five new accounts. It was in the last of these new accounts (and I judge that the process was repeated twice) that the items below are found. Of course the names are not assigned to any particular officer or service, but in many cases certain towns are mentioned through whose officers the soldiers received payment. This mention does not prove residence, but may serve in some cases to identify the names when taken with other facts. The list shows the names of those who served in the later months of 1676, and probably some who had not received credit for earlier services. The arrangement under towns, etc., is of course, my own.

and 1821 she essayed historical writing, and succeeded in creating genuine sensations by her "France Under the Bourbons" and "Italy," which appeared respectively in the last-named years.

LINE OF JAMES MORGAN, OF CONNECTICUT.

I. JAMES MORGAN (4 of I above), sailed from Bristol, in the ship Mary, with a kinsman, ROBERT MORGAN (see line of ROBERT, post.), in the summer of the year 1636, and landed in Boston, Massachusetts Bay, Settled first at Sandy Bay, near Gloucester, on Cape Ann, but found the coast bleak and the Indians troublesome. He married in Roxbury, where his first child was born, May 18, 1642. Finding fertile and desirable plantations at the mouth of the river Thames, at New London, in Connecticut, he, with the Sandy Bay colony, headed by its pastor, Rev. Richard Bliman, removed and settled there in 1649. Here he was assigned, February 10, 1650, lands granted him, "on the path to New street, being six acres of upland where the wigwams are, in the path that goes from his house toward Culvers, among the Rocky Hills," (New street is now Ashcroft street, in the city of New London, but it was called "Cape Ann street," in honor of the Cape Ann colony, for more than a century). In 1661 he was one of a committee "to lay out the bounds of N. London on the east side of the Great River." In 1662 it is recorded that "James Morgan, Mr. Tinker and Obiadiah Brown are chosen to seat the people in the meeting house, which they doing the inhabitants are to rest silent." In 1662 he is appointed one of a committee to contract to build a house for the ministry at New London, and signs himself "James Morgan, Senior, of New London."

UPDATED MORGAN GENEALOGY:

A History of James Morgan (1607-1685) of New London, Connecticut and His Descendants from 1607 to 1997

in whom all appear to have reposed a marked degree of confidence and trust.

He was one of the "townsmen" or selectmen of N. London for several years, and was one of the first "Deputy's" sent from N. London plantations to the General Court at Hartford, May session, 1657, (at which date he deposed his age to be "about 50 years;") and was nine times afterwards chosen a member of that grave and important assembly, the last time in 1670. His associates and compeers composing the General Court or Colonial Assembly, in May, 1657, when he was first chosen, were

John Winthrop, Esq. [of Pequot,] Governor.
Thomas Welles, Esq. [of Hartford,] Deputy Governor.

Magistrates.		Deputies.
John Webster.	[Hartford.]	[George] Steele,	[Hartford.]
[Capt. John] Cullick,		John Welles,
Mags. and Secretary,		Richard Butler,
[Samuel] Wyllys,		[William] Phelps,	[Windsor.]
[Capt. John] Talcott.		[William] Gailord,
Maj. John Mason, [Saybrook.]		[Richard] Trott,	Wethersfield.
[Daniel] Clark, [Windsor.]		[John] Robbins,
Nathan Gould, [Fairfield.]		John Deming,
[John] Gosmore,	[Southampton, L. Island.]	[Jonathan] Brewster,	[Pequot.]
[John] Ogden,		James Morgan,
		Matthew Canfield, [Norwalk.]

The names and places above in brackets, are not found in Colonial Records, but I have taken much pains to supply them from other sources, in order to show historically, who they really were, and what towns or plantations then composed the colony of Conn. and were represented. It is seen that Southampton, on Long Island, was one of these plantations.

To this carefully selected body of men, was intrusted the whole sovereign power of the colony, and the administration of its government, in every department, civil, criminal, ecclesiastical and military; embracing original jurisdiction of the most trifling as well as most heinous offences and causes of action, and the minutest details in every department.

James Morgan seems to have impressed this grave body of men with a high sense of his sterling honesty and integrity of character, and it appears that in a controversy between the General Court and the N. London plantation, about boundaries and jurisdiction, it was ordered that the matter should be submitted to three arbiters, mutually agreed upon. N. London at once named their own townsman, James Morgan, really a party in their own interests, but nevertheless the General Court as promptly accepted him, and without naming another, agreed to submit to his sole decision, which when made, seems to have satisfied all parties.

He was an active and useful member of the church under Rev. Richard Blinman's ministry, and his name is prominent in every important movement or proceeding.

"James Morgan, Mr. Tinker and Obadiah Brown, are chosen to seat the people in the meeting house, which they doing, the inhabitants are to rest silent." MINUTES FROM THE RECORD.

In 1661, he was one of a committee of the General Court to lay out the bounds of N. London, "on the east side of the Great River."

In 1662, he was one of a committee to contract "for building a house for the ministry," at New London.

From about this time he signs his name "James Morgan senior of New London,"—his oldest son James, afterwards Capt. James, being then near 21 years of age.

This year, 1662, his list on the town assessment, stands the third highest in amount; and among the tax payers of that year, about one hundred in number, only seven had a list exceeding £200. James Morgan's list was only £250, but this was a large estate in those primitive days.

The spot where he first built his house in Groton in 1657, and where he ever afterwards resided, and where he died, is a few rods southeast of the present dwelling (1868) of Elijah S. Morgan, about 3 miles from Groton Ferry, on the road to Poquonoc Bridge; and this patriarchal homestead from that day down to the present occupant, has descended by inheritance, through an unbroken line of James Morgan's, for six generations. And it is worthy of notice, in connection with this fact, that for eight generations as they hereinafter succeed each other, in regular order of individual precedence, each one is headed by the name of James Morgan.

He died in 1685, aged 78 years, and his estate was divided soon after his death among his four surviving children.

GENERATION III.

MATT. 1, 2d. "Abraham begat Isaac, and Isaac begat Jacob, and Jacob begat Judas and his brethren."

"And so they went on begetting each other to the end of the chapter."

Dow's Commentaries.

Capt. JAMES, (3) b. 3 Mch, 1644, s. of James, (1)

m. "Mary Vine of Old England," Nov. 1666, died 8 Dec. 1711, age 68. His wife Mary died in 1689, of the "throat distemper," so called, a terrible epidemic which prevailed throughout the country that year, especially in the months of July and August, visiting nearly every family and carrying consternation and death in its trail. She was born in England in 1641, and was 48 years old when she died. After her death he married 2d wife Hannah ———, born in 1640, who d. in 1711, aged 71, a few days only before his own death, but after the date of his will, in which he calls her his "dear and loving wife."

His will is dated in Groton 25 June, 1708, and approved in probate 22 Jan. 1712. In it he bequeaths to his "dear and loving wife Hannah Morgan," his "horse and chaise," barn, and orchard by it, and "the lower field this side of the cross fence which joineth south brook," to enjoy during her life. To his son James, his "field;" one half the barn and all his land at home, subject to the joint control and use of his widow, so long as she so remained. Also to James a lot "in the plain," near the salt marsh, "on the north side of the island." To his son William, "the land he has already a deed of," and 100 acres and one little island in Packanacock plain," that is, my sons Jas and Wm shall have equally." To his "four daughters, Mercy, [record of birth says Mary,] Hannah, Elizabeth and Jerusha," all his cattle, horses and sheep, to be equally divided between them. To his "grandson James Morgan," his saddle, bridle and short gun, and to his "grandson Wm Morgan," his musket.

He was an active member and one of the two first deacons of the first church in Groton; was the principal magistrate, and transacted the chief part of the civil business around him, for many years. At the first town meeting held after the town was incorporated, in Dec. 1705, he was the moderator, and was chosen first townsman or selectman. He was moderator of nearly every town or society meeting until near his death in 1711, and after that for many years his place as moderator was supplied by his two sons, Deacon James and Lieut. John, sometimes the one acting and sometimes the other. He was chosen captain of the first "train band" in Groton, in 1692, under an order of the Governor and Council, authorizing a military company to be formed there, and had been then two years a captain and commander of the "dragoon" force of New London county, under a special commission from the General Court.

Like his father he was one of the Deputies to the General Court from New London from 1689 to 1700, and afterwards one of the first Deputies from the new town of Groton, in 1706; and for several years was a Commissioner to advise and direct the Pequot tribe of Indians in the management of their affairs.

The military titles of these early days, even down to that of ensign, or sergeant, were esteemed as marks of high distinction, and from their peculiar importance, and the care and caution with which the officers were chosen, very justly so. These infant plantations were surrounded by hostile tribes of Indians, overwhelming in numbers; exposed constantly to the inroads of prowling bands, often irritated and always treacherous, and their very existence as well as peace and safety, depended much upon the personal character, the wise sagacity, prudent counsel and conduct, and the cool intrepidity of these chosen military guardians. Hence it was the early practice, when the leading officers of these "train bands" were to be chosen, to open the proceedings by solemn proclamation and prayer, and sometimes a special sermon for the occasion was prepared and preached to the company by their minister.

Capt. James lived and died upon the old patriarchal homestead of his father James, already described.

HANNAH, (11) m. William Latham, of Groton, 30 June, 1698, and had 6 children, viz.—21 Mary Latham, born 1699;—22 Hannah Latham, 1700;—23 William Latham, 1703;—24 James Latham, 1706;—25 Lucy Latham, 1712;—and 26 Jonathan Latham, 1716.

ELIZABETH, (12) m. Jonathan Starr, 12 Jan. 1698, brother of Thomas, who m. her sister, and had 10 children, viz.—27 Samuel Starr, born 5 Nov. 1699;—28 Elizabeth Starr, 19 Aug. 1701;—29 Jonathan Starr, 19 Aug. 1705;—30 Lucy Starr, 18 July, 1707;—31 Hannah Starr, 10 Dec. 1710;—32 Joseph Starr, 17 July, 1713;—33 Vine Starr, 19 Jan. 1716;—34 Richard Starr, 14 May, 1718;—35 Mary Starr, 30 Aug. 1722;—and 36 Katharine Starr, 18 Feb. 1724.

"The descendants of Jonathan Starr and Elizabeth Morgan have been remarkable for longevity. Eight of his children lived to be 80, and most of them over 85 years of age. One of his daughters, Mrs. Turner, was 100 years and 7 months old. In the family of his son Jonathan, the father, mother and four children averaged 90 years of age. The third Jonathan lived to be 95, and his brother, Capt. Jared Starr, to his 90th year. A similar length of years characterized their partners in marriage. Mrs. Mary (Seabury) Starr lived to the age of 99 years; and Elizabeth, relict of Capt. Joseph Starr, of Groton, (brother of Jonathan 2d,) died at the age of 101 years, 4 months and 8 days."

Theophilus Eaton, by whom he had 8 children, in all 15. He removed to Preston about 1692, and died in 1712, aged 67. In his will dated 23 Aug. 1711, proved 12 Feb. 1712, he names his wife Elizabeth and 13 of his children as then living, but it is singular that he makes no mention of his son Joseph, born 1701, who afterwards settled in what is now Preston, m. Ruth Brewster and reared a family of children. The record shows that the probate of this will was appealed from, and in the litigation which followed, this Joseph is mentioned as one of the parties. I had a reference to the case and intended to examine it, but lost or mislaid the reference. He also like his father and brother James, was a prominent public man, Indian commissioner and adviser, deputy to the General Court in 1690 from New London, and in 1693–4 from Preston.

REPRODUCTION EDITOR'S NOTE:- The reader may see occasional thin black lines - either vertical or horizontal - in the margins or open spaces. These are "shadow marks" usually made by the camera when it passes over an uneven surface. To the greatest extent possible this writer has sought to paint these out on the master copy, before it reaches the cameraman for photo-offset processing.

In order to keep the end cost down by eliminating unnecessary space; and to start each major branch head of family at the top of a column, it was mandatory to cut the copy of the first edition into a number of separate pieces. These were then pasted back together with rubber cement to form the consolidated version with the paragraph arrangement desired. The overlapping of the pieces of copy thus rearranged, sometimes leaves "shadow marks". Also, occasionally, one of these pasted down portions may be slightly off the horizontal line, giving a "cockeyed" appearance to the page. This is never excessive, but should be blamed normally, on this Reproduction Editor, rather than on the original printer.

This is not saying that the First Edition was a perfect example of the publisher's art! In that day, few publications had the uniform quality appearance to which we are accustomed a century later. This was obviously printed by one of the more expensive printers of the day. The 13 engraving reproductions of portraits are beautifully done. The type style, while considered excessively small in terms of what we expect today, is typical of the period in quality work. It is 15 to 18 letters to the inch, (newspaper size)!

REPRODUCTION EDITOR'S NOTE:- This writer pauses at this point because the line of Samuel (39) above, is that to which he connects - JAMES, Capt. JOHN, SAMUEL, ELIJAH (141) and NATHAN (266). A substantial correspondence has been developed in the past several years with others tracing back to SAMUEL.

It might be appropriate here, to point out one of the relatively few apparent errors in the 1869 text. We must presume that #145 above was known to be living in 1740, rather than 1840! If he had, indeed, lived to be 121 years of age, the author would certainly have known more about him.

There was an Errata page on 281 of the 1869 edition listing 11 additions and corrections. These are corrected or stripped into the appropriate places in the text as this Reproduction is developed, to save the reader hand correcting his copy or possibly making an error due to not noticing the Errata page.

Also, if this writer is aware of the existence of later data on some of the families "lost" by the author, that data will be inserted either by a typed NOTE such as this, or by hand lettered insertions at the point. Such insertions are likely to be at least as accurate as the data provided by the 1869 text, because they are based on research by individuals seeking to find their own ancestors w/o any profit, motive or connection to royalty or nobility.} However, this writer cannot vouch for the correctness of such notes except for those he has worked on himself.

There is a tradition that this William used to say that his father, John, had a very old little book, in which was written the name of "William Morgan, of Llandaff," (Wales,) and dated before A. D. 1600, who he said was the father of our first James, the emigrant.

There are other circumstances which strengthen the probabilities of this tradition. This William had also a pair of gold sleeve buttons of antique make, and having WM. rudely but plainly stamped on each, which were said to have come down as an "heir loom" from William, of Llandaff, and which came into my own possession from my father, William A. (375), and were long held by me as a precious relic, until stolen a few years ago. By great effort I discovered a trace of them soon after, but all too late to save them from the crucible of an innocent purchaser, by whom they had been melted with a common mass of old jewelry.

UPDATED MORGAN GENEALOGY:

HERITAGE BOOKS, INC.

JAMES MORGAN OF NEW LONDON, AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

> "Like leaves on trees the race of man is found;
> Now green in youth, now withering on the ground.
> Another race the following spring supplies;
> They fall successive, and successive rise.
> So generations in their course decay;
> So flourish these when those have passed away."
> Speech to Diomede, Homer, Book VI.

JAMES MORGAN, the common ancestor of a numerous family now scattered widely over nearly or quite, every state and territory of the United States, was born in Wales, in 1607, but in what precise locality our honest progenitor first saw the light is uncertain, though probably in Llandaff, Glamorgan Co. The family appears to have removed from Llandaff to Bristol, Eng. on the opposite side of Bristol Channel, a short time at least, perhaps a few years, prior to 1636. The name of his father is unknown, but there is some traditionary evidence that it was William.*

That year, 1636, in the month of March, he and two younger brothers, John and Miles, sailed from Bristol and arrived at Boston, Mass. in April following.

JOHN MORGAN, his next younger brother, who from tradition appears to have been a high churchman and to have exceedingly disliked the austerity of the Puritans, left Boston in disgust for more congenial society in Virginia, soon after their arrival. How far the Morgans of Virginia are descended from him I am unable to say.

MILES MORGAN, the youngest brother, born in 1615, on his arrival at Boston, or soon after, joined a party of emigrants, mostly from Roxbury, of whom Col. Wm Pyncheon was at the head, and founded the settlement of Springfield, Mass.

He is said to have been under 21 years of age at the commencement of this settlement, and to have suppressed the fact of his minority in order to share in the drawing for house lots, which minors were not privileged to do. It is certain that he drew a house lot and afterwards built upon it; and it was the homestead of himself during his life, and of his descendants for many years after. It was situated upon the south side of "Ferry Lane," and in 1845 was sold by the Brewer family to the Conn. River Railroad Co.; their tracks now covering the original lot, and their repair shop standing upon the site of the old Morgan homestead.

He married, about 1643, Prudence Gilbert, of Beverly, Mass., who was a fellow passenger with him in the voyage from England. Of this courtship and marriage, an interesting and curious account is preserved. He had 8 children by this marriage, 4 sons and 4 daughters; and his wife, Prudence, dying 14 Nov. 1660, he next married Elizabeth Bliss, of Springfield, 15 Feb. 1670, dau. of Thomas, by whom he had 1 son only. His children by Prudence were, Mary, b. 14 Dec. 1644; Jonathan, 16 in whom all appear to have reposed a marked degree of confidence and trust.

He was one of the "townsmen" or selectmen of N. London for several years, and was one of the first "Deputy's" sent from N. London plantations to the General Court at Hartford, May session, 1657, (at which date he deposed his age to be "about 50 years;") and was nine times afterwards chosen a member of that grave and important assembly, the last time in 1670. His associates and compeers composing the General Court or Colonial Assembly, in May, 1657, when he was first chosen, were

John Winthrop, Esq. [of Pequot,] Governor.
Thomas Welles, Esq. [of Hartford,] Deputy Governor.

[Jonathan] Brewster,
James Morgan, } [Pequot.]
Matthew Canfield, [Norwalk.]

The names and places above in brackets, are not found in Colonial Records, but I have taken much pains to supply them from other sources, in order to show historically, who they really were, and what towns or plantations then composed the colony of Conn. and were represented. It is seen that Southampton, on Long Island, was one of these plantations.

To this carefully selected body of men, was intrusted the whole sovereign power of the colony, and the administration of its government, in every department, civil, criminal, ecclesiastical and military; embracing original jurisdiction of the most trifling as well as most heinous offences and causes of action, and the minutest details in every department.

James Morgan seems to have impressed this grave body of men with a high sense of his sterling honesty and integrity of character, and it appears that in a controversy between the General Court and the N. London plantation, about boundaries and jurisdiction, it was ordered that the matter should be submitted to three arbiters, mutually agreed upon. N. London at once named their own townsman, James Morgan, really a party in their own interests, but nevertheless the General Court as promptly accepted him, and without naming another, agreed to submit to his sole decision, which when made, seems to have satisfied all parties.

He was an active and useful member of the church under Rev. Richard Blinman's ministry, and his name is prominent in every important movement or proceeding.

"James Morgan, Mr. Tinker and Obadiah Brown, are chosen to seat the people in the meeting house, which they doing, the inhabitants are to rest silent." MINUTES FROM THE RECORD.

In 1661, he was one of a committee of the General Court to lay out the bounds of N. London, "on the east side of the Great River."

In 1662, he was one of a committee to contract "for building a house for the ministry," at New London.

From about this time he signs his name "James Morgan senior of New London,"—his oldest son James, afterwards Capt. James, being then near 21 years of age.

This year, 1662, his list on the town assessment, stands the third highest in amount; and among the tax payers of that year, about one hundred in number, only seven had a list exceeding £200. James Morgan's list was only £250, but this was a large estate in those primitive days.

The spot where he first built his house in Groton in 1657, and where he ever afterwards resided, and where he died, is a few rods southeast of the present dwelling (1868) of Elijah S. Morgan, about 3 miles from Groton Ferry, on the road to Poquonoc Bridge; and this patriarchal homestead from that day down to the present occupant, has descended by inheritance, through an unbroken line of James Morgan's, for six generations. And it is worthy of notice, in connection with this fact, that for eight generations as they hereinafter succeed each other, in regular order of individual precedence, each one is headed by the name of James Morgan.

He died in 1685, aged 78 years, and his estate was divided soon after his death among his four surviving children.

Capt. JAMES, (3) b. 3 Mch, 1644, s. of James, (1)

m. "Mary Vine of Old England," Nov. 1666, died 8 Dec. 1711, age 68. His wife Mary died in 1689, of the "throat distemper," so called, a terrible epidemic which prevailed throughout the country that year, especially in the months of July and August, visiting nearly every family and carrying consternation and death in its trail. She was born in England in 1641, and was 48 years old when she died. After her death he married 2d wife Hannah ———, born in 1640, who d. in 1711, aged 71, a few days only before his own death, but after the date of his will, in which he calls her his "dear and loving wife."

His will is dated in Groton 25 June, 1708, and approved in probate 22 Jan. 1712. In it he bequeaths to his "dear and loving wife Hannah Morgan," his "horse and chaise," barn, and orchard by it, and "the lower field this side of the cross fence which joineth south brook," to enjoy during her life. To his son James, his "field;" one half the barn and all his land at home, subject to the joint control and use of his widow, so long as she so remained. Also to James a lot "in the plain," near the salt marsh, "on the north side of the island." To his son William, "the land he has already a deed of," and 100 acres and one little island in Packanacock plain," that is, my sons Jas and Wm shall have equally." To his "four daughters, Mercy, [record of birth says Mary,] Hannah, Elizabeth and Jerusha," all his cattle, horses and sheep, to be equally divided between them. To his "grandson James Morgan," his saddle, bridle and short gun, and to his "grandson Wm Morgan," his musket.

He was an active member and one of the two first deacons of the first church in Groton; was the principal magistrate, and transacted the chief part of the civil business around him, for many years. At the first town meeting held after the town was incorporated, in Dec. 1705, he was the moderator, and was chosen first townsman or selectman. He was moderator of nearly every town or society meeting until near his death in 1711, and after that for many years his place as moderator was supplied by his two sons, Deacon James and Lieut. John, sometimes the one acting and sometimes the other. He was chosen captain of the first "train band" in Groton, in 1692, under an order of the Governor and Council, authorizing a military company to be formed there, and had been then two years a captain and commander of the "dragoon" force of New London county, under a special commission from the General Court.

Like his father he was one of the Deputies to the General Court from New London from 1689 to 1700, and afterwards one of the first Deputies from the new town of Groton, in 1706; and for several years was a Commissioner to advise and direct the Pequot tribe of Indians in the management of their affairs.

The military titles of these early days, even down to that of ensign, or sergeant, were esteemed as marks of high distinction, and from their peculiar importance, and the care and caution with which the officers were chosen, very justly so. These infant plantations were surrounded by hostile tribes of Indians, overwhelming in numbers; exposed constantly to the inroads of prowling bands, often irritated and always treacherous, and their very existence as well as peace and safety, depended much upon the personal character, the wise sagacity, prudent counsel and conduct, and the cool intrepidity of these chosen military guardians. Hence it was the early practice, when the leading officers of these "train bands" were to be chosen, to open the proceedings by solemn proclamation and prayer, and sometimes a special sermon for the occasion was prepared and preached to the company by their minister.

Capt. James lived and died upon the old patriarchal homestead of his father James, already described.

ELIZABETH, (12) m. Jonathan Starr, 12 Jan. 1698, brother of Thomas, who m. her sister, and had 10 children, viz.—27 Samuel Starr, born 5 Nov. 1699;—28 Elizabeth Starr, 19 Aug. 1701;—29 Jonathan Starr, 19 Aug. 1705;—30 Lucy Starr, 18 July, 1707;—31 Hannah Starr, 10 Dec. 1710;—32 Joseph Starr, 17 July, 1713;—33 Vine Starr, 19 Jan. 1716;—34 Richard Starr, 14 May, 1718;—35 Mary Starr, 30 Aug. 1722;—and 36 Katharine Starr, 18 Feb. 1724.

"The descendants of Jonathan Starr and Elizabeth Morgan have been remarkable for longevity. Eight of his children lived to be 80, and most of them over 85 years of age. One of his daughters, Mrs. Turner, was 100 years and 7 months old. In the family of his son Jonathan, the father, mother and four children averaged 90 years of age. The third Jonathan lived to be 95, and his brother, Capt. Jared Starr, to his 90th year. A similar length of years characterized their partners in marriage. Mrs. Mary (Seabury) Starr lived to the age of 99 years; and Elizabeth, relict of Capt. Joseph Starr, of Groton, (brother of Jonathan 2d,) died at the age of 101 years, 4 months and 8 days."

Capt. JOHN, (4) b. 30 Mch, 1645, s. of James, (1)

m. Rachel Dymond, dau. of John, 16 Nov. 1665, by whom he had 7 children. After her death he m. 2d, Widow Elizabeth Williams, dau. of Lieut. Gov. Wm Jones, of N. Haven, and grand-dau. of Gov. Theophilus Eaton, by whom he had 8 children, in all 15. He removed to Preston about 1692, and died in 1712, aged 67. In his will dated 23 Aug. 1711, proved 12 Feb. 1712, he names his wife Elizabeth and 13 of his children as then living, but it is singular that he makes no mention of his son Joseph, born 1701, who afterwards settled in what is now Preston, m. Ruth Brewster and reared a family of children. The record shows that the probate of this will was appealed from, and in the litigation which followed, this Joseph is mentioned as one of the parties. I had a reference to the case and intended to examine it, but lost or mislaid the reference. He also like his father and brother James, was a prominent public man, Indian commissioner and adviser, deputy to the General Court in 1690 from New London, and in 1693–4 from Preston.

HANNAH, (41) m. Rev. Ephraim Woodbridge, the first minister of Groton, 4 May, 1704, and he was ordained the 8 of Nov. following. He continued pastor of this church till 1724, and died in Dec. of the year following. He was emphatically of a clerical lineage and family. His father was the Rev. John Woodbridge, of Killingworth; his grandfather was Rev. John Woodbridge, of Wiltshire, Eng., who died 1695, in Newbury, Mass.; his great-grandfather was Rev. John Woodbridge, of Stanton, Eng., and he had a brother, Rev. John Woodbridge, first minister at West Springfield, Mass., who had a son Rev. John Woodbridge. He had no son John to succeed him, but one of his grandsons, bearing his own name, Rev. Ephraim Woodbridge, born in Groton, was ordained a minister at New London, 11 Oct. 1769.

REPRODUCTION EDITOR'S NOTE:- The reader may see occasional thin black lines - either vertical or horizontal - in the margins or open spaces. These are "shadow marks" usually made by the camera when it passes over an uneven surface. To the greatest extent possible this writer has sought to paint these out on the master copy, before it reaches the cameraman for photo-offset processing.

In order to keep the end cost down by eliminating unnecessary space; and to start each major branch head of family at the top of a column, it was mandatory to cut the copy of the first edition into a number of separate pieces. These were then pasted back together with rubber cement to form the consolidated version with the paragraph arrangement desired. The overlapping of the pieces of copy thus rearranged, sometimes leaves "shadow marks". Also, occasionally, one of these pasted down portions may be slightly off the horizontal line, giving a "cockeyed" appearance to the page. This is never excessive, but should be blamed normally, on this Reproduction Editor, rather than on the original printer.

This is not saying that the First Edition was a perfect example of the publisher's art! In that day, few publications had the uniform quality appearance to which we are accustomed a century later. This was obviously printed by one of the more expensive printers of the day. The 13 engraving reproductions of portraits are beautifully done. The type style, while considered excessively small in terms of what we expect today, is typical of the period in quality work. It is 15 to 18 letters to the inch, (newspaper size)!

REPRODUCTION EDITOR'S NOTE:- This writer pauses at this point because the line of Samuel (39) above, is that to which he connects - JAMES, Capt. JOHN, SAMUEL, ELIJAH (141) and NATHAN (266). A substantial correspondence has been developed in the past several years with others tracing back to SAMUEL.

It might be appropriate here, to point out one of the relatively few apparent errors in the 1869 text. We must presume that #145 above was known to be living in 1740, rather than 1840! If he had, indeed, lived to be 121 years of age, the author would certainly have known more about him.

There was an Errata page on 281 of the 1869 edition listing 11 additions and corrections. These are corrected or stripped into the appropriate places in the text as this Reproduction is developed, to save the reader hand correcting his copy or possibly making an error due to not noticing the Errata page.

Also, if this writer is aware of the existence of later data on some of the families "lost" by the author, that data will be inserted either by a typed NOTE such as this, or by hand lettered insertions at the point. Such insertions are likely to be at least as accurate as the data provided by the 1869 text, because they are based on research by individuals seeking to find their own ancestors w/o any profit, motive or connection to royalty or nobility.) However, this writer cannot vouch for the correctness of such notes except for those he has worked on himself.

m. Mary Avery, dau. of Capt. James Avery, jun. of Groton, 3 July, 1716. He died Oct. 1729, age 36, and his wife, Mary, b. 1696, long outlived him, and died April, 1780, age 84.

There is a tradition that this William used to say that his father, John, had a very old little book, in which was written the name of "William Morgan, of Llandaff," (Wales,) and dated before A. D. 1600, who he said was the father of our first James, the emigrant.

There are other circumstances which strengthen the probabilities of this tradition. This William had also a pair of gold sleeve buttons of antique make, and having WM. rudely but plainly stamped on each, which were said to have come down as an "heir loom" from William, of Llandaff, and which came into my own possession from my father, William A. (375), and were long held by me as a precious relic, until stolen a few years ago. By great effort I discovered a trace of them soon after, but all too late to save them from the crucible of an innocent purchaser, by whom they had been melted with a common mass of old jewelry.

Yet stay, what wonders love hath wrought!
Here is the hearthstone of a race,
The threshold that their feet have sought,
Here to our view the bounds are brought,
And ivies the old chimneys grace.

Oh! rooms unseen by mortal eyes,
Wherein may move the friendly guest,
Oh! walls invisible that rise
With household gods in unknown guise,
What is there to meet our quest?

Behold, the vanished home uprears
This granite shaft whereon to-day
Wrought in enduring bronze appears
One who shall greet the coming years,
Chief of his race, who seems to say:

Here once an ancient homestead stood,
Gray with long years, of fashion old,
From stately oak, from hallowed wood
Were hewn its beams. and strong and good Uprose its walls, a race to hold.

AVERY

The first trace of the Groton Averys prior to the emigration to America, is found in the church at Ippleden, County Devon, England, where Christopher Avery and Margery Stevens were married.

The marriage license is dated Aug. 16, 1616.

Generation I.

"Christopher Avery, the emigrant ancestor and progenitor of the Avery family, was born in England about 1590. He was a weaver by trade, and came to this country and located at Gloucester, Mass., where he was selectman in 1646, 1652 and 1654. At a court in Salem, he took the freeman's oath, June 29, 1692, and was chosen clerk of the band, constable and clerk of the market. His wife did not come to this country. In 1658, he sold lands at Gloucester and removed to Boston, where on the 16th of March, 1658-9 he purchased land, a small lot, about twenty-six by forty-six feet. It was located in what is now the center of the postoffice building, facing on Devonshire street. The famous old spring, which gave the name to Spring Lane, and which is now preserved under the post-office, was near. This Avery plot was a part of, or at least adjoined, the site of two notable resorts of later days--the well known restaurant whence first came the famous "Julien soup," and the "Stackpole House," not much less famous. The Winthrop estate was not far away, and nearby, in after years, Benjamin Franklin was born. Christopher Avery did not long retain his property, for March 22, 1663, he sold the land to Ambrose Dew, for forty pounds. There had Plain, a mile and a half from the river Thames. He was a member of the first Congregational church at New London. In 1684 the old Blinman edifice, first church of New London, the "unadorned church and water tower of the wilderness," which had stood for thirty years, was sold to Captain Avery for six pounds, with the condition that he should remove it in one month's time. According to tradition, the church was taken down, its materials carried across the river, and added to the house he had already built at Poquonoc. In spite of this analytic and synthetic process, the ancient dwelling seemed to have retained some of its sacred character for two centuries later. It was occupied until July 21, 1894, when a spark from a passing locomotive ignited its well-seasoned frame, and in a short time only the ancient chimney remained to mark the spot of this historic house of eastern Connecticut. A few years later the chimney was taken down, the grounds graded, and a tasteful monument was erected by the descendants of James Avery. He was ensign, lieutenant and captain of the New London companies and served through King Philip's war in command of forty Indians from Stonington, New London and Lyme. In 1676, he was captain of one of the four companies which protected the frontier and for twenty-three years an officer of the town and twelve times deputy to the general court, 1656-80; also assisting judge in the prerogative court, and was most prominent in matters relating to the church, as references to him in such connections are numerous. He married 1st Nov. 10, 1643, Joanna Greenslade, born about 1622. She died after 1693. He married 2nd, Mrs. Abigail (Ingraham) Chesebrough, widow of Joshua Holmes, July 4, 1698. He died April 18, 1700. His widow was living at late as 1714."

CHAPTER TWO.

JAMES, JUNIOR.

JAMES AVERY, jr., like his father before him, was an important man of affairs. He was deputy to the General Court at Hartford, for New London, six times from 1690 to 1702, Commissioner of the Peace, Lieutenant and Captain of the trainband, an advisor and counselor of the Pequot tribe, and a committee on boundary disputes between towns and the location of public lands. He and his wife joined the 1st Church of Christ in New London, in 1672. He, with Mr. Crary, appeared before the General Court at its May session, 1696, in behalf of the inhabitants on the East side of New London river, to grant the said people liberty to embody themselves into church estate. This was the origin of the first church in Groton. Capt. James Avery and his wife are the first names in the list of those who were in full communion in the Church of Christ, in Groton, in the old Church Record, begun by John Owen, pastor, before 1727. Their tombstones, in a very good state of preservation, stand near the center of West burying-ground at Poquonoc. J. J. C.

vented a press and was a printer. We extract from the Boston Printers' Exchange of April 23, 1878, this paragraph: "There has lately come into our possession a small newspaper, the Star, size 5 by 7, published in Augusta, Me., 1832, by B. F. Chandler, then a boy of sixteen. This was probably the first amateur paper ever published in this country. It was started with a capital of twelve cents. The boy continued his business for two years, then sold out his office for two hundred dollars, bought books, and entered college, receiving a scientific education, and is now and has been for many years a civil engineer in the United States service, stationed at the Portsmouth navy-yard, where many and great improvements have been made under his superintendence. The ruling passion is, however, still strong. We have lately sold him a Gordon press and a good variety of job type, with which he amuses himself during his leisure moments. He prints for his friends without compensation. He is a printer from an inherent love of the art, like the late ex-Mayor N. B. Shurtleff, of Boston. We have seen specimens of his work, which are equal to that of some of our best printers." Since this was published Mr. Chandler has purchased two entire printing-offices, has had three presses at one time, and nearly two hundred fonts of type. His office is well furnished with the signs and characters of all the arts and sciences, astronomical, chemical, mathematical, commercial, etc. It is strictly an amateur office. "Leisure hours, when not engaged in professional duties, are spent in 'sticking type' or 'kicking the Gordon,' for the fun of it."

After studying two years in Boston, Mr. Chandler received an appointment as engineer on the "Brunswick and Florida Railroad." He went to Florida for one winter, sleeping on the ground and generally "roughing it," and entirely recovered his health. From Florida he went to Augusta, married, Oct. 25, 1839, Silvina Parris, daughter of Luther Briggs, of Pembroke, Mass., and continued civil engineering. He became noted for his skill, and was employed by the town, by the State, and by the United States. When Augusta received its city charter Mr. Chandler was made civil engineer of the city, and was often appointed by the courts to survey the boundaries of disputed lands, and also "referee" in many of these claims. This led him to the study of law, but from distaste for the profession he abandoned it shortly after his admission to the bar.

About 1841, the British government needing a first-class engineer, engaged Mr. Chandler, through Sir John Caldwell, to go to the Grand Falls of the St. John River, New Brunswick, and make surveys and plans for the improvement of the rapids. This engaged him for a year, but Sir John suddenly died while on a visit from England. With his death the scheme of improvement ended, and Mr. Chandler returned to Augusta, entered the employ of the "Kennebec Locks and Canal Company," and was there and elsewhere in active labor for years in his profession. In July, 1852, he was appointed civil engineer in United States naval service, and ordered on duty at Portsmouth navy-yard. This yard was then a very small and poor affair, and Mr. Chandler at once began to build and make permanent improvements. For twenty-seven years he was in charge at Portsmouth, and he has made it one of the best and most complete navy-yards in the United States. He made all the designs, and the work was done under his supervision. By his advice and through him the national government has expended thousands on thousands of dollars, and has never suffered the loss of one by negligence, carelessness, or trickery of his. In 1875, Mr. Chandler was president of a commission detailed to lay out territory for the development of a first class navy-yard at New London Station, Groton, Conn. Under his direction and superintendence the surveys were made, plans drafted, etc., and in July, 1879, he was transferred from Portsmouth to build up the new yard. From the time of his transfer the work of improvement has been going on, and at the present time (September, 1881) he has constructed a large brick building, a drill-room for naval recruits in the training-school. Mr. Chandler has served the longest period of any of the engineers in the naval service on navy-yard duty, and ranks as "commander" on the staff. During his service he has been temporarily on duty at Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Norfolk, and Pensacola, and has been frequently called to Washington by the Navy Department for consultation.

Of his eight children seven attained maturity, viz.: Silvia P. (deceased), Helen A. (deceased), Benjamin P. (deceased), Josiah A. (deceased), Joseph, Sarah Jane (deceased), and Frank. All were well educated. Joseph and Frank reside in Waverly, Mass. Mr. Chandler is a splendid specimen of the "genus homo," striking in personal appearance, resembling the poet Longfellow, for whom he is often taken. He is leal and loyal to his friendships, and a gentleman of broad, liberal views and intellectual culture, consequently an extremely agreeable social companion. His character through life has been marked by honesty, integrity, and honor, and he to-day, among the many officers of the navy, holds no second place in the regards of his large circle of friends, while his pre-eminent ability in his profession is conceded by all.[1]

CHAPTER XLVI.

The Averys and the Old Avery Mansion.[2]—The old Avery mansion is believed to be the oldest dwelling-house in the town of Groton standing on its original foundations. It dates back two and a quarter centuries. James Avery, born in England in 1620, who came to Massachusetts Bay with his father, Christopher, in 1630, was raised on the farm near the fishing-station on Cape Ann, where Gloucester now stands, married Junna Greenslade at Boston in 1642, and with her and three children came to the Pequot settlement at the mouth of the Thames in 1650, with what was called the Cape Ann colony. He lived on the land allotted to him on the west side of the river until 1656, purchasing such other lands there as he considered desirable; but when he discovered the superior qualities of the broad plains of Pequonoc, a mile or two east of the river, he determined to cross over and settle there. When he removed he sold his possessions on the western side and invested all his means in the acquisition of lands around his new residence, which was the middle portion, or first installment of this ancient Avery mansion, giving his place the name of Birch Plains. There he resided for nearly forty years, or until his death in 1694, during which time he held most of the principal offices of the new town of New London, of which it was then a part; a magistrate on the bench, and was a representative in the State Legislature for fourteen consecutive years.

THE OLD AVERY MANSION, ERECTED IN 1656.

Ten years before his death, when he found it difficult to travel two or three miles and cross the river to church every Sabbath, he purchased the building that had been occupied there as a church edifice and watch-tower, which was exposed to sale to make room for a new meeting-house, took it in pieces, transported it over the river and through the woods to his place, and added it with improvements to his dwelling, where it still stands as a western part of the old mansion. The first story of the addition was continued as a single great room, and during the balance of his life Sabbath services were generally held there.

It is matter of history that dwelling-houses of the better classes of people in those days were of two stories, the upper jutting over the lower about a foot on the front side, with roof high and steep, frames of white oak, timbers much larger than those now in use, and smoothly-finished beams all in sight. Between the inner and outer sheathing of the sides burnt or sun-dried clay was built in between "the clay boards," since called clapboards. And the old Avery house is perhaps the best specimen of that class of ancient architecture extant.

There, after the lapse of two and a quarter centuries, stands the old double and triple mansion, which, with its surroundings, has descended through eight or nine generations from eldest son to eldest son; in the early times known as "the two-chimney house," from the many years that it was the only house in town that had more than one chimney, and so diversified by the additions of later generations in its style of architecture that, in nautical parlance, it

If its history could be written, with due regard to the current manners and customs from one generation to another, its pages of eccentricities, from the standpoint of our own times, would be singularly interesting. It is to be supposed that the funeral ceremonies at the burial of James Avery were not unsuited to a man of his quality,—not unfashionable, for fashion ruled then as it rules to-day, and while the poor were quietly and silently buried, the rich were carried to the grave on the shoulders of the people with great display. When the Rev. Thomas Cobbett was buried at Ipswich, Mass., in 1685, it was "Voted, that some person be appointed to look to the burning of the wine and heating of the cider for the occasion;" and it is recorded that the expenses of his funeral was only one shilling short of twenty pounds. Indeed, the indisputable records show that there were used thirty-two gallons of wine, barrels of cider, more than a hundred pounds of sugar, and four dozen gloves, and this was but the funeral of a poor clergyman. Felt says the funeral charges of a highly-respectable man at Salem as late as 1739 were ten times as much. When Wigglesworth, an eminent divine, was buried by his parish, in 1753, six gold rings were furnished for the pall-bearers and eighteen pairs of white kid gloves for attending ministers. It even became necessary for the General Court to interfere and pass an act to prevent extravagant funerals, prohibiting such splendid spectacles on Sunday by declaring that they should not take place "on the Lord's day," until no one could be buried on that day without license first being granted by a justice of the peace.

If the old white-oak timbers, almost petrified by time, and as enduring of fibre as when they stood under their green foliage on Groton hills, could only tell us of all the interesting vicissitudes of their eventful years, their tales would equal those of the Arabian Nights. We might fancy the astonishment of the old timbers in 1718 to see the first tea ever brought to this country, which the women at first knew not how to steep, and by mistake served up as greens with a piece of boiled pork; and after learning how to make it, how long it was before the people could learn to like it as a beverage. If they could talk they might tell of their surprise at their first sight of wheat-flour in 1720 as an article of food, so high in price that only a very few rich families could afford it, the masses for years afterwards continuing, as formerly, to use exclusively bread made of rye and Indian corn; how they drank water and roasted rye until, in 1770, they reluctantly learned the use of coffee; how families sat around the fire and read and worked in the evening by the light of the pine-knots, burning clear and bright from their mixture of pitch and turpentine, until tallow candles were invented as well as a lamp to burn fish-oil; how much they were surprised to see a horse in a wagon driven up the lawn in 1730, and in a sleigh in 1740, the first wagon or sleigh ever seen in town, for at that time all horses paced, and none were taught to trot until forty years afterwards, riding having always been on horseback, with the gentleman astride on the saddle, and his lady companion behind him, sitting sideways on the pillion, supported by her arm around his waist. They would tell us also of the wonderful curiosity with which the household examined and tasted two or three boiled potatoes on the breakfast-table in 1733, the first vegetable of the kind raised in this country in beds of the garden, as we raise beets and carrots; and also of the care with which, early in the nineteenth century, the ladies of the household cultivated in their flower-beds the round, red, love-apples that they never dreamed of serving up for the table as a dish of tomatoes. The brown weather-boards outside and the smoothly-polished woodwork inside would tell us of their infinite disgust when, in 1734, for the first time in this country, paint was used to cover their bronzed surfaces, and that to themselves none was applied until near a century later; when, in 1783, wall-paper first made its appearance, and at a much later period when the white and silver-sanded floors were swept and covered with woolen carpets. And then how many changes have they witnessed in the habits and amenities of social life! Only captains, merchants, schoolmasters, magistrates, and doctors, with their wives and daughters, were entitled to the address of "Mr." and "Mrs." (for common man and wife were called "goodman" and "goodwife," and their children "goody"), insomuch that the General Court of Massachusetts passed a special act that one of its citizens, who had been convicted of stealing corn from an Indian, should no longer be called "Mr." It was not until after 1730 that any person in this country had a middle name, so desirous were the Puritans to avoid the pattern of royalty; and this desire is apparent up to a much later day,—not one who appears on the battle-roll of the Groton monument tablet has a middle name. The old frame would also tell us of the embarrassment in date and records produced in 1752 by an act of the British Parliament changing the beginning of the new year from the 25th of March to the 1st of January, and setting forward the calendar eleven days, so as to make the 1st the 11th of the month, producing the change from old to new style. It would tell us how the good Puritans reluctantly abandoned their plan of simply numbering the months from one to twelve, and adopted the Julian names, which they considered popish and as perpetuating the names of heathen idols. And if it were to tell us these things it would but speak as with the voice of true history.

The ancestral line who have inhabited the ancient edifice, from father to son, if we add Christopher, who came from Massachusetts to reside with his son James about ten years after he settled at Pequonoc, is as follows:

"The ancestral line who have inhabited the ancient edifice, from James Avery, the old Christopher, who came from Massachusetts with his son James about ten years after he settled at Pequonnock, is in the lane!"

Christopher Avery, b. in England, d. 1681; James Avery (1), b. in England, 1620, d. 1694; James Avery (2), b. Dec. 16, 1646, d. Aug. 22, 1728; Ebenezer Avery, b. May 1, 1678, d. July 19, 1752; Elder Parke Avery, b. Dec. 9, 1710, d. March 14, 1797; Lieut. Parke Avery, b. March 22, 1741, d. Dec. 20, 1821; Youngs Avery, b. April 2, 1767, d. May 30, 1837; Parke William Avery, and his son, James D. Avery, its present occupant.

To the large quantity of arms and ammunition that the first James had accumulated in the course of his service against the Indians—for the State furnished neither one nor the other to any considerable extent—the second James, who from his will was evidently a gun-fancier, made large additions, and bequeathed to each of his seven sons "one-seventh of all my arms, guns, and swords," in addition to an equal share of his property, and to each of his five daughters he gave as a last bequest "a silver spoon," that, after the folk-lore of the time, it might be said each of them "was born with a silver spoon in her mouth." Ebenezer became a man of large possessions, his land extending, according to tradition, from Dunbar's Mill (still standing, north of the Stonington turnpike) to Eastern Point, and from river to river. Capt. Parke, sometimes called Elder Parke, turned the great room of the old house into a church after the Revolution on Sundays, and himself preached, without fee or reward, in resistance to the tithe system of the standing order, carefully seeing that his negro servants hitched and fed the horses of his congregation during service. Lieut. Parke was severely wounded in the battle of Fort Griswold. Indeed, the nine Averys who were killed in that battle, and nearly as many more who were wounded, were all of this family, and most of the wounded were taken to the old house and cared for after the battle. His son Youngs married Eunice, the daughter of Capt. William Latham, who commanded at Fort Griswold on the morning of the battle until Ledyard took command, and their son, Parke William, named after both grandfathers, who were veterans of Fort Griswold, succeeded to the inheritance, which has passed to the next generation, and is now owned and occupied by James Denison Avery, the town clerk.

CHAPTER XLVII.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

Jeremiah George Harris was born at Pequonnoc, in the town of Groton, Conn., Oct. 23, 1809. He is descended from two old English families, who came to New England about the time that Governor Winthrop located his colony on the shores of Massachusetts Bay. Over the chancel of the church edifice at Pequonnoc is a memorial window, on which are the following inscriptions: "Christopher Avery, born in England, d. 1681; James Avery, b. 1620, in England, d. 1694; James Avery, 2d, b. Dec. 16, 1646, d. Aug. 22, 1728; Ebenezer Avery, b. May 1, 1678, d. July 19, 1752; Elder Parke Avery, b. Dec. 9, 1710, d. March 14, 1797; Lieut. Parke Avery, b. March 22, 1741, d. Dec. 20, 1821; Youngs Avery, b. April 2, 1767, d. May 30, 1837." Mary, eldest daughter of Youngs Avery, born Jan. 19, 1790, was on the 25th of November, 1807, married to Richard Harris, of Norwich, with whom she had two children, Jeremiah and Erastus, and died at Groton, Feb. 2, 1881.

On the ancestral cenotaph in Groton Cemetery are the following inscriptions:

> "WALTER HARRIS, b. in England, 1600, d. at New London, 1654.

When Christopher Avery and son James came to Salem, in 1630, they proceeded at once to the farms adjacent to the European fishing-station on Cape Ann, and settled there as farmers, taking a leading part in local affairs that resulted in establishing the town of Gloucester. Later in life they moved to the then far West, and were among the first who settled at the mouth of the Thames and in the valley of the Pequonoc. It was in 1632 that Walter Harris settled with his young family at Weymouth, on the western shore of the bay. As Christopher Avery was influenced by the youthful aspirations of his son James to follow the western way of the star of empire, so was Walter Harris influenced by his eldest son Gabriel. Even at that early period of our history there seems to have been a prevailing desire of the young men to move westward, and we find both these families at the mouth of the Thames as early as 1650, taking a leading part in the formation of the first settlement of Europeans in New London County.

Mr. Harris became a journalist as soon as he was of age, beginning his career as associate editor of the Political Observer at New London in 1830, afterwards editor of the New Bedford Daily Gazette, and then acquiring celebrity at Boston as a political writer, he was invited in 1838 by distinguished men of Washington City to go to Tennessee, where he established the Nashville Union, which reflected the influential political opinions of Gen. Andrew Jackson, and represented the rising fortunes of James K. Polk from congressman to Governor and President.

It is well said by a leading journal that in this con-intimate friends know to be only just and true. The National Intelligencer, of Washington, quoting an eulogy from the New York Courier and Enquirer, says of it, "And far from being chargeable with the usual exaggeration of partial friendship in regard to the dead, utters no more than the literal truth of one of the best men, in both his public and his private character, that it has ever been our fortune to meet," and with the editors of the Intelligencer, Messrs. Gales and Seaton, Mr. Barber was on terms of intimacy. Though not a communicant, Mr. Barber was a constant attendant upon the services of the Congregational Church, in which he was reared, and a supporter of the institutions of religion, and his house was one where the ministers of the church were cordially received and hospitably entertained. In these days it is well to review the political life of those who represented the country in its earlier history, when the old-fashioned writers of economy, integrity, and devotion to its best interests were not at a discount, and may a review of the public life of the subject of this sketch prove useful to those who have known of him, though living too late to have known him personally.

Hon. Elisha Haley.—Elisha Haley, son of Caleb and Mary (Helmes) Haley, was born in Groton, two miles from Mystic River, Jan. 21, 1776. He had in early life the common-school advantages of a farmer's boy, and that was all the schools of the land ever gave him. He continued on the farm with his father until his marriage, July 24, 1803, to Nancy, daughter of Nathan Crary, of Groton, and until 1816, when he purchased a little piece of land, and lived with his brother Stephen, in a house on the place now occupied by Warren Haley. There he continued to reside until 1846 or 1847, when he removed to Centre Groton, and made his home there until his death, Jan. 22, 1859. He was a great student, and acquired much more valuable practical knowledge than many collegiates. He was well developed physically, and had a well-balanced mind. He was stirring and active, a leader in society and in politics. He knew no such word as fail. Whenever he took hold of a measure or principle it was carried to success. He was never a candidate for any office and failed of an election, and he was popular not only in his own town, but throughout the range of his extended acquaintance. He came from good Democratic stock, and was firm and fearless in the advocacy of those principles. He was intrusted with various important positions in his native town, represented it in the General Assembly of Connecticut for several years, was State senator more than once, and was early elected member of Congress from Connecticut. He was always ready to help every scheme of public improvement. In 1816–18 was largely interested in constructing turnpikes in both Connecticut and Rhode Island, and held stock in several of these companies more or less during his life. He was for several years a captain in the State militia, and was universally respected and honored by his townsmen. He was a representative farmer, and owned six hundred broad acres in Groton. Mrs. Haley was born Nov. 30, 1780, and died Sept. 11, 1860. She was a consistent member of the Baptist Church for many years. Their children are Henry, born May 11, 1804; Giles, born Sept. 24, 1805 (deceased); Austin, born May 11, 1810; Abby A. (Mrs. William F. Mitchell), born May 28, 1814; and Eliza, born Nov. 13, 1818.

Henry has always been a farmer, residing at Centre Groton since 1844; had common-school education, taught district school several terms, and married, June 15, 1853, Mary Ann, daughter of John B. and Betsey (Haley) Burrows. They have had three children,—Virginia (Mrs. Nelson Morgan; she has one son, John A.), Betsey A. (Mrs. Albert C. Burrows; she has two daughters), John B. (residing with his father; he has four daughters). Mr. Haley is a quiet, law-abiding citizen, never accepting any public position, even refusing to sit on a jury. He owns about three hundred and fifty acres of land, and, like his father, is a strong Democrat. As long as the Democrats were in power the January meetings were held at the Haley residence, and it was the regular place for holding Democratic caucuses.

John J. and Deacon A. L. Avery.—Capt. James Avery, the first American ancestor of the numerous Avery families of Groton, was born at Salisbury, England, in 1620, and emigrated to America with his father, Christopher, and for a time settled at Gloucester, Mass., where he married Joanna Greenslade, and afterwards moved to New London, Conn., where he was granted land, Oct. 19, 1650; had the fifth lot of six acres on "Cape Ann Lane," and settled there in 1651. In 1652 and 1653 he with others received grants of land in South Groton. He was a man of mark in the community, was a leading member of the first church organization in New London, and was assessed in 1664 on property valued at two hundred and thirty-six pounds. In June, 1668, with Cary Latham, was appointed by the town to treat with the Mohegan chief Uncas and settle the boundary line, a very important trust; was twelve times deputy to the General Court, for fifteen or twenty years was commissioner (justice), was a noted Indian-fighter, and was in active service through King Philip's war; was assistant judge of the County Court, was chosen townsman in 1660, and held the office twenty-three years. He removed to Pequonnock between 1660 and 1670, and died there in 1694. A part of the house now occupied by James Avery, of Groton, a lineal descendant, was built by him, and has been continuously in possession of the family for seven generations. He left several children.

James Avery, Jr., was born at Gloucester, Mass., Dec. 16, 1646; married Deborah, daughter of Edward Stallyon, Feb. 20, 1669; with his wife, stands first on church records of Groton, admitted profession not given. They had twelve children. Mr. Avery died Aug. 22, 1728. James Avery (3) married Mary Griswold. He was born April 20, 1673, and had eight children. The line of descent continues through John, his son, born 1700, married Mary Elizabeth Morgan; Elijah, baptized Sept. 15, 1734, married Prudence Avery, and had three children,—Caleb, Elizabeth, who married Wm. Eldredge, and John J., to Albert L.

John J., born March 4, 1776, was therefore in the sixth generation from James (1). He was born in Groton, Conn., as were all his ancestors following James. He was a well-to-do farmer, was modest and unassuming in his manners, owned seven hundred acres of land, was one of Groton's leading farmers, and one of the solid, substantial men of his day. He married Nancy, daughter of James Murdoch, of Saybrook, in 1794, and had twelve children,—Maria M., born Jan. 26, 1796, died July 13, 1867; Elijah, born May 27, 1798, died 1834; Dean Loy, born Feb. 14, 1800, died April, 1824; George Anson, born Jan. 28, 1802, died May 8, 1856; Delia A. (Mrs. Samuel B. Wheeler); Carlton M., born April 24, 1806; Courtland, born Dec. 18, 1807; Erastus, born Dec. 8, 1809; Albert L., born July 12, 1812; Oscar F. and Amanda M., born May 24, 1813; and Solon C., born May 27, 1816, died July, 1854. Mr. Avery was a Whig in politics. He died Oct. 25, 18—. At this writing (June, 1881) Carlton, Amanda, and Albert are the surviving children.

Albert L. was born on the place in Groton, near the Thames, where F. Bill now resides. He received his education at the district schools of Groton, and the then highly-celebrated "Bacon Academy," at Colchester. His home was with his father until his marriage, March 15, 1837, to Phebe Esther, daughter of Deacon Charles Wheeler, of North Stonington. She lived but a short time.

Immediately after his marriage Mr. Avery removed to Eastern Point, Groton, and has been resident there since. Quite a marked contrast exists between the state of the Point then and now. Surely if the man who makes two blades of grass grow where only one grew before is a public benefactor, why is not Mr. Avery entitled to the same distinction? Here has his life-work been given. The best road in Groton runs from the Point to New London, but when Mr. Avery first came there there was no road for quite a distance, and the rest of the way it was but a gate-road, with five gates to open. The nicely-graded streets, the beautiful villages of cottages, evidences of refined and cultured inmates, are most all indebted to Mr. Avery for their existence. Alone, with far-seeing sagacity, he discerned the opportunity of development, and in spite of the opposition of neighbors and friends, has convinced them that he was right. He commenced his married life with two hundred and fifty dollars cash capital. The next year he built the house where he now resides, at the cost of one thousand dollars, and for ten years improved the land. At the expiration of that time he had gotten it nicely into improvement, well stocked, and all improvements, stock, etc., paid for except one hundred and twenty dollars. He then purchased the land (three hundred acres) from his father, his brother Erastus purchasing the remainder of his father's possessions in this part of Groton, over three hundred acres more. He ran in debt for the entire purchase-money, eight thousand dollars. He had then conceived the idea, for which some persons called him crazy, of making a watering-place and summer resort of the pleasant point. In pursuance of this object he sold to Capt. Fisk, of the "Ocean House," a piece of land for a merely nominal price, to secure the building of another house. At that time (1842) there was but Mr. Avery's residence and the "Ocean House" on the point. Since then, by Mr. Avery's persistent labor and energy, a three-rod road was laid out on the bank of the river, about 1871, and in addition to the other residences spoken of, thirty-eight summer residences have been built by wealthy gentlemen from various places. In connection with this improvement, the steamboat "Cecil" was built to ply between New London, Pequot House, Edgecombe House, and Ocean House. The round trip was made every hour through the day during the summer season. The travel increased so that in 1880 there were two boats on the same route. (Mr. Avery has a free life-pass on this line for his services in developing Eastern Point.) The boat from Norwich to Watch Hill makes two calls a day, and several other lines make regular stops. The streets have been made under Mr. Avery's personal supervision, at his expense and the cottage-owners', and although done by permission of the selectmen, he has never called on the town for a dollar. He paid nearly four hundred dollars himself to improve one street. Mr. Avery married Joanna B. Wheeler, sister of the first wife, Jan. 1, 1839. She died March 5, 1866. Their children are George A., born March 4, 1840; Rebecca W., Jan. 17, 1842; Maria L., Feb. 5, 1844; Martha W., who died aged seven years; Augustus P., June 11, 1849; John D., June 8, 1852; Jerusha P., Sept. 17, 1855; Thomas W., Dec. 26, 1858; and Annie H., April 20, 1861. He married Mrs. Abbie J. Burrows, of Norwich, Feb. 8, 1869. Although never seeking office, Mr. Avery has been called to fill various representative positions, was two terms on State Board of Agriculture, was one of the originators of the New London County Agricultural Society, and served as president two years, declining the "third term." He has at various times been selectman; was chosen in 1865 to represent Groton in the General Assembly of the State. Mr. Avery particularly distinguished himself in the Legislature by his determined opposition to the attempted removal of the county-seat from New London to Norwich, and by a telling speech and active labors he rendered efficient service and acquired great popularity. Mr. Avery has been a consistent member of the Congregational Church for

Colonel Ebenezer Avery was the son of James Avery 3d, born April 20, 1673, at New London, Conn., died September 18, 1754, who married at New London, Conn., Mary Griswold, daughter of Matthew

Griswold of "Black Hall," Lyme, Conn., the founder of the town of Lyme, and of Hannah Wolcott his wife; son of James Avery, Jr., born at Gloucester, Mass., December 15, 1646, died at Groton, Conn., August 22, 1738. He was Lieutenant in the Connecticut Colonial Militia. He married at New London, Conn., on February 20, 1669, Deborah Sterling, daughter of Edward Sterling of New London, Conn., and Margaret his wife. This name was probably Sterling, but it has caused considerable confusion to historians; some of them called his wife Deborah Satllyou, others give the name Deborah Stallon. They resided on the Groton side of the Thames River, Conn. He was the son of Captain James Avery of New London, Conn., born in Salisbury, County of Wilts, England, in 1620, died in New London, Conn., in 1694. He came to America in 1630, with his father Christopher Avery of Gloucester, Mass., and afterwards New London, Conn., with Governor John Winthrop in the ship Arabella and landed at Salem, Mass., on June 12, 1630. Christopher Avery was born in 1589 in Salisbury, County of Wilts, England, of a very ancient and distinguished family. The arms of the family are: Gules, a fesse between three besants or. Crest: Two lions gambs or supporting a besant. Motto: "Fidelis." He was a Selectman of Gloucester, Mass., from 1646 to 1654 and freeman and townsman of the Colony of New London, in October, 1669. He died in New London on March 12, 1679. His son

Captain James Avery was agent for the Crown in New London in 1659. He married on November 10, 1643, Johanna Greenslade of Boston, Mass., born in 1622, died in 1669. This marriage was recorded in Gloucester, Mass. He was successively Ensign, Lieutenant, and Captain of the "Trainband" of New London. He was twelve times Deputy to the General Court from 1668 to 1690 and a Judge. He was Lieutenant and afterwards Captain in King Philip's War and served with great distinction in the Swamp Fight on December 19, 1675, in command of the volunteers from New London, Stonington, and Norwich. In 1676 he was Captain of one of the four companies of volunteers which protected the frontiers.--Hubbard's Narrative, pages 125 to 131.

Lydia Potter, wife of Ebenezer Colfax, was the daughter, born March 12, 1781, of Joshua Potter of Rhode Island and Lydia Coit his wife, born April, 1759, whom he married May 4, 1780. She was the daughter of Samuel Coit, born October 14, 1726, died in November, 1792, who on February 18, 1753, married Elizabeth Richards. Samuel Coit, son of John Coit, was descended from the Coits of Coity Castle, the seat in 1091 of Paymus de Tuberville, one of the Twelve Norman Knights, situated a mile north of Penbout on Ogor, Wales. They bore arms: Sable on a chevron between three spears heads argent, three cross crosslets of the first.

Crest: A forearm emerging from flames holding a snake.

Motto: "Virtus sola nobilitat."

John Coit, the ancestor of the family in America, came from Glamorganshire, Wales, before 1638, when he settled in Salem. In 1644 he removed to Gloucester, Mass., where he was Selectman in 1648. In 1650 he removed to New London where he received a grant of land near that of James Avery--spelled "Avereye" in his grant,--who was also from Gloucester. He married Mary Gammers or Jenners, of England, and had four children. Their son Deacon Joseph Coit married on July 15, 1667, Martha Harris of

Genealogical Notes of the Avery Family

THE FIRST OF THE AVERY name in New England was Christopher^1, the son of Christopher of Torbrain, Devon, England, the latter a weaver. The marriage of Christopher^1 Avery of Ipplepen and Margery Stephens of Abbots Kerswell on August 26, 1616 is recorded in the church registry of Exeter, Devon. This Christopher^1 is first mentioned in the early records of Gloucester, Massachusetts in May, 1642 in the allotment of house lots. He had come to New England, probably about 1630, with his son James^2, then about eleven years old, leaving his wife, Margery, in England.

Father and son remained in Gloucester for several years and are frequently mentioned in the town records there. Christopher held a number of elective offices in Gloucester. James^2 was married there to Joanna Greenslade on November 10, 1643. About 1650 James^2 moved to Pequot, now New London, Connecticut, and was joined there by his father, Christopher, in 1665. The father died in New London in March, 1679.

James^2 Avery was granted very extensive holdings of land in New London, including areas in what later became the towns of Groton, Stonington, and Preston. He was prominent in town and colony political and military affairs. Before 1660 he built a house in Groton near what is now U.S. Route 1, about a mile and a half east of the Thames River. The site of this early home, destroyed by fire in 1894, is now marked by a monument and small park near the present Groton shopping center. Captain James^2 Avery died at his home in Groton on April 18, 1700, leaving three daughters and four sons. From two of these sons, James^3 and John^3, are descended the several clockmakers and craftsmen who are the special subjects of this work. Nothing is known of any craft work by any member of these first four or five generations of Avery men. Most of them were active in town, church, and military affairs, and many of them held important elective offices.

John^6 Avery and his son, John^7, great-grandson and great-great grandson of James^3, and another John^6, great-grandson of John^3, the brother of James^3, are the three principal clockmakers and craftsmen with whom we are here concerned.

THE AVERYS OF GROTON.

It is highly probable that the Avery family is of Norman origin and came to England with the Conqueror in the eleventh century. Several members of the family were granted Coats of Arms, one of which, granted to William Avery of Fillongley, in the county of Warwick, in 1579, has been often copied in this country. The connection between Christopher Avery and the other members of the family in England is not yet known, but it is hoped that investigations preliminary to the publication of the history of the Groton Averys, which volume is now (1888) in preparation, will determine the question.

Contemporary with Christopher Avery of Gloucester were: John Avery, who lived at Dorchester in 1842, removed to Boston and died on the last day of July, 1654; Thomas Avery of Salem, who came in the "John and Mary" (1633), was a blacksmith, and became a freeman on the twenty-eighth day of December, 1643; and Dr. William Avery of Dedham, who came to this country in 1654, became a freeman in 1677 and died at Boston in March, 1687, aged about 65. See Savage's "Genealogical Dictionary of New England." The known descendants of these contemporaries are comparatively few.

The houses of Dr. William Avery of Dedham and of Christopher Avery of Gloucester were united (probably for the first time in America) by the marriage of Catherine Hitchcock Tilden and Elroy McKendree Avery, in 1870.

Avery^{7}; Amos W. Avery^{6}; Abraham Avery^{5}; Wm. Avery^{4}; John Avery^{3}; James Avery^{2}; Christopher Avery^{1}.

1. CHRISTOPHER AVERY,

A weaver, was born in England about 1590. It is known that a Christopher Avery buried his wife, Mary, at Salisbury, in 1591. Possibly, she was the mother of our Christopher.

There are two traditions concerning his emigration. The first is, that he came from Salisbury, Wilts County, England, with Governor John Winthrop, in the transport "Arbella," and landed at Salem, June 12, 1630. According to the other, he came over with John Winthrop, the younger, in 1631. The tradition in one branch of the family is that, on the voyage, the subsequent governor of Connecticut formed an attachment for the lad, James Avery, which ripened into a friendship that lasted through life, and finally culminated in the marriage of Samuel, the youngest son of James, to the governor's granddaughter. Christopher settled at Gloucester, Massachusetts, where he was a selectman of the town from 1646 to 1654. He removed to Boston in 1658, and, on the eighth of August, 1665, was at New London, where he bought the house, orchard and lot of Robert Burrows, in the town plot. He claimed exemption from watching and training, on account of age, in June, 1667, was made a freeman of the colony in October, 1669, and died in New London, March 12, 1679. He was the father of the founder of a family that has representatives in every state in the Union.

2. CAPTAIN JAMES AVERY,

The only child of Christopher and properly the founder of the family that we call the Groton Averys, was born in England about 1620. He came to America with his father. His mother was in England in 1653; it is not known whether she ever came to America or not. He married Joanna Greenslade of Boston, November 10, 1643. Nothing is known of her ancestry. She received a letter of dismissal from the church at Boston to the one at Gloucester, in 1644. The names of the oldest three of their children are the first on the Gloucester registry of births. In 1650, he removed from Gloucester to New London, where his friend, the younger Winthrop, had begun a settlement five years before. The births of his three children were transferred from the Gloucester to the New London registry and the names now appear as the first thereon, giving a misleading appearance to the latter. Other births were registered from time to time. The whole list is as follows: Hannah^3, born October 12, 1644, married Ephraim Minor; James, Jr.^{3}, born December 16, 1646; Mary^3, born February 19, 1648, married Joseph Minor; Thomas^3, born in New London, May 6, 1651; JOHN^3, born February 10, 1654; Rebecca^3, born October 6, 1656, married William Potts, August 5, 1678; Jonathan^3, born January 5, 1659, died August 14, 1691 (he might have married, but we have no record of it); Christopher^3, born April 30, 1661, died August, 1681; Samuel^3, born August 14, 1664; Joanna, ——— ——— 1669.

Mr. Homer D. L. Sweet of Syracuse, who has worked on the Avery genealogy for thirty years, thinks that "this last is an imperfect record of the death of Joanna, the mother, as in the year following, 1670, James was admitted to the First Church of Christ. Had his wife been living, she would, likely, have joined at the same time." The inference is natural and legitimate, but the premises probably are not correct, as will appear below.

At New London, James Avery seems at once to have taken an active part in private business and public affairs. He received a land grant from the townsmen, October 19, 1650, and a town lot early in 1651. But ideas grew and there was a quick thirsting after large domains. Among the early grants was one of "Little Owl Meadow," near the town plot. This was to James Avery. About 1652, he was granted a farm in South Groton, where lands were especially desirable, as they might be cultivated immediately. He, however, continued to live with his family on his town lot for several years. Early in 1653, he secured another farm, further up the river, in what is now the town of Ledyard. About 1656, he built "The Hive of the Averys" at Poquonnock (in Groton) and lived therein until he died. The ancient dwelling is still in good repair and is occupied and owned, as it has ever been, by an Avery family. For a fine heliotype of the "Hive," see Allyn's "Battle of Groton Heights and its Centennial." Also see Miss Caulkins's "History of New London," from which much of this information has been culled. Groton was not set off from New London, as a separate town, until 1705. In 1668 and 1675, the General Court rewarded his services to the public by grants of a hundred acres in each case.

He soon became active in military affairs, and is generally spoken of by the title of Ensign, Lieutenant or Captain. The region in which he had made his home was formerly the chief seat of the formidable Pequot tribe that had been almost exterminated by the English a few years before. The Pequot Fort taken in 1637, by Captain John Mason in command of the Connecticut troops and their Mohegan and Narragansett allies, was on the Mystic river, on the eastern line of Groton. After the Pequot War, a few survivors of that once dreaded tribe still lived in the haunts of their fathers, with the Narragansetts on the east, and the Mohegans, under their Sachem Uncas, near by on the west. In 1657, the Narragansetts made a wild foray and Uncas fled from the blood and fire that marked their course. He took refuge in a fort and was besieged by his unrelenting foes. But just in time, "Lieutenant James Avery, Mr. Brewster, Richard Haughton, Samuel Lothrop, and others well armed, succeeded in throwing themselves into the fort; and the Narragansetts, fearing to engage in a conflict with the English, broke up the siege and returned home." The legislature approved of the measures that had been taken for the protection of the faithful ally of the English.

In 1667 ,the Pequot remnant was transferred to a reservation, although, as the historian informs us, "Mr. Winthrop, Captain Denison, Captain James Avery and some other men of influence, dissented from these views and labored for the accommodation of the Pequots." The fair disposition and judicial temperament of Captain Avery are here clearly shown—qualities that doubtless gave him much of the great influence that we know he possessed with the friendly Indians of that region. For several years, before and after this, the Commissioners of the United Colonies referred almost everything relating to the Pequots to Messrs. Dennison, Stanton and Avery for adjustment. In 1678, the said Commissioners granted Captain Avery, five pounds "for his good service in assisting in the Government of the Pequots for sundry years past." See Plymouth Colony Records, Vol. 10.

In 1668, he and Cary Latham were chosen by the town to settle the boundary line with the sachem Uncas. The £15 that secured the desired formal deed was paid by James Avery and two others, each of whom was indemnified by the town with 200 acres of land. Captain Avery's services seem to have been often called for by the town and by individuals in the settling of such controversies.

In 1673, danger was apprehended from the Dutch, and each county was ordered to prepare for defence. New London County was to add a hundred "dragoones" to her train-bands, and for "such forces as shall be called out of that county, James Avery [was] appoynted Captn."

New England's long continued freedom from the horrors of Indian war was abruptly ended in 1675. The name of King Philip became a terror to the English settlers from Connecticut to Casco Bay. In the summer months, Massachusetts suffered untold agony, and, in October, the General Court at Hartford practically put Connecticut under martial law. The Commissioners of the United Colonies of New England put a force of a thousand men under command of Governor Josiah Winslow of Plymouth. In early winter, he was in the hostile country where a great battle was fought on Sunday, December 19, 1675. The Narragansett fort was in what is South Kingston, R. I. It included five or six acres of dry ground, was surrounded by a swamp and defended by palisades and felled trees. The only entrance was by a bridge made by a felled tree and commanded by a block house. Within, were not fewer than 3,500 warriors. The fight was desperate, for, on either side, it was a clear case of conquer or die. Victory was for the English. It is said that 700 Indians were killed that day and that of their wounded, 300 died. The power of the Narragansett tribe was broken. In this fight, the Pequot allies were commanded by Captain James Avery; Captain John Gallop, who commanded the Mohegans, was slain.

The Narragansett fight had enraged the Indians and made them desperate. The English plantations were in greater danger than before. In the following February, began "that series of forays into the Indian territory, which, issuing at short intervals from New London County and led by those noted Indian fighters, Denison and Avery, contributed in no small degree to the favorable result." In the third of these excursions, the chief surviving sachem of the Narragansetts, Canonchet, the son of Miantonomo, was captured—"one of the great exploits of the war." The particulars of his capture and execution may be found in Hubbard's "Indian Wars," pp. 165–9, and in Trumbull's "History of Connecticut," I. 343–5.

He was equally prominent in the civil matters of the town and colony. According to Mr. Sweet's circular, "he was chosen townsman in 1660 and held that office twenty years. He was twelve times elected to the General Court from 1658 to 1680, and was one of the Commissioners of Peace and Assistant Judge in the County Court." We first meet him as "Judge" Avery, on May 31, 1664; "Deputy-Governor Mason, Messrs. Talcott, Bruen and Avery on the bench." Miss Caulkins says that "after 1666, for fifteen or twenty years, the commissioners (justices) for New London were almost invariably Messrs. Avery, Wetherell and Palmes." (p. 180.)

There was then a close union between church and state, each being part of the other. The Congregational church was fully "established," wholly "orthodox," and the only one recognized by law. The minister's salary was raised by public tax and a few of the old rate-lists for this purpose are still preserved. In that for 1664, the names of 105 property holders appear. The name of "John Winthrop, Squire," heads the list. He was then a non-resident; his property was set down at £185. The estate of James Rogers is set down at £548—nearly double that of any other tax-payer. The next highest are John Pickett, £299, 10s.; James Morgan, £252; Robert Burrows, £246; James Avery, £236; and Cary Latham, £217. At that time, land was hardly taken into account in the estimate of the value of a man's estate.

James Avery was prominent in matters relating to the church, and the references to him in such relations are numerous. The church record kept by the Rev. Mr. Bradstreet, begins October 5, 1670, the day of his ordination. It begins with the following list:

"THE MEMBERS OF THE CHURCH.
Lieutenant James Avery and wife,
Thomas Miner and wife,
James Morgan, senior, and wife,"

and eighteen others. This seems to dispose of the inference of Mr. Sweet that the wife Joanna died in 1669, or, at least, of the reasons given for such an inference. Joanna doubtless died, and probably about this time; her bereaved relict married ~~Sarah, the daughter of Thomas Miner of Stonington.~~ Mrs. Abigail Holmes in 1698.

The four sons of Captain James Avery married and had eighteen daughters. Each of the four sons had seven sons. The sons of James, Jr., were James^4, Edward^4, Ebenezer^4, Christopher^4, Joseph^4, Jonathan^4 and Benjamin^4, all of whom married. The sons of Thomas were Thomas, Jr.^{4}, Samuel^4, Jonathan^4, William^4, Ephraim^4, Abraham^4 and Joshua^4, five of whom married. The sons of JOHN were John, Jr.^{4}, Benjamin^4, WILLIAM^4, Elisha^4, Thomas^4, Daniel^4 and Nathaniel^4, five of whom married. The sons of Samuel were Samuel, Jr.^{4}, Jonathan^4, William^4, Christopher^4, Humphrey^4, Nathan^4 and Waitstill^4, four of whom married. Thus twenty-one of the grandsons of James became heads of families, and there is nothing in the records to show that the other seven were not married. These twenty-one grandsons, of whose families we have the records, had 90 sons. Of these, at least 85 might have married, and it is known that more than fifty of them did marry.

The founder of the family died ~~later than February, 1694.~~ April 18, 1700

3. JOHN AVERY,

Third son of James Avery; born February 10, 1654. Married Abigail Chesebrough (the daughter of Samuel and the grand-daughter of William Chesebrough, the first settler at Stonington, Connecticut), November 29, 1675. Unto them were born thirteen children, namely: Abigail (died in infancy); Abigail (again); Mary; Elizabeth; Desire; Anna, and the seven sons already named.

In the General Court at Hartford, May 12, 1692, it was recorded: "This Court doe not see reason to confirm those nominated for officers on the east side of the riuer at New London at present, but doe appoynt Captain James Auery to be Capt^{n} of sayd Company, and James Morgan L^{nt}, and John Auery to be Ensign of sayd company untill the Honoured Major Generall and Mr. Witherell shall see cause to lead them to a new choys of officers." (See Colonial Records of Connecticut for that year, p. 74.)

The record of the General Court for May 11 of the following year, has and property holders appear. The name of "John Winthrop, Esquire," heads the list. He was then a non-resident. His property was set down at £180. The estate of James Avery is set down at £248—nearly double that of any other tax-payer. The next highest are John Pickett, £200, James Morgan, £187; Robert Burrows, £148; James Avery, £110; and Cary Latham, £117. At that time, land was hardly taken into account in the estimate of the value of a man's estate.

James Avery was prominent in matters relating to the church, and the references to him in such relations are numerous. The church record kept by the Rev. Mr. Bradstreet, begun October 5, 1670, the day of his ordination. It begins with the following list:

"The members of this church:
Lieutenant James Avery and wife,
Thomas Minor and wife,
James Morgan, senior, and wife,"

and eighteen others. This seems to dispose of the statement of Mr. Drake that the wife joined in 1677, as at least 10 of the records given for such an inference. Joanna Avery died, and probably about 1698 he married Abigail, the widow of Joshua Holmes, of Stonington. [illegible]

The four sons of Captain James Avery married and had eighteen daughters. Each of the four sons had seven sons. The sons of James, Jr., were James, Edward, Ebenezer, Christopher, Joseph, Jonathan and Benjamin, all of whom married. The sons of Thomas were Thomas, Jr., Samuel, Jonathan, William, Ephraim, Abraham and Joseph, two of whom married. Sons of John were John, Jr., Benjamin, William, Robert, Daniel, Thomas and Nathan, five of whom married. The sons of Samuel were Samuel, Jr., Humphrey, William, Christopher, Ebenezer, Richard and Waldron, four of whom married. Thus twenty-one of the grandsons of James Avery bore the family name, and there is nothing in the records to show that the other seven were married. These twenty-one grandsons, of whose families we have the records, had 90 sons. Of them, at least 83 might have married, and it is certain that most of them did marry.

The founder of the family and [illegible]

4. JOHN AVERY.

John, son of James Avery; born February 10, 1654. Married Abigail Cheesebrough, the daughter of Samuel and the granddaughter of William Cheesebrough, the first settler of Stonington, Connecticut, November 29, 1675. John then had thirteen children, namely: Abigail (died in infancy), Abigail again, Mary, Elizabeth, Rachel, Anna, with the seven sons already named.

In the Colonial Council Records, May 17, 1690, it was recorded: "This Court doe see cause to make the following appointment for officers to the company of the men at New London at present, but the appointing Captain James Avery to be Captain of said Company, and James Morgan Lieut. and John Avery to be Ensign of said company untill the Generall Court shall see cause to lead them to a new choyce of officers." (See Colonial Records of Connecticut for that year, p. 24.)

The record of the General Court for May 11 of the following year, has this: "Thomas Auery is approued to be Capt^n of the traine band of New London on the east side of the riuer, and John Morgan L^{nt}, and John Auery, Ensigne, of sayd Company, and are to be commissionated accordingly."

From a similar record of the General Court, May 13, 1697, we learn that "John Avery [was] appointed Captain of the train band at New London on the east side of the river." His name appears with this title in the patent for New London, granted by the General Court, October 14, 1704. In 1700, he became one of the original proprietors of New Lebanon, and, on the tenth of May, 1705, the General Court confirmed him and his associates in the possession of lands in that town. He is known to have held lands in Preston, Connecticut, in 1706.

4. WILLIAM AVERY,

Third son of John Avery; born about 1687. Married Anna Richardson, March 7, 1715; by her he had four children, namely: William, Jr.^{5}; Richardson^5; John^5; and Anna^5. He married a second wife, Sarah (or Abigail) Walker, June 3, 1731; by her he had ten children, namely: Amos L.^{5}, born January 30, 1732; Christopher^5, b. April 7, 1734; Elias^5, b. July 5, 1736; David^5, b. October 30, 1738; Daniel^5, b. October 29, 1740; Benoni^5, b. January 29, 1744; Abigail^5, b. April 26, 1746; James^5, b. December 27, 1748; Nathaniel^5, b. August 28, 1751; ABRAHAM^5, b. May 20, 1754.

5. LIEUTENANT ABRAHAM AVERY,

Ninth son of William Avery by his second wife: born May 20, 1754, ~~(probably)~~ at Stonington, Connecticut. He was taken prisoner during the Revolutionary war; was landed from a prison-ship at Elizabethtown, New Jersey; was turned adrift with the ship-fever, and begged his way back to Connecticut. Married Mercy, the daughter of Ichabod Packer (of Groton?), by whom he had six children, namely: Elias Packer^6; Hubbard Burrows^6; AMOS WALKER^6; Ichabod Denison^6; Esther^6; Abigail^6. His grand-daughter, Mrs. McCandless, (living in 1888,) says that he "was a noble specimen of manhood, a fine scholar for that day, and possessed more general information than anyone else in the region where he lived. As a Bible student, I have never known his equal." He probably lived at Coleraine, Massachusetts, in 1787 and, at an earlier period, in Vermont.

During the progress of the Revolutionary War, the territory now known as Vermont was claimed by the State of New York. In 1777, many of the settlers in that region were in favor of a new State. A convention adopted a declaration of the rights and independence of what had been called the New Hampshire Grants, and proclaimed the commonwealth of "New Connecticut alias Vermont." Congress was petitioned that New Connecticut might be ranked "among the free and independent American States, and delegates therefrom admitted to seats in the grand Continental Congress." New York took measures to bring the disaffected back to their allegiance and to secure Congressional interference in her behalf. Meantime, there were many in the "Grants" who were favorable to the government of New York. "In Brattleborough they were more numerous than the Vermont adherents, and were not afraid to act as their convictions dictated." Thus sprang up two factions, the "Vermonters" and the "Yorkers." By 1783 there was, especially in Windham county, a condition of mutual terror and distrust. "Houses were divided—the father upholding the jurisdiction of New York, the sons maintaining the supremacy of Vermont. Friendships the most intimate were disturbed. The word neighbor carried no meaning with it beyond the idea of contiguity. The physician could not visit his patient in safety unless protected with a pass. The minister of the gospel failed to enforce the doctrine of Christian charity on the hearts of men who knew none for one another." In Guilford, the Yorkers held the power and prevented the Vermonters from executing their laws and collecting taxes. The new government took active measures that tended only to unite the opposition in their determination to withstand the execution of laws originating in an authority that they did not acknowledge, and to follow such a course as seemed to them best fitted "to promote the interests of New York and of the United States."

In Hall's "History of Eastern Vermont" is told the story of the capture of a staunch Vermonter by the name of Benjamin Carpenter. He was carried away by the Yorkers, "to his great damage," but lived many years thereafter and left a quaint epitaph to declare to coming generations that his "Stature was about six feet. Weight 200. Death had no terror." "The more prominent actors in this seizure were Abraham Avery, Cyril Carpenter, Nathaniel Carpenter [and others], all of Guilford." (Page 505.) The seizure was made December 1, 1783. In the following February, twenty-five of the Yorkers were arraigned at the bar of the Superior Court. Abraham Avery was among those charged with the assault upon Benjamin Carpenter. He pleaded not guilty and the case against him seems to have been dismissed upon his payment of the costs.

There were many such indictments on account of the current hostilities, and many of the Yorkers in the southern part of Windham county endured countless inconveniences and losses. In 1786, the New York legislature took action on the subject of the sufferings of their friends, who, led partly by the resolutions of Congress, especially those of December 5, 1782, and "by their attachment, zeal and activity in endeavoring to support the just and lawful authority of New York," had brought upon themselves confiscations and imprisonments and had suffered "such exquisite tortures." It was shown that their losses amounted to £16,663, 13s, 8d, and it was deemed proper for the state to grant them "a quantity of vacant land equivalent to a township of eight miles square." The land was divided into one hundred lots of 640 acres each. Lot No. 50 was appropriated to the use of "Gospel and Schools," and lot No. 51 "For promoting Literature." Lot No. 87 was given to Abraham Avery and William Gault, the former receiving 430 acres. The grant was dated July 11, 1786. At the same time, 214 acres in lot No. 62 were granted to Ichabod Packer and 132 acres in lot No. 42 to Nathan (Nathaniel?) Avery. In 1791, the "sufferers' lands," with an addition, were made a township by the name of Jericho. In 1814, the name was changed to Bainbridge, which may be found on the map in the southeast corner of Chenango county.

It is supposed that about 1794, Abraham Avery moved to Rome, New York, and about 1800, settled at Preston, Chenango county, New York. He died in (February?) 1843, at Earlville, Madison county, New York, about six months after the death of his wife.

6. AMOS WALKER AVERY,

Third son of Abraham Avery; born at Coleraine, Massachusetts, May 24, 1787. On the fifth of July, 1808, he married Nancy McCutcheon and soon settled at Avon (now Rush) in Monroe county, New York. Died at LaSalle, Monroe county, Michigan, June 1, 1863. He was the father of seven children, viz., CASPAR HUGH^7; Betsey Jane^7; Hubbard Burrows^7; Evaline Nancy^7; Mercy Miranda^7; Amos John^7 Minerva Pratt^7.

7. CASPAR HUGH AVERY,

Oldest child of Amos Walker Avery; born at Preston, New York, July 25, 1809. His first marriage was without issue. He settled at Erie, Monroe county, Michigan, in 1833, and married Dorothy Putnam, September 26, 1843. She died March 17, 1868, and he followed March 5, 1873. They left four children: ELROY MCKENDREE^8, Susan Adeliza^8, Charles Hedding^8, and Ella^8.

8. ELROY McKENDREE AVERY,

Oldest child of Caspar Hugh Avery; born at Erie, Michigan, July 14, 1844. At sixteen years of age he was a soldier. He served throughout the War of the Rebellion and, at its close, was mustered out of the service as Sergeant-Major of the Eleventh Michigan Volunteer Cavalry. He was graduated from Michigan University in 1871, and received the degree of Ph.D. in 1881. On the second day of July, 1870, he married Catherine Hitchcock, the older daughter of the Hon. Junius Tilden of Monroe, Michigan, and a descendant of Dr. William Avery of Dedham, Massachusetts, as mentioned at the beginning of this record. They live at Woodland Hills, Cleveland, Ohio. His sister Susan^8 married Sidney S. Lewis, and has one child, Adah^9. They live at Hiattville, Bourbon county, Kansas. Charles H. Avery^8 married Ada Boys, and has three children, Charles Boys^9, Leila Covert^9 and Elroy Putnam^9. They live at Buffalo, New York. Ella Avery^8 died March 2, 1880.

One of the chief objects of this circular is to aid in gathering further information concerning John^3, William^4, and Abraham^5 of this line. If any person receiving this copy can contribute anything to that end, the information may be sent to Elroy M. Avery, Woodland Hills, Cleveland, Ohio, by whom it will be gratefully received. Another object of the writer is to awaken interest in the publication of the full and illustrated history of the Groton Averys. Persons interested in this project are requested to correspond with Mr. Homer D. L. Sweet, 92 Wieting Block, Syracuse, New York.

cut, and, August 8, 1665, purchased a house, orchard and lot of Robert Burrows in New London. Here he claimed exemption from watching and training on account of age, in June, 1667, and was made a freeman of the colony, October, 1669. Charles Hill, the town clerk, made this record of his decease: "Christopher Avery's death, vide, near the death of Mother Brewster," but the date of her death does not appear. Minor, in his diary, however, records that Christopher Avery died March 12, 1679.

According to an affidavit in the probate court, he left an only son, James.

JAMES.

CAPTAIN JAMES AVERY, the only child of Christopher and properly the founder of the family that we call the Groton Averys, was born in England about 1620. He came to America with his father, and lived at Gloucester for several years. He married Joanna Greenslade, of Boston, November 10, 1643, as appears from the record at Gloucester. She received a letter of dismissal from the church at Boston to the one at Gloucester in 1644:

> "17 of 1 mo. 1644. Our sister Joan Greenslade, now the wife of one James Averill had granted her by the Church's silence, letters of recommendation to the Ch. at Gloster."

Nothing is known of her ancestry. The only other trace of the Greenslade family in America in the seventeenth century that I have found is a petition with the following heading: "1663, July 4, A Declaration of ye Townes of Scarborow & ffalmouth Black Point & Casco to be Presented to ye Hon^{d} Court att York." This petition carries numerous signatures, including that of Thomas Greenslad. At that time, the province of Maine was claimed by the heirs of Sir Ferdinando Gorges and by the colony of Massachusetts Bay, the struggle for jurisdiction ending in favor of the Bay colony in 1677. A possible relationship between Thomas Greenslad and Joanna Greenslade is suggested by the fact that the first born son of the latter was named James (for the father) and that the second born was named Thomas.

Miss Caulkins's "History of New London," p. 67, says:

> "On the nineteenth of October, 1650, grants were made by the townsmen to 'Mr. Blynman, Obadiah Bruen, Hughe Caulkin, Hughe Roberts, John Coite, Andrew Lester, James Averye, Robert Isbell.'

> "These were all from Gloucester, a town on the eastern coast of Massachusetts, situated upon the peninsula of Cape Ann. Mr. Richard Blinman had been the minister of Gloucester for eight years, and was now engaged to become the minister of the Pequot plantation. The others were a party of his friends who purposed to move with him, and came on to make preparatory arrangements."

It appears that James Avery went back to Gloucester, sold his possessions there to his father and, in 1651, returned to New London. In March of that year, "the principal body of these eastern emigrants arrived. * * * * * Early in 1651, New Street, in the rear of the town plot, was opened for the accommodation of the Cape Ann company. This position was designated as 'beyond the brook and the ministry lot.' It was carved into house lots and took the name of Cape Ann Lane. The lots on this street were nine in number, of six acres each, extending both sides of the narrow street from the alder swamp in front to Cedar Swamp on the west. Beginning at the lower end, Hugh Calkins had the first lot by the Lyme road, or highway to Nahantick, as it was then called, and next to him was his son-in-law, Hugh Roberts; then Coite, Lester, Avery, Allen, Meades, Hough, Isbell." These New Street home-lots were dreary and uninviting. Some of the new-comers became discouraged and went away and "even those who had the courage to settle down in this part of the plantation, soon abandoned the land to pasturage or waste and found other homesteads."

The registry entitled "Births in New London" begins with the following record:

> "Hannah, the daughter of James Avery, was born 11 Oct., 1644.
> James, the son of do.—15 Dec. 1646.
> Mary, the daughter of do.—19 Feb. 1647."

These three were born in Gloucester, and their births were there recorded; the transferred record "is not a solitary instance of loose and inaccurate registry." The interval between the births of James and Mary, as above recorded, was fourteen months instead of two months, as at first glance appears,—a result of the observance of the Julian calendar in those days. The calendar-amendment act, an English statute of 1751, established the first day of January as the beginning of each year (instead of Lady-day, March 25), adopted the Gregorian or "new style" in place of the Julian or "old style" calendar, and cancelled the then existing excess of eleven days by making the third day of September, 1752, the fourteenth. Hence the double writing of the year in dates falling in January, February and March, so frequently met with in the following century. The last date in the registry-record above quoted might be written, 19 Feb., 1647 (O. S.), or 29 Feb., 1648 (N. S.), or 19 Feb., 1647-'48.

In addition to his grant of land, October 19, 1650, and of a town lot on Cape Ann Lane, early in 1651, James Avery soon received a grant of the "Little Owl Meadow," "not far from the town plot on the North side of the Mill Brook." But ideas grew and there was a quick thirsting after large domains. About 1652, he was granted a farm in South Groton, where lands were especially desirable, as they might be cultivated immediately. He, however, continued to live with his family on his town lot for several years. Early in 1653, he secured another farm, one of the "Pocketannock grants," further up the river, in what is now the town of Ledyard. About 1656, he built "The Hive of the Averys," at the head of Poquonnock Plain, in the present town of Groton, a mile and a half from the River Thames. In June, 1684, the old Blinman edifice at New London, "the unadorned church and watch-tower of the wilderness," was sold to Captain Avery for six pounds, with the condition that he should remove it in one month's time. According to tradition, the church was taken down and its materials carried across the river and added to the house he had already built at Poquonnock. In spite of this analytic and synthetic process, the house seems to have retained some of its sacred character and, even a century later, "the same timbers, the same boards, joyfully resounded once more to the ancient but well remembered voices of exhortation and praise." The antique dwelling, of which we give a fine illustration, is still in good repair and is occupied and owned, as it has ever been, by an Avery family. With its charming situation, the old-time combination constitutes one of the most interesting and picturesque farm-houses in the country. Here James Avery lived until he died. The present occupant (1893) is the Groton town clerk, Mr. James D. Avery (No. 1623).

James Avery seems to have taken, at once, an active part in private business and public affairs. On the twelfth of October, 1667, he petitioned the general court as follows:

> "The request of James Avery of New London to this Honored Assembly is, that whereas the Country have putt me upon some publique imployment, and haue done what seruice I am capeable of, that this Assembly would please to grant me, as they have done to diverse others, a percell of land which belongs to the Country, soe much as theyshall think meet, where it may be found, which I shall thankfully accept; and ever pray for your prosperity."

In May of the following year, the general court made the following record:

> "Lieutenant James Auery hath likewise by this Court granted to him a Hundred Acres of land for a farme, in which there may not be aboue twenty acres of meadow."

A like reward for public services was made by the colony in 1675.

He soon became active in military affairs and is generally spoken of by the title of Ensign, Lieutenant or Captain. The region in which he had made his home was formerly the chief seat of the formidable Pequot tribe that had been almost exterminated by the English a few years before. The Pequot Fort, taken in 1637 by Captain John Mason, in command of the Connecticut troops and their Mohegan and Narragansett allies, was on the Mystic River, on the eastern line of Groton. After the Pequot War, a few survivors of that once dreaded tribe still lived in the haunts of their fathers, with the Narragansetts on the east, and the Mohegans, under their sachem, Uncas, near by on the west. In 1657, the Narragansetts made a wild foray and Uncas fled from the blood and fire that marked their course. He took refuge in a fort and was besieged by his unrelenting foes. But just in time, "Lieutenant James Avery, Mr. Brewster, Richard Haughton, Samuel Lothrop, and others well armed, succeeded in throwing themselves into the fort; and the Narragansetts, fearing to engage in a conflict with the English, broke up the siege and returned home." The legislature approved of the measures that had been taken for the protection of the faithful ally of the English.

Great Britain proclaimed war with the States General in February, 1665, and, in June, America received tidings that the Dutch admiral, DeRuyter, had orders to visit New York with a large force. The northern colonies were alarmed at the approach of so formidable an enemy and began preparations for defence. The following item appears in the record of a session of the Connecticut general court, held at Hartford, July 6, 1665:

> "This Court haueing by his Majestie's order bene informed that DeKuiter is likely to assault his Majestie's Colonies in these parts of the world and that it is his royall pleasure that his subiects here should put themselves in a posture of defence agaynst the comon adversary, In pursuance thereof, doe order that each plantation in this Colony should consider of some way for the discouery of the approach of the enemy: And that vpon the discovery of the enemy they presently giue notice thereof to ye Comittee appointed by the Court, who are to act therein according to the power comitted to them by this Assembly."

The committee in charge from Southerton to Guilford was "Maior Mason, Ens: Avery, Thomas Minor, Robt Chapman, or any three of them." "Which said Comittees being mett in their respectiue limits are hereby impowred to order and appoint how and in what way the order established for aid and reliefe in such cases may be effectually attended." In this same year (1665), the general court confirmed Ensign James Avery as "lieutenant to ye Trainband at New London."

In 1667, the Pequot remnant was transferred to a reservation, although, as the historian informs us, "Mr. Winthrop, Captain Denison, Captain James Avery and some other men of influence, dissented from these views and labored for the accommodation of the Pequots." The fair disposition and judicial temperament of Mr. Avery are here clearly shown—qualities that doubtless gave him much of the great influence that we know he possessed with the friendly Indians of that region. For several years, before and after this, the commissioners of the United Colonies referred almost everything relating to the Pequots to Messrs. Denison, Stanton and Avery for adjustment, and the Connecticut general court records contain references, too numerous to mention in detail, of which the following (May 11, 1666) must suffice as examples:

> "Lt. Avery and James Morgan are appointed and required by this Court to lay out the land for Coassatuck Indians according to ye determination of ye comittee; and likewise to lay out the northern bounds of Stonington, and also ye land granted to Thomas Minor and John Gallop respectiuely."
> "Robin Cussinamo is appointed Gouernor ouer the Pequots on this side Mistick Riuer, and Cushaunakim and Yoiomatimo are appointed as Assistants to ye said Cussinemo in gouerneing the said Indians. And Lt. James Avery, Cary Latham and John Gallop are desired to assist by advice and counsell to these Gouernors as occasion or necessity may present."

In 1678, the said commissioners granted Captain Avery five pounds "for his good service in assisting in the Government of the Pequots for sundry years past." See Plymouth Colony Records, Vol. 10.

In 1668, he and Cary Latham were chosen by the town to settle the boundary line with the sachem Uncas. The £15 that secured the desired formal deed was paid by James Avery and two others, each of whom was indemnified by the town with 200 acres of land. Captain Avery's services seem to have been often called for by the town and by individuals in the settling of such controversies.

In June, 1672, the general court ordered that Captain John Winthrop should be the "cheife millitary officer" for the county of New London, and Lieutenant James Avery, his second.

In 1673, danger was apprehended from the Dutch, and each county was ordered to prepare for defence. New London County was to add a hundred "dragoones" to her train-bands, and for "such forces as shall be called out of that county, James Avery [was] appoynted Captain."

New England's long continued freedom from the horrors of Indian war was abruptly ended in 1675. The name of King Philip became a terror to the English settlers from Connecticut to Casco Bay. In the summer months, Massachusetts suffered untold agony and, in October, the general court at Hartford practically put Connecticut under martial law.

"Forasmuch as this Court, by reason of intelligence (both from our freind's towards the Narrogansetts and allso from Major Andross) of great combinations and threatenings of the Indians against the English, and perticularly against the greatest part of this Colony, and that speedily to be put in execution, the late experience and motion of the enemie seeming to suite such a designe, haue seen cause to call backe their present forces unto Hartford to be improued as farther occasion may call for: It is therefore hereby ordered, that each county doe speedily rayse out of their severall townes in their respective countyes, sixty souldiers, well fitted with hors armes and ammunition, as dragoones, who shall be imbodyed for motion in their severall respectiue countyes for the defence of the Colony against any sudden assault of the enemie. And because of the difficulty and danger of moueing ouer the riuer at Saybrooke, this Court orders Saybrooke and Kenilworth to fall in with New Haven, as part thereof in this undertakeing. The proportioning of each plantation and all other things necessary for the well ordering of the severall companyes is left to the ciuill authority in each county to order as they shall judg most conduceable to the end afoarsayd; and that they be ready for the releife of each other upon notice, as any exigence may call for. And because there are the Moheags and Pequots dwelling amongst those fower townes of New London County, it is ordered that Captain James Auery take the command of forty English from the three townes of New London, Stoneington and Lyme, to be raysed together with such of the Pequots as he likes, and Captain John Mason shall take twenty English from Norwich with the Moheags; each party to quarter and lye where they may be of best vse for the end afoarsaid, and to joyne together as there may be any occasion or exigence, vpon notice from Major John Winthrop; they to appoynt such inferior officers as they shall thinke most meet."

At a meeting of the council of the colony in the following February, "there was order to Capt. Avery, Capt. Denison and Lnt. Minor to rayse some forces to surpriz or destroy the enemie; as more at large by the letter on file may appeare." From said letter, I clip the following sentence:

"The Council, considering the difficulty of collecting any considerable body of the enlisted soldiers from the several townes, for an immediate march against the enemy, order that Captains Avery and Denison, and Lieut. Minor, should forthwith gather as many men as possible, from the three nearest towns (New London, Norwich and Stonington), and, taking with them the Mohegan and Pequot Indians, march against the enemy." At a meeting of the council in the following month, it was written in the record that:

> "For the encouragement of such as shall goe forth volunteers against our Indian enemies in the Narrogancett Countrey and to prevent their gathering and setleing there, we have thought meet to declare, that whosoeuer shall imploy themselues in this seruice, whether Indians or English, and goe forth under the command of Capt. George Denison or Capt. James Avery or Lnt. Thomas Minor or Ens: Tho: Leffingwell, shall haue all such plunder as they shall seize, both of persons and corn or other estate, to be dissposed by them in way of sale, so as they may best advantage themselues, provided Authority haue had the first tender of theire dispose of captiues, allowing them the market price; to be diuided amongst them, to the priuate souldiers, each man alike, and to the commanders so much a better part according as there is difference in their wages; and all wounded men to be healed at the Country's charge."

In the following August, "the Councill agreed and ordered that the right and division of the captives be left to the decision and determination of Capt. John Mason, Capt. James Avery and Mr. Daniel Witherell, whoe are desired and impowered to disspose the said captiues, whither in hands of the Pequots, Moheags or Narangancetts, to such persons to whome of right they doe belong, according to the seuerall agreements as the claymers shall make their demands by." The question of the disposition of booty again came up in the council and, in January, 1676–'77, it was ordered that "whateuer captiues or plunder shall be taken is to be tryed and condemned by a Court Marshall, that so no wrong may be done. The Court Marshall for New London County are appoynted to be Major Ed: Palmes, Capt. James Auery, Lnt. Samuel Mason and Lnt. Tho: Minor, or any three of them."

The commissioners of the United Colonies of New England put a force of a thousand men under command of Governor Josiah Winslow of Plymouth. In early winter, he was in the hostile country where a great battle was fought on Sunday, December 19, 1675. The Narranganset fort was in what is South Kingston, R. I. It included five or six acres of dry ground, was surrounded by a swamp and defended by palisades and felled trees. The only entrance was by a bridge made by a felled tree and commanded by a block house. Within, were not fewer than 3,500 warriors. The fight was desperate, for, on either side, it was a clear case of conquer or die. Victory was for the English. It is said that 700 Indians were killed that day and that of their wounded, 300 died. The power of the Narraganसett tribe was broken. In this fight, the Pequot allies were commanded by Captain James Avery; Captain John Gallop, who commanded the Mohegans, was slain.

The Narragansett fight enraged the Indians and made them desperate. The English plantations were in greater danger than before. In the following February, began "that series of forays into the Indian territory, which, issuing at short intervals from New London County and led by those noted Indian fighters, Denison and Avery, contributed in no small degree to the favorable result." In the third of these excursions, the chief surviving sachem of the Narragansetts, Canonchet, the son of Miantonomo, was captured—"one of the great exploits of the war." The particulars of his capture and execution may be found in Hubbard's "Indian Wars," pp. 165–9, and in Trumbull's "History of Connecticut," I. 343–5.

Captain Avery was equally prominent in the civil matters of the town and colony. He was chosen townsman, (i. e., selectman,) in 1660 and held that office twenty years. What seems to have been one of his earliest acts in this official capacity shows a laudable desire to preserve the public documents and is thus recorded:

> "Feb. 6, 1660.—For the settling, perfecting and fairly recording of a'l records, for the town's use and good of after posterity, wee agreed that there shall be a towne booke, with an Alphabet in it, wherein all acts passed, orders or agreements, shall hereafter be fairly recorded, whether past or to come, for the effecting hereof, we agree that all the old bookes of records shall be searched into for what is material concerning the public good, to be drawn out into a booke provided and paid for by the Recorder, who shall have 6*d.* paid him out of the town rate for every act, law or order recorded."

This is signed by the townsmen, Obadiah Bruen (who was recorder), Hugh Calkin, James Rogers, James Avery and William Nichols. Unfortunately, the full measure of the advantages which these wise town-men intended to confer upon "after posterity" was made scant by the performance.

For the next few years, the records contain frequent references to James Avery in connection with such matters as the collection of tax-rates, arbitrations like that between "Goodman Packer and the Indians", the killing of wolves, for which he claimed the bounty of twenty shillings each, the laying out of the king's highways, the adjustment of the bounds between New London and Saybrook (which adjustment proved to be unsatisfactory to his fellow-citizens), the naming of a day for the cutting of wood for the minister, etc. In February, 1665-'66, it was "Voted by ye Towne that Leifft. Avery and James Morgan have power to agree with any person that hath a serviceable horse to be emploied in fetching up Mr. Bradstreet and what agreement they make the towne to allowe and make good the same." The next year, and as a consequence of this carte blanche, Goodman Prentice received ten shillings for the use of his horse, and Goodman Royce fifteen shillings "for ye minister's dyet." On June 1, 1666, it was "Voted by a Vnanimous consent that Mr. Bradstreet is accepted to ye worke of ye ministry amongst us, and that he have 80 lb. pr yeare to encourage him in the worke, to be gathered by way of rate." The town also voted to build a girt house "36 foote in length, and 25 in breadth and 13 studd betwixt ye joynts with a stack of stone chimneys in the midst," all at a cost of a hundred pounds, with an extra appropriation to "paye ye masons for building a stone chimney and glaze ye house windowes." These records give us an interesting peep into the old New England town-meeting and throw an instructive side light on the characters of our fathers.

Originally, the Connecticut general court not only enacted the laws of the colony, but administered them, criminally as well as civilly. As it was difficult to try all of these cases at Hartford, and in answer to a petition from New London, the general court "doe order for ye present that there shall be an assistant and 3 commissioners in that Town who shall have full power to issue small causes, and ye punishing small crimes." Among the first commissioners appointed for this particular court at New London, was Captain James Avery. The appointment was conferred upon him by the general court in 1663. His office as commissioner was much like that of a justice of the peace. The first court record of "Judge" Avery that I have found is dated May 31, 1664; "Deputy-governor Mason and Messrs. Talcott, Bruen and Avery on the bench." In 1666, the county of New London was constituted with its county court. Of this county court, James Avery was for many years one of the commissioners. Before this court came actions for small debts and complaints of evil-speaking and disorderly conduct. Wills were proved and marriages performed the same as in the higher courts. A few of the examples cited by Miss Caulkins may serve to illustrate the manners and customs of those days:

"June 30, 1664. Mrs. Houghton summons Mrs. Skillinger before the commissioners to answer for abusing her daughter in the meeting house; we not finding legal proofs hereof, judge it meet that Mrs. Houghton tutor her daughter better and not occasion disturbance by any unmeet carriage to her betters hereafter, and this being the first time, we enforce no further."

Another case was against "a person belonging to Seabrook for uttering contumelious speeches against his Majesty when in liquor; to be whipt immediately at New London and a quarter of a year hence at Seabrook; Mr. Chapman to see it done."

"1667. Goodwife Willey presented for not attending public worship and bringing her children thither; fined 5*s*.

"George Tongue and wife were solemnly reprimanded for their many offences against God and man and each other. On their submission and promise of reformation, and engaging to keep up the solemn duty of prayer and the service of God in the family, they were released by paying a fine of £3.

"John Lewis and Sarah Chapman presented . sitting together on the Lord's Day under an apple tree in Goodman Chapman's orchard."

"1673. James Rogers, Jr., for sailing in a vessel on the Lord's day, fined 20*s*.

"Edward Stallion for sailing his vessel from New London to Norwich on the Sabbath, 40*s*."

"Sept., 1674. Complaint entered against Stonington for want of convenient highways to the meeting-house. The court ordered that there shall be four principal highways according as they shall agree among themselves to the four angles, and one also to the landing place, to be stated by James Avery and James Morgan within 4 months."

That the county court had admiralty powers appears from the following:

"1680. Thomas Dymond vs. barque Providence, stranded on Fisher's Island, for salvage of goods."

"1682. New London was presented for not having a grammar-school; fined £10: also for not having an English school for reading and writing, £5."

There were numerous presentations of James Rogers for profanation of the Sabbath and kindred offenses. He had extensive lands and a greater interest in the trade of the port than any other person in the place. He and his family became dissenters from the established church and allied themselves to the Sabbatarians or Seventh-day Baptists of Rhode Island. After 1677, his son, John Rogers, drew off from the Sabbatarians, assumed the ministerial offices of preaching and baptizing and organized a new sect called the Rogerenes. Miss Caulkins says that "a great and predominant trait of the founder of the sect, and of his immediate followers, was their determination to be persecuted. They were aggressive, and never better pleased than when, by shaking the pillars, they had brought down the edifice upon their own heads. They esteemed it a matter of duty, not only to suffer fines, distrainment, degradation, imprisonment and felonious penalties with patience, but to obtrude themselves upon the law, and challenge its power, and in fact to persecute others, by interrupting their worship, and vehemently denouncing what they esteemed sacred." These offences were promptly met by penalties. "Fines were many times repeated and the estates of the offenders melted under the seizures of the constables as snow melts before the sun." "It is probable that all penalties would have been silently dropped had they not kept up the aggressive system of testifying, as it was called; that is, presenting themselves in the religious assemblies of their neighbors to utter their testimony against the worship. John Rogers and the elder sister were the principal offenders, they often carrying their work into meeting and interrupting the service with exclamations and protests against what was said or done." The foregoing is intended simply to illuminate the following from the records of the county court:

"April 14, 1685. Judges upon the bench, Fitch, Avery and Wetherell. John Rogers, James Rogers, Jr., Samuel Beebce, Jr., and Joanna Way, are complained of for profaning God's holy day by servile work, and are grown to that height of impiety as to come at several times into the town to re-baptize several persons; and when God's people were met together on the Lord's day to worship God, several of them came and made great disturbance, behaving themselves in such a frantic manner as if possessed with a diabolical spirit, so affrighting and amazing that several women swooned and fainted away. John Rogers to be whipped fifteen lashes, and for unlawfully re-baptizing to pay £5. The others to be whipped."

The Hon. Richard A. Wheeler, for many years the judge of probate at Stonington, Conn., says (Novembr 10, 1888): "Mr. Avery held the office of commissioner for a good many years, and, judging from his position in civil and military life, he must have been a man of marked abilities, fitted for the exigencies of the times in which he lived." Miss Caulkins says that "after 1666, for fifteen or twenty years, the commissioners (justices) for New London were almost invariably Messrs. Avery, Wetherell and Palmes." (History of New London, p. 180.)

Captain James Avery was twelve times elected to the general court from 1658 to 1680. Groton was set off from New London as a separate town in 1705. In 1871, Judge Wheeler published a list of representatives from Groton from its organization, at the end of which occur these words: "It is worthy of note that out of the 545 representatives of the town of Groton, 104 have borne the name of Avery and all were descendants of Captain James Avery."

There was then a close union between church and state, each being part of the other. The Congregational church was fully "established," wholly "orthodox," and the only one recognized by law. The minister's salary was raised by public tax and a few of the old rate-lists for this purpose are still preserved. In that for 1664, the names of 105 property holders appear. The name of "John Winthrop, Squire," heads the list. He was then a non-resident; his property was set down at £185. The estate of James Rogers is set down at £548—nearly double that of any other tax-payer. The next highest are John Pickett, £299, 10s.; James Morgan, £252; Robert Burrows, £246; James Avery, £236; and Cary Latham, £217. At that time, land was hardly taken into account in the estimate of the value of a man's estate.

James Avery was prominent in matters relating to the church, and the references to him in such connection are numerous. For example, in February, 1677-'78, when it was resolved in town-meeting to build a new meeting-house to take the place of the out-grown Blinman house, the building-committee consisted of Captain Avery and two others. In 1683, he was a member of a committee of which Major John Winthrop was chairman, to send a letter to the Rev. Mr. Mather and the Rev. Samuel Willard, at Boston, for advice concerning a successor for the Rev. Mr. Bradstreet, deceased. The church record kept by the Rev. Mr. Bradstreet, begins October 5, 1670, the day of his ordination. It begins with the following list:

"THE MEMBERS OF THE CHURCH.

Lieutenant James Avery and wife,
Thomas Miner and wife,

and eighteen others. Thus we see that the wife, Joanna, was living in the latter part of 1670; the Rev. John Avery says that she was living in 1693. The date of her death is not known. She was the mother of all his children.

About 1655, a certain Abigail, surname unknown, was married to Samuel, the son of William Cheeseboro, the founder of Stonington. Their daughter, Abigail Cheeseboro, married John, the son of Captain James Avery. Samuel Cheeseboro was buried July 31, 1673, and on June 15, 1675, his widow was married to Mr. Joshua Holmes. Mr. Holmes died in 1694, and on July 4, 1698, his widow was married to the widowed Captain James Avery. Captain James Avery died April 18, 1700,; his widow was living as late as 1714. His four sons married and had twenty daughters. The four sons had thirty-two sons. At least twenty-five of the grandsons became heads of families, and there is nothing in the records to show that the other seven were not married. These twenty-five grandsons, of whose families we have the records, had one hundred and two sons. Of these, at least eighty-five might have married, and it is known that sixty-nine of them did marry.

In studying the records of those days, the careful student is strongly impressed with the fact that Captain James Avery was a very remarkable man. Living as he did in stirring times, he was a leader among strong men, enjoying their confidence and respect because he deserved them. Especially is it to be noted that, although the state then took cognizance of affairs which we now call private and interfered in the details of family life and personal relations in a way that would not be tolerated now, he was never censured or "presented" for any shortcoming or alleged dereliction of duty or propriety. Eminent in all the relations of life, his descendants look upon him with pride and affection as one sans peur et sans reproche.

JAMES AVERY, jr., like his father before him, was an important man of affairs. He and his wife joined the 1st Church of Christ in New London, in 1672. He, with Mr. Crary, appeared before the General Court at its May session, 1696, in behalf of the inhabitants on the East side of New London river, to grant the said people liberty to embody themselves into church estate. This was the origin of the first church in Groton. Capt. James Avery and his wife are the first names in the list of those who were in full communion in the Church of Christ, in Groton, in the old Church Record, begun by John Owen, pastor, before 1727. Their tombstones, in a very good state of preservation, stand near the center of West burying-ground at Poquonoc. J. J. C.

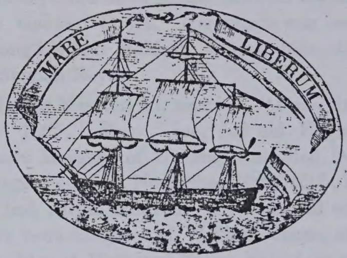
CONNECTICUT.

FROM THE FIRST SURVEY OF THE COAST IN 1612, TO 1860.

BY FRANCES MANWARING CAULKINS.

WITH MEMOIR OF THE AUTHOR.

"I have considered the days of old, the years of ancient times." Ps. LXXVII. 5.



The Seal of New London, adopted in 1784.

NEW LONDON:
Published by H. D. Utley.

Sarah and children ranging in birth from 1681 to 1694, and in 1700, an inhabitant of the new town of Lebanon, should be added to the list. If so, he was probably born after the removal to Pequot, or about 1654. The identity of his name, however, is the only evidence we can produce of the relationship.

John Culver was for several years a resident in New Haven, where the birth of a daughter, Abigail, is recorded in 1676, and son, James, in 1679.[1] He ultimately returned to the neighborhood of the Mystic. Joshua Culver, married in 1673, Elizabeth Ford, of New Haven, and settled in Wallingford.[2] Samuel Culver, about the year 1674, eloped with the wife of John Fish, and is not known to have ever returned to this part of the country. Joseph Culver settled on his father's lands at Groton.

Isaac Willey,[3] died about 1685.

Willey's house lot was on Mill Brook, at the base of Post Hill. He was an agriculturist, and soon removed to a farm at the head of Nahantic River, which was confirmed to "old goodman Willie," in 1664. It is probable that both he and his wife Joanna, had passed the bounds of middle age, and that all their children were born before they came to the banks of the Pequot. Isaac Willey, Jr., was a married man at the time of his death, in 1662; John Willey was one who wrought on the mill-dam in 1651; Abraham had married and settled in Haddam before his father's decease. No other sons are known. Hannah, wife of Peter Blatchford, is the only daughter expressly named as such, but inferential testimony leads us to enroll among the members of this family, Joanna, wife of Robert Hempstead, and afterward of Andrew Lester; Mary, wife of Samuel Tubbs, and Sarah, wife of John Terrall.

Isaac Willey married, second, after 1670, Anna, relict of Andrew Lester,[4] who survived him. The Willey farm was sold to Abel Moore and Chr. Christophers. John Willey married in 1670, Miriam, daughter of Miles Moore. He lived beyond the head of Nahantick, and when the bounds between New London and Lyme were determined, his farm was split by the line, leaving twenty acres, on which stood his house, in New London.

[3] He wrote his name Isark Willy. Mr. Bruen's orthography was Willie: he had a partiality for this termination, and wrote Averie, Marie, Doxie, &c.

[4] She had been the third wife of his former son-in-law. Relationship was sometimes curiously involved by marriages. It must be recollected that the males outnumbered the females, and there could be no wide range of choice in the selection of a wife.

Abraham Willey, the ancestor of the Haddam family, married Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Mortimer, of New London.

James Morgan, died about 1685.

He was about seventy-eight years of age.[1] The earliest notice of him is from the records of Boston, where the birth of his daughter, Hannah, is registered, eighteenth day, fifth month, 1642.[2] He was afterward of Gloucester, and came with the Cape Ann company to Pequot, where he acted as one of the townsmen, from 1653 to 1656, inclusive. His homestead, "on the path to New Street," was sold December 25th, 1657. He then removed east of the river, where he had large grants of land. The following additional grant alludes to his dwelling:

> "James Morgan hath given him about six acres of upland where the wigwams were in the path that goes from his house towards Culver's among the rocky hills."

He was often employed by the public in land surveys, stating highways and determining boundaries, and was nine times deputy to the General Court. His estate was settled in 1685, by division among his four children, James, John, Joseph and Hannah, wife of Nehemiah Royce.

James Morgan, 2d, married, "some time in the month of November, 1666," Mary Vine,[3] of old England. This was the Capt. James Morgan, of Groton, who died December 8th, 1711. John Morgan married, November 16th, 1665, Rachel Dymond, by whom he had seven children. By a second wife, Elizabeth, supposed to have been daughter of William Jones, of New Haven,[4] and granddaughter of Governor Eaton, he had six other children. Lieut. John Morgan died in Groton, 1712. Joseph Morgan married, in April, 1670, Dorothy, daughter of Thomas Parke. He died in Preston,

[3] Of the Vine family there has been no account recovered. The name can be traced in several families, as Vine Starr, Vine Utley, Vine Stoddard, &c.

April 5th, 1704. These three sons are progenitors of a numerous body of descendants.

Richard Rose-Morgan, who settled in the western part of New London, (now Waterford,) in 1679 or 1680, is the ancestor of another line of Morgans, probably of a different family from James Morgan. His descendants for a considerable period, retained the adjunct of Rose, apparently to distinguish them from that family. Richard Rose-Morgan died in 1698, leaving sons, John, Richard and Benjamin, and several daughters. His relict, widow Hope-still Morgan, died June 1st, 1712.

Cary Latham, died in 1685.

Elizabeth, wife of Cary Latham, was daughter of John Masters, and relict of Edward Lockwood. Two children are recorded in Boston: Thomas, born ninth month, 1639; Joseph, second of tenth month, probably 1642.[1] John Latham, who died at New London, about 1684, is supposed to have been a third son. The daughters were four in number: Elizabeth, wife of John Leeds; Jane, of Hugh Hubbard; Lydia, of John Packer, and Hannah, unmarried at the time of her father's decease. Mr. Latham served in various town offices; he was one of the townsmen or selectmen for sixteen years, and was six times deputy to the General Court, from May, 1664, to 1670. His large grants of land enriched his descendants.

Thomas Latham, oldest son of Cary, married, October 15th, 1673, Rebecca, daughter of Hugh Wells, of Wethersfield. He died before his father, December 14th, 1677, leaving an only son, Samuel. His relict married John Packer.

Joseph, the second son, had a numerous family. His marriage is not recorded at New London. His first child, Cary, was born at Newfoundland, July 14th, 1668. He died in 1706, leaving seven sons, and a daughter, Lydia, the wife of Benjamin Starr.

Thomas Forster, died in 1685.

Of this sea-captain nearly all that is presented to our view is the registry of his marriage, and birth of his children.

"Thomas, son of John Forster, of Kingsware, was married to Susannah, daughter of Ralph Parker, 27th of March, 1665–6.

1. Susannah, born March 4th, 1666–7.
2. Thomas, " Feb. 26th, 1668–9.
3. Jonathan, " Aug. 17th, 1673.
4. Mary, " June 14th, 1675.
5. Samuel, born Sept. 22d, 1678.
6. Rebecca, baptized June, 1681.
7. Ebenezer, " April, 1683."

Thomas Forster appears to have had brothers, Edward and Jonathan. His son, Jonathan, settled in Westerly, Rhode Island.

Hugh Hubbard, died in 1685.

"Hugh Hubbard, of Derbyshire, old England, was married to Jane, daughter of Cary Latham, in March, 1672–3." Besides a son that died in infancy, they had four daughters: 1. Mary, born November 17th, 1674; married, in 1697, "Ichabod Sayre, son of Francis Sayre, of Southampton, on Nassau Id., N. Y." This was the first marriage recorded by Rev. Gurdon Saltonstall. 2. Lydia, born February 7th, 1675–6; married John Barrows. 3. Margaret. 4. Jane. The relict of Hugh Hubbard married John Williams, and died May 3d, 1739, aged ninety-one.

Gabriel Woodmancy, died in 1685.

He is first introduced to our notice by the purchase of a homestead on what is now Shaw's Neck and Truman Street, in November, 1665. Three sons are mentioned: Thomas, born September 17th, 1670; settled in Shrewsbury, Monmouth county, New Jersey; Joseph and Gabriel. The last mentioned died without issue, in September, 1720, aged thirty-four. There was also a daughter, Sarah, born in March, 1673, who married in Killingworth, where she had descendants of the names of Hurd, Carter and Nettleton. Joseph, whom we may assume was born about 1680, is the ancestor of the Woodmancys of Groton.

Aaron Starke, died in 1685.

This name is found at Mystic as early as 1653. In May, 1666, Aaron Starke was among those who were to take the freeman's oath in Stonington, and in October, 1669, was accepted as freeman of New London. In the interim he had purchased the farm of William Thompson, the Pequot missionary, near the head of Mystic, which brought him within the bounds of New London. Neither his marriage nor his children are found recorded, but from the settlement of follows: Ann with Capt. Thomas Hosmer; Sarah with Thomas Mighill, both of Hartford: Patience, with Rev. John Bulkley of Colchester; Elizabeth, with Samuel Green, (son of Jonas Green,) and Irene with Naboth Graves—the two last of New London. Among these children, the father, in 1711, distributed the Indian servants of his household—Rachel and her children—in this order:

> "To my son-in-law Thomas Hosmer of Hartford, one black girl named Simone, till she is 30—then she is to be free. To my son-in-law John Bulkley, Bilhah,—to be free at 32. To my daughter Sarah, Zilpha—to be free at 32—To my daughter Elizabeth, a black boy named Hannibal—to be free at 35. To my daughter Irene, a boy named York, free at 35. To Scipio I have promised freedom at 30. Rachel the mother, I give to Irene—also the little girl with her, named Dido, who is to be free at 32." To this bequest is added to the three youngest daughters, then unmarried, each—"a feather bed and its furniture."[1]

Stephen Prentis, son of John the elder, inherited the farm of his father, near Niantic ferry, where he died in 1758, aged ninety-two. His wife was Elizabeth, daughter of John Rogers and granddaughter of Matthew Griswold.

John Wheeler, died December 16th, 1691.

No connection has been traced between John Wheeler of New London, and Thomas and Isaac Wheeler, cotemporary inhabitants of Stonington. John is first presented to us, as part owner of a vessel called the Zebulon, in 1667. He entered largely into mercantile concerns, traded with the West Indies, and had a vessel built under his own superintendence, which at the period of his death had just returned from an English voyage.

He left a son, Zaccheus, sixteen years of age, who died, without issue in 1703; also sons Joshua, eleven years of age, and William, eight. These lived to old age, and left descendants. Elizabeth, relict of John Wheeler, married Richard Steer—a person of whom very little is known, except in connection with the Wheeler family. He appears to have had a good business education, and to have been esteemed for capacity and intelligence, but his native place and parentage are unknown, and he stands disconnected with posterity.

Avery.

Christopher Avery was one of the selectmen of Gloucester, Mass., between 1646 and 1654.[1] On the 8th of August, 1665, he is at New London purchasing the house, orchard and lot of Robert Burrows, in the town plot. In June, 1667, he was released from watching and training. In October, 1669, made freeman of the colony. Charles Hill, the town-clerk, makes this memorandum of his decease.[2]

"Christopher Avery's death, vide, near the death of mother Brewster."

The reference is to Lucretia, relict of Jonathan Brewster, (mother-in-law to Mr. Hill,) but no record of her death is to be found. James Avery in 1685 gives a deed to his four sons, of the house, orchard and land, "which belonged, (he says) to my deceased father Christopher Avery."

No other son but James, has been traced. It may be conjectured that this family came from Salisbury, England, as a Christopher Avery of that place, had wife Mary buried in 1591.[3]

James Avery and Joanna Greenslade were married, Nov. 10th, 1643. This is recorded in Gloucester. The records of Boston church have the following entry.

> "17 of 1 mo. 1644. Our sister Joan Greenslade, now the wife of one James Averill had granted her by the church's silence, letters of recommendation to the Ch. at Gloster."[4]

The births of three children are recorded at Gloucester; these are repeated at New London, and the others registered from time to time. The whole list is as follows.

Hannah,	born Oct. 12th, 1644.	Rebecca,	born Oct. 6th, 1656.
James,	" Dec. 16th, 1646.	Jonathan,	" Jan. 5th, 1658–9.
Mary,	" Feb. 19th, 1648.	Christopher,	" Ap. 30th, 1661.
Thomas,	" May 6th, 1651.	Samuel,	" Aug. 14th, 1664.
John,	" Feb. 10th, 1653–4.	Joanna,	1669.

James Avery was sixty-two years old in 1682; of course born on the other side of the ocean about 1620. At New London he took an important part in the affairs of the plantation. He was chosen townsmen in 1660 and held the office twenty-three years, ending with 1680. He was successively, ensign, lieutenant and captain of the only company of train-bands in the town, and was in active service through Philip's War. He was twelve times deputy to the General Court, between 1658 and 1680, and was in the commission of the peace, and sat as assistant judge in the county court.

He removed to Pequonuck, east of the river, between 1660 and 1670, where both he and his wife were living in 1693. Deeds of lands to his sons, including the homestead farm, in Feb., 1693–4, probably indicate the near approach of death. His sons Jonathan and Christopher died young, and probably without issue. The descendants of James, Jr., Thomas, John, and Samuel, are very numerous, and may be regarded as four distinct streams of life. Groton is the principal hive of the family.

Capt. George Denison, died Oct. 23d, 1694.

This event took place at Hartford during the session of the General Court. His grave-stone at that place is extant, and the age given, seventy-six, shows that the date of 1621, which has been assigned for his birth, is too late. and that 1619 should be substituted. This diminishes the difference of age between him and his second wife Ann, who, according to the memorial tablet erected by her descendants at Mystic, deceased Sept. 26th, 1712, aged ninety-seven.

The history of George Denison will not be fully attempted here, but a few data gathered with care may be offered, as contributions toward the task of liberating the facts from the webs which ingenious fancy and exaggerative tradition, have thrown around them.

William Denison is accounted a fellow-passenger with the Rev. John Elliot, of Roxbury, in "the Lyon," which brought emigrants to America in 1631. His name is the third on the list of church members of Roxbury, in the record made by Elliot. He is known to have brought with him three sons, Daniel, Edward and George. The latter married in 1640, Bridget Thompson, who is supposed to have been a sister of the Rev. William Thompson, of Braintree, Mass. They had two children, Sarah, born March 20th, 1641, and Hannah, born May 20th, 1643. His wife died in August, 1643. Mr. Denison the same year visited his native country, and engaged in the civil conflict with which the kingdom was convulsed. He was absent a couple of years, and on his return brought with him a second wife[1]—a lady of Irish parentage, viz., Ann daughter of John Borrowdale or Borrodil. It is a probable conjecture that he brought also an infant son with him. He is known to have had a son George, of whose birth or baptism no record is found on this side of the ocean. The elder Winthrop at this period calls him "a young soldier lately come out of the wars in England," whom the young men of Roxbury wished to choose for their captain; but "the ancient and chief men of the town," gathered together, out-voted them and prevented them from carrying their point.[1] Two children of George and Ann Denison are recorded in Roxbury, John, born June 14th, 1646; Ann, May 20th, 1649.[2]

In 1651, we find George Denison among the planters at Pequot, where he took up a house lot, built a house and engaged in public affairs. In 1654 he removed to a farm, on the east side of Mystic River, then within the bounds of the same plantation, but afterward included in Stonington. In 1670 he had three children baptized by Mr. Bradstreet, William, Margaret and Borradil, which makes his number eight. On the old town book of Stonington is recorded the death of Mary, daughter of George Denison, Nov. 10th, 1670–1. This, we suppose to have been a ninth child, who died an infant.

Our early history presents no character of bolder and more active spirit than Capt. Denison. He reminds us of the border men of Scotland. Though he failed in attaining the rank of captain, at Roxbury, yet in our colony, he was at his first coming greeted with the title, and was very soon employed in various offices of trust and honor—such as commissioner, and deputy to the General Court. When the plantation of Mystic and Pawkatuck, was severed from New London and placed under the jurisdiction of Massachusetts with the name of Southerton, the chief management of affairs was intrusted to him.

Yet notwithstanding Capt. Denison's position as a magistrate and legislator, we do not always find him in the strict path of law and order. He had frequent disputes and lawsuits; he brought actions

[1] It is one of the many traditions respecting Capt. George Denison, that he started for England to obtain a second wife, from the funeral of the first, only waiting to see the remains deposited in the grave, but not returning to his house, before he set out.

[2] These dates from the Roxbury records were communicated by James Savage, Esq., of Boston, who observes that Margaret, the third wife of Rev. Thomas Shepard of Cambridge, and after his death the wife of his successor, Rev. Jonathan Mitchell, bore the family name of Borrowdale, and was probably sister to Mrs. Ann Denison. As these two females are the only persons known in the new world of the name, their consanguinity can scarcely be doubted.

between the two as to which is the nobler, more solemnly eloquent, document, and the worthier of the great theme which is common to them both.

Ledyard.—Ledyard is bounded on the north by Preston, on the east by Stonington and North Stonington, on the south by Groton, and on the west by the Thames. From the article written by Captain William T. Cook, over forty years ago, we quote briefly:

> The Pequot Indians were the aboriginal inhabitants of this section of the country. They were a warlike race, more savage than the surrounding tribes, and more unfriendly towards the whites, although there is no record of any Indian battle taking place within the limits of what is now known as the town of Ledyard.
> A favorite place of burial seems to have been on the farm now owned by Mr. William Fanning. An old gentleman who was present at the opening of one of these graves many years ago gives this description of it: A circular opening was dug in the earth, and the body placed in a sitting posture. A stake had been forced into the ground perpendicularly in front of it; a nail was driven into the stake, on which was hung a looking-glass opposite the face of the dead, who was supposed to be a female. Two earthen bowls were also deposited in the grave; these were supposed to contain the succotash to be used as food on the journey to the spirit-land. The finding of these articles in this grave shows that the body was placed there after the country was settled by the whites. The glass and bowls dropped in pieces on being exposed to the air. In the grave where another body was laid years after were buried a gun with seven pounds of powder and seven pounds of shot for the use of the hunter when he should arrive at the "happy hunting-grounds." A white man is said to have coveted these then precious articles and hired a man to rob the grave, but his courage failed before the time came for the attempt to be made, and the Indian is supposed to still retain his gun and ammunition.
> The last "Retreat" (so-called) of the Pequots is a portion of it situated in the northeast part of this town. This reservation, consisting originally of nine hundred acres, was called in the Indian dialect, Mashantucket. It is now known as "Indian Town." The tribe has been gradually dwindling away, and probably at this day there is not a pure blood left.

Miss Caulkins gives the names of early settlers as follows: Christopher Avery, Robert Allyn, Philip Bell, Jonathan Brewster, William Chapman, Edward Culver, Silas Dean, Edmund Fanning, George Geer, John Hurlbutt, William Maynard, Benadam Gallup, James Morgan, Isaac Lamb, Robert Park, Peter Spicer, Ralph Stoddard, Ezekiel Turner, and William Williams. Other names were added afterwards.

Jonathan Brewster, one of the early settlers, came to America in 1621; his wife Lucretia was one of the original "Mayflower" Pilgrims, and was the daughter-in-law of Elder William Brewster of Plymouth fame. Silas Dean, Jr., born in Ledyard, was graduated at Yale in 1758, and was one of the three commissioners appointed by Congress to urge France to acknowledge the independence of the United Colonies. Allyn's Point and Stoddard's Wharf still bear the name of the original settlers in these places. Gale's Ferry, as the name suggests, indicates the ocupation of a former proprietor.

The original settlement, then a portion of Groton, soon obtained permisvested in another similar enterprise, which also netted him good profits. While living in Florida, he was the State agent for the Pennsylvania Iron Works, mainly in the distribution of gas engines, a line in which he became quite an expert.

For four years of his residence at Indian River Inlet, Fla., Mr. Jerome was captain of the "House of Refuge" at that place, a branch of the U. S. L. S. S., a position which came to him unsought, and was the means of saving several lives. He was also a revenue officer for some time. For a number of years Mr. Jerome has spent his winters at West Palm Beach. He has given considerable attention to orange culture, and the high class fruit from his groves, which are at Brantley, where he lived for some time, has long since been known as the highest class reaching local markets. He uses the old Jerome home in New London for a summer residence.

In 1892 Mr. Jerome and Sarah Elizabeth Hathaway were married in Suffield, Conn. His wife was the daughter of Milton Hathaway, of that town. Mr. and Mrs. Jerome have no children. He belongs to the Episcopal Church, and has been quite active in the work of the parish. Fraternally he is a Mason, affiliated with Brainard Lodge, No. 102, A. F. & A. M.; Union Chapter; Cushing Council; Palestine Commandery, Knights Templar, and Sphinx Temple, Mystic Shrine, of Hartford. In politics he has never displayed any special interest, but votes the Republican ticket, in national affairs, but is nonpartisan in local matters. Mr. Jerome has displayed no small amount of ability in business and financial matters, and on the whole has succeeded well in life.

CHRISTOPHER MORGAN, one of the most highly esteemed residents of Mystic, Conn., was born Oct. 11, 1852, in the old Morgan homestead in Ledyard, and belongs to an old New England family which can be traced as far back as 1607.

James Morgan, the emigrant ancestor of the family, was born in the above year, in Wales. On Aug. 6, 1640, he married Margery Hill, of Roxbury, Massachusetts.

John Morgan, son of James, was born March 30, 1645, and was married (first) to Rachel Dymond, and (second) to Mrs. Elizabeth Williams, daughter of Lieut-Gov. Jones of New Haven, and granddaughter of Gov. Theophilus Eaton.

William Morgan, born in 1693, married Mary Avery, daughter of Lieut. James and Deborah (Sterling) Avery.

Capt. William Avery Morgan, son of William Morgan, was born June 17, 1723, and married, July 4, 1744, Temperance Avery, daughter of Christopher and Mrs. Prudence (Payson) (Wheeler) Avery.

Col. Christopher Morgan, son of William Avery Morgan, was born Oct. 27, 1747. On April 3, 1808, he married Martha Gates.

Col. William Morgan, son of Col. Christopher, was born March 28, 1809, and died Nov. 3, 1859. He married Cynthia Billings, born Jan. 11, 1810, died Aug. 10, 1860, daughter of Stephen and Martha (Allyn) Billings, and a descendant of one of the early planters of Stonington. Col. William Morgan was a colonel in the militia. He was a representative in the General Assembly, and at the time of his death, was, and had been for many years, the discreet and efficient agent appointed by the State to oversee and manage the estate of the Ledyard Pequots, a remnant of that ancient tribe of Indians, for whom the State had made a reservation of about 1,000 acres. To Col. Morgan and wife were born: Augusta, born July 18, 1837, married, Oct. 1, 1860, William A. Gallup, and died Sept. 28, 1890; Julia, born Aug. 18, 1839, married, June 25, 1861, Charles Stanton, and died Jan. 9, 1896; William, born Sept. 26, 1844, married, June 8, 1869, Frances E. Niles, daughter of Deacon John A. Niles, of Salem, and resides at Chicago, being connected with the S. L. & G. H. Rogers Company, of Hartford, as manager of the Chicago office; and Christopher, born Oct. 11, 1852.

Christopher Morgan spent his boyhood and early school days in Ledyard. Orphaned at the age of eight years, he went to reside with his sister, Mrs. William A. Gallup, in Norwich. Later he attended the East Greenwich Academy. From 1872 to 1873 he filled the office of assistant warden at the Norwich Jail. He taught school at Ledyard, and at East Great Plain in Norwich, thus earning the money which took him through the State Normal School in New Britain. In 1875 he engaged as traveling salesman for Hall, Elton & Co., of Wallingford, Conn., and from 1886 to 1889 was engaged with Rogers & Brother, of Waterbury, when this became a part of the International Silver Company, of Meriden. In this line of work Mr. Morgan has met with remarkable success, and has drawn much trade from the large jobbing centers, and he disposes of all of Rogers & Brother's famous goods direct from the factory.

The fine personality of Mr. Morgan, with his frank, candid statements of the value and quality of his goods, have had much to do with a success that is quite unusual. Mr. Morgan possesses a fine physique, genial presence and high bred manners, and these have won him friends wherever he has done business. Since 1887 he has been a resident of Mystic. In 1900 he was one of the organizers, and became president of The Mystic League for Village Improvement, an organization designed to work for the beautifying of this village.

Mr. Morgan was reared to take an interest in Masonic work and he is a member of St. James Lodge, No. 23, Norwich, Conn.; Franklin Chapter, No. 4; St. Elmo Commandery, Meriden, No. 9; Connecticut Consistory, 32nd degree, Norwich; and Pyramid Temple, Bridgeport, Connecticut.

On June 21, 1887, Mr. Morgan married Edith May, daughter of Benjamin F. and Lydia (Williams) Noyes, and two children have been born to them: Christopher Lyston, born Feb. 6, 1889; and Richard William, born June 27, 1892.

BENJAMIN F. NOYES, father of Mrs. Morgan, was born in the town of Stonington, and died in Savannah, Ga., June 18, 1879, son of Frank and a grandson of Nathan Noyes. Until he was sixteen years of age, he remained upon the home farm, and then shipped before the mast, on the whaling vessel, "Coriolanus," of Mystic, under Capt. Gustavus Appleman, and made a voyage of three years. A second voyage of eighteen months was made as boat steerer, on the bark "United States" with Capt. Barnum, looking for sea elephants. From this time on, he was promoted until he became master of a ship and part owner of the vessels on which he sailed. At the time of his death he was in charge of the schooner "Charmer," and was reckoned a brave and intrepid mariner. He was a Master Mason, belonging to the lodge in Norwich, and later in Mystic. In religion he was a member of the Baptist Church.

On Aug. 13, 1854, Mr. Noyes married Lydia, daughter of Sanford Avery and Lucy (Stanton) Williams, and they had children as follows: Sanford Frank, born May 21, 1855, died Sept. 27, 1857, aged two years; Edith May, born Sept. 2, 1864, wife of Christopher Morgan; Charles, born Oct. 27, 1871, married Mary T. Foote, July 27, 1892, and they have two sons, Burton Frank, born Aug. 18, 1901; and Morgan Foote, born July 3, 1904.

Sanford Avery Williams was born Nov. 14, 1805, and died in September, 1871. His wife was born June 14, 1812, married Oct. 28, 1832, and died June 16, 1878. Their children were: Lydia, Mrs. Noyes, born Oct. 27, 1833; Betsey, born Sept. 27, 1835, who married Amos Giles Stanton, and died Sept. 9, 1894; Prudence Mary, born Jan. 17, 1841, and died aged four years; and Mary Prudence, born Feb. 27, 1846, died Nov. 3, 1869.

Mrs. Noyes and her daughter, Mrs. Morgan, are members of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and for two years Mrs. Morgan was regent of the Fanny Ledyard Chapter. Three of Mrs. Noyes' ancestors, Elnathan Perkins, Captain John Williams and Captain Amos Stanton, were killed in the massacre at Fort Griswold in Groton, in 1781. She has in her possession the muster roll of Captain Amos Stanton in the original handwriting, dated Nov. 9, 1777.

Through John Alden and Priscilla Mullins, Mrs. Morgan is also a member of the Society of Mayflower descendants.

HON. THOMAS HAMILTON, member of the firm of G. M. Long & Co., wholesale and retail dealers in sea food, at New London, also president of both the Groton and Stonington Electric Railroad Company and the New London & East Lyme Electric Railroad Company, and one of the well-known and prominent citizens of southern New London county, is a native of New London, Prince Edward Island.

Alexander Hamilton, his father, was born in Arran, Scotland, and in his young manhood emigrated to Dalhousie, in New Brunswick, and later settled on Prince Edward Island, where he was a tradesman, and where he died. His wife, Ann S. Pillman, a native of London, England, survived him, and died at the home of a daughter in New London, Conn. They had five children, one of whom died in infancy. Of the others, Jane W., formerly Mrs. Thompson, has married again, and resides in Dawson City, Alaska; Ann S. became Mrs. Ingerson and died in Groton, Conn.; Thomas is mentioned below; John R. resides in Seattle, Washington.

Thomas Hamilton was born Sept. 22, 1846, and his early life was spent after the usual fashion of boys of his locality and period, his educational advantages being confined to school attendance for a few months each winter, and the remainder of the year being devoted to hard work. He was but a small boy when he began going on the water, being employed on fishing vessels in the vicinity of his home. This work he followed for several years, and before he attained his majority he was master of a fishing schooner sailing from New London, Conn., having a crew of twenty-one men under him. For a number of years the vessels commanded by Capt. Hamilton fished during the summer seasons in the vicinity of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and passed the winter seasons in the coasting and the West Indies trade. He continued to be thus employed until about 1877, when he retired from the command in order to devote his entire time to his interests in the establishment of G. M. Long & Co., with which he had been connected since 1870.

G. M. Long & Co. embarked in the oyster business at the foot of State street, in New London, near their present location, in 1868. In those days oysters were freighted in schooners by the cargo lot from the Chesapeake, and were opened and distributed to different points in New England States. In 1875 the firm established an oyster house in Crisfield, Md., which was continued in connection with the New London business until 1888. In 1885 they bought the Henry Chapell wholesale and retail fish business, then the largest in Connecticut, and they also purchased fine wharf property to which they moved their oyster business, and there, in conjunction with the selling of fish, they carried it on until 1898. That year the property was condemned for railroad purposes, and they removed to their present location. They are the proprietors of the Rocky Point Oyster Company, which ranks among the largest wholesale oyster dealers in Providence, having over 500 acres of oyster ground under cultivation in Narragansett Bay and Kickemut river, and operating four steamers.

Outside of his interests in the sea food business, Capt. Hamilton has looked to the development and improvement of his town and county, and has given especial attention to electric roads. He is president of the Groton & Stonington Electric Railras Christopher Lyman, born Feb. 6, 1889; and nuel William, born June 27, 1892.

ISTOPHER E. NOYES, father of Mrs. Morgan, s born in the town of Stonington, and died in avannah, Ga., June 18, 1869, son of Frank and a grandson of Nathan Noyes. Until he was sixteen years of age he remained upon the home farm, and then shipped before the mast, on the whaling vessel oriolanus," of Mystic, under Capt. Gurdon Alerton, and made a voyage of three years. A second voyage of eighteen months was made as boat steerer, on the bark "United States" with Capt. ington, looking for sea elephants. From this time on he was promoted until he became master of a ship and part owner of the vessels on which he sailed. At the time of his death he was in charge of the steamer "Charmer," and was reckoned a brave and successful mariner. He was a Master Mason, belonging to the lodge in Norwich, and later in Stonington. In religion he was a member of the Baptist Church.

On Aug. 13, 1852, Mr. Noyes married Lydia, daughter of Sanford Avery and Lucy (Crumb) Williams, and they had children as follows: Sarah Frank, born May 21, 1853, died Sept. 30, 1855, aged two years; Edith May, born Sept. 2, 1857, wife of Christopher Morgan; Charles, born Oct. 27, 1861, married Mary T. Lamb July 25, 1898, and they have two sons, Morton Frank, born Aug. 10, 1902, and Morgan Noyes, born July 3, 1904.

Sanford Avery Williams was born Nov. 14, 1805, and died in September, 1874. His wife was born June 14, 1802, married Oct. 28, 1822, and died June 18, 1878. Their children were: Lydia, Mrs. Noyes, born Oct. 27, 1833; Betsey, born Sept. 27, 1835, who married Amos Giles Simmons, and died Sept. 9, 1869; Prudence Mary, born Jan. 1, 1841, and died aged four years; and Mary Prudence, born Feb. 27, 1846, died Nov. 5, 1869.

Mrs. Noyes and her daughter, Mrs. Morgan, are members of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and for two years Mrs. Morgan was regent of the Fanny Ledyard Chapter. Three of Mrs. Noyes' ancestors, Jonathan Tyrrell, Captain John Williams and Captain Amos Stanton, were killed in the massacre at Fort Griswold in Groton in 1781. She has in her possession the muster-roll of Captain Amos Stanton in the original handwriting, dated Nov. 9, 1777.

Through John Alden and Priscilla Mullins, Mrs. Morgan is also a member of the Society of Mayflower descendants.

HON. THOMAS HAMILTON, member of the firm of G. M. Long & Co., wholesale and retail dealers in sea food, at New London, also president of both the Groton and Stonington Electric Railroad Company and the New London & East Lyme Electric Railroad Company, and one of the well-known and prominent citizens of southern New London county, is a native of New London, Prince Edward Island.

Alexander Hamilton, his father, was born in Arran, Scotland, and in his young manhood emigrated to Dalhousie, in New Brunswick, and later settled on Prince Edward Island, where he was a tradesman, and where he died. His wife, Ann S. Pullman, a native of London, England, survived him, and died at the home of a daughter in New London, Conn. They had five children, one of whom died in infancy. Of the others, Jane W., formerly Mrs. Thompson, has married again, and resides in Dawson City, Alaska; Ann S. became Mrs. Ingersoll and died in Groton, Conn.; Thomas is mentioned below; John R. resides in Seattle, Washington.

Thomas Hamilton was born Sept. 22, 1846, and his early life was spent after the usual fashion of boys of his locality and period, his educational advantages being confined to school attendance for a few months each winter, and the remainder of the year being devoted to hard work. He was but a small boy when he began going on the water, being employed on fishing vessels in the vicinity of his home. This work he followed for several years, and before he attained his majority he was master of a fishing schooner sailing from New London, Conn., having a crew of twenty-one men under him. For a number of years the vessels commanded by Capt. Hamilton fished during the summer seasons in the vicinity of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and passed the winter seasons in the coasting and the West India trade. He continued to be thus employed until about 1879, when he retired from the command in order to devote his entire time to his interests in the establishment of G. M. AVERY

A complete history of the Avery family is given in the book, "The Groton Avery Clan," by Elroy M. Avery. This gives the line down to and including the Hannah Avery who married Corporal Edward Mills. From that I have traced the family through town and military records and the book, "Pioneer and Patriotic Families of Bradford Co. Pennsylvania," and through the Mills family still living in Bradford County, Pa. Those wishing more information will find it in the books mentioned.

The following Avery history is compiled from "The Groton Avery Clan" unless otherwise specified. Christopher Avery was born in England: married at Ippleden, Devonshire, Margery Stephens on August 26, 1616.

In the diocese of Exetor, Devon, England, the city of Exeter, the Bishop's Registry at the Cathedral is the following: "1616, Aug. 26, Christopher Averye of Ipleden and Margery Stephens of Abbotts, Kerswell."

Some authorities think that Margery was the daughter of Edward and Margaret Stephens of Kingswear. Edward Stephens was a mariner who died in 1626.

One tradition says that Christopher Avery came to America in the Arabella with Governor Winthrop, landing at Salem, Mass., June 12, 1630. Another tradition is that he came with the younger Winthrop in 1631. He left his wife in England, but brought his son James with him. He is first found at Cape Ann, Mass.

In the town-book of Gloucester his name is mentioned as a landowner in 1642.*

Vol. I of the 'Gloucester Town Book' records: "Upon the fourth day of the tenth month 1646, Thomas Wakeley, Hugh Calkins, Will Vinson, John Collins, and Christopher Avery were chosen by the Towne for ordering all Towne affairs."*

---

*In 1653 one of the witnesses against Christopher Avery in a church quarrel was "Edward Mills." Was this the ancestor of Corporal Edward Mills?

"Aug. 28, 1651: Christopher Avery is chosen to be a measurer to lay out Lottes granted by the Townesmen."*

"1652: William Stephens, Robert Tucker, Robert Elwell, Christopher Avery, George Ingersoll are chosen by the Towne for the ordering of the Towne affairs."*

"3:2:1653: Christopher Avery and John Collins measure the meeting house plane."*

"1654. Christopher Avery, John Hardin, Robert Elwell, Richard Windrow, Samuel Dolliver, are chosen to take charge of the Towne affairs."*

In the Essex County Court records and files we find this: "28:10:1647. Christopher Avery sworn constable of Gloucester."*

In the Salem Quarterly Court records and files: "Court 29:4:1642. Christopher Avery and Silvester Everly of Gloucester sworn freemen."

"Christopher Avery chosen and sworn clerk of the band of Gloster."*

"Christopher Avery chosen and sworn clerk of the market of Gloster."*

His son James settled at Pequot Plantation on the Thames River, Conn.

About 1655 Christopher Avery left Gloucester for Boston where, May 30, 1655, he was admitted as an inhabitant.

"1 mo. 5/6, '57 Christopher Avery sold to Elias Parkman" 4 poles of ground and "2 acres of land in fishermans field and 2 acres of land lying at the head of the houselotts in the head of the harbour," and to Nicholas Marshall be sold "my house and land lying in Gloucester near Thomas Skellians containing in marsh 11 or 12 acres more or less with the house and land belonging to it."

*The above services of Christopher have been accepted by Colonial Dames, Daughters of the American Colonists, and other societies as proving eligibility to membership.

On March 18, 1659, Christopher Avery bought for forty pounds a home in Boston. The lot was twenty-six by forty-six feet and was located at what is now the center of the Post-Office building that faces on Devonshire Street. About four years later he sold the lot for forty pounds. He then followed his son James to Jequot on the Thames, now New London, Aug. 8, 1665. He there purchased a house, lot, and orchard. This land afterwards passed to his son James, who deeded it to his four sons.

Christopher Avery served on the jury, county court, 1667. Oct. 14, 1669, Christopher Avery and his son James were made freemen of the colony by the General Court of Conn.

Christopher Avery was buried Mar. 12, 1679.

His son, Captain James Avery, was born about 1620 in England. Married first, Nov. 10, 1643 at Boston, Joanna Greenslade. Married 2d, July 4, 1698, Abigail, widow of Joshua Holmes.

James was the only child of his parents, as shown by the records of the County Court of New London, 1692. Nothing is known of the ancestry of Joanna Greenslade. There was a Thomas (or John) Greenslade of Scarboro 1658, Salem 1668, who died at sea 1693, leaving a family who went to the region of New London, Conn. There was a Thomas Greenslatt who was granted permission Oct. 7, 1679 to go in the sloop 'True Friendship' for Antegua.

There was a Samuel Greenslide aged 27 and Barbary his wife, aged 35, with two children Mary and Barbara, came over in 1637. A weaver from Norwich.* There was also an Edward Greenslade of Boston. Greenslades are an English family, living in Devon, and very numerous there. The first son was named James after his father. The second 'Thomas,' making it probable that her father was Thomas Greenslade.

The Town Book of Gloucester shows many entries referring to ownership of land by James Avery.

24:4:1650: James Avery, grandjuryman.

In Oct. 1650 he was granted land at Pequot (New London). About 1656 he built and occupied the famous 'Hive of the Averys' at the head of Poquonock Plain, in the present town of Groton, a mile and a half from the River Thames. In June 1684 the old church and watch tower of the wilderness was sold to Captain James Avery for six pounds. He had the building taken down and moved by river and sound to the 'Hive of the Averys.' Here services were held, Captain James sometimes occupying the pulpit himself when no preacher was present.

This old home of the Averys never passed into alien hands but was occupied by descendants of James Avery until it burned 1894. Afterwards the owner of the homestead, James Denison Avery, gave the land to the Avery Memorial Association, and it was made into an Avery Memorial Park. John D. Rockefeller, a descendant* of Captain James Avery, had a bronze memorial tablet erected in the Park on the site of his ancestors' home, 'The Hive of the Averys.'

At Pequot Captain James Avery seems to have taken at once an active part in private and public affairs. For some years he was commissioner for New London. In 1657 the Narragansetts made a wild foray and Uncas, Sachem of the Mohegans, fled to a fort. He was besieged by the foe, but just in time Lt. James Avery, Mr. Brewster, Richard Haughton, Samuel Lothrop and others, well armed, went to his rescue and drove the Narragansetts away. After England declared war against Holland in 1665, a committee was appointed by the Conn. General Court to look out for the safety of the Plantation. The Committee in charge from Southerton to Guilford was, among others, Ensign Avery.

In the same year, 1665, the Gen'l. Court confirmed Ensign 'James Avery as lieutenant to ye train band at New London.'

For several years the commissioners of the United Colonies of New England referred everything relative to the Pequots to Messrs. Denison Stanton and Avery for adjustment. In 1668 James Avery and Cary Latham were chosen by the town to settle the boundary line with the Sachem Uncas. May 13, 1678 Captain Avery was appointed by the Court to be one of a Committee to secure suitable land for the Indians. In 1669 Lieut. James Avery was one of a Committee to settle difficulties with the Indian Sachem Ninigret of the Nianticks. They settled the matter peaceably, and there was no Indian uprising. In 1672 the general court ordered that Capt. John Winthrop should be the 'Chiefe military officer' for the county of New London. and Lt. James Avery his second. In 1673 danger was again apprehended from the Dutch and each county was ordered to prepare for defense. New London County was to add a hundred 'dragoons' to her train-bands, and for 'such forces shall be called out of that county. James Avery appointed Captain.'

Nov. 25, 1675 Captain Avery was appointed by the Council fifth in command of the united army which was to go against the Indians.*

Captain James Avery served in many capacities both in civil and military life. He was commissioner in the court at New London; deputy to the General Court: Judge of the County Court: Selectman for twenty-three years, etc.

"In studying the records of those days, the careful student is strongly impressed with the fact that Capt. James Avery was a very remarkable man. MORGAN

"Morgan is a Welsh name meaning "By the sea" or "sea born," and is of the greatest antiquity, being in common use at the time of the Conquest, as appears in entries in "Domes Day Book" and "Battle Roll."

The founder of the Pelegian heresy in the fourth century (about A. D. 360) was a true Welshman, a monk of Bangor. His name was Morgan which signifies "By the sea" and this has been correctly Latinized Pelegius.

The general use of surnames was not assumed in England until A. D. 1070, and was then introduced by the Normans under William the Conqueror, although some occasional surnames among the old Anglo-Saxons and Welsh families, and among them that of Morgan, had existed for many centuries earlier.

In Woodward's "History of Wales from the Earliest Times," accounts are given of several sovereign Welsh Princes and petty Kings of the name of Morgan; famous fellows in war, in their day, and formidable barriers against Anglo-Saxon domination and encroachment: some of them living as far back as A. D. 400. To one of these ancient Kings, Morgan of Gla—Morgan, about 725, is accredited the invention and adoption of the trial by jury, which he called the "Apostolic Law," for, to quote our regal and pious namesake, "As Christ and his twelve Apostles were finally to judge the world, so human tribunals should be composed of the King and twelve wise men."

And this, it is seen, was a century and a half prior to the reign of Alfred the Great who is generally accredited as the first founder of this form of trial.

The Morgan coat-of-arms is an escutcheon in green, bearing a lion rampant in gold.

James Morgan was born in Wales in 1607, probably in Llandaff, Glamorgan County. The family appears to have moved from Llandaff to Bristol, England, prior to 1636. The name of his father is unknown but tradition says it was William.

In 1636, in March, James Morgan and two younger brothers, John and Miles, sailed from Bristol and arrived at Boston in April following.

John Morgan was a high churchman and disliked the austerity of the Puritans. He moved to Virginia.

Miles Morgan moved to Springfield, Mass., and became the progenitor of the Morgan family now represented by J. P. Morgan of Morgan and Company, International Bankers.*

I. James Morgan, the eldest brother and our lineal ancestor, may have settled first at Plymouth. He is found at Roxbury near Boston, before 1640. That year, Aug. 6, 1640, he married there Margery Hill of Roxbury. He was made a freeman there May 10, 1643. He is named as a resident there in the inventory of John Graves, 1646, and was a freeholder there as late as 1650, the same year that he removed to Pequot (now New London) and had a houselot assigned him there.

It has heretofore been supposed by myself, as well as others, that James Morgan was one of the party of emigrants called the "Cape Ann Company" who came to New London in 1650 from Gloucester, Cape Ann, Mass., consisting of the Rev. Richard Blinman and several members of his society and church at Cape Ann, but it is now known that he resided at Roxbury for at least two years prior to his removal to New London.

Early in 1650 he had land granted him at Pequot which was occupied by him as a homestead "On the path of New Street" (now Ashcraft Street) and a further entry upon the records shows that "James Morgan hath given him about six acres of upland, where the wigwams were, in the path that goes from his house toward Culvers' among the rocky hills." These tracts were located near the present third burial ground, in the western suburbs of the city of New London: a location sterile and dreary and which in a few years was abandoned by its occupants for homes and broader lands of fairer promise on the east side of the River Thames.

He continued to occupy this homestead on the path to New Street or "Cape Ann Lane" as it was called in honor of the Cape Ann Company who settled there until about March 1657.

On the 25th day of Dec. 1656 he sold his homestead and removed soon after, with several others, across the river upon large tracts of land previously granted them by the town, upon the east side, now the south part of Groton.

James Avery, William Meades and Nehemiah and John Smith, who also had grants of land adjoining to him, were among the first settlers, and the earliest resident farmers upon the east side, now Groton. Grants of land had been made from time to time after 1652-3 by the colony at Pequot, with a liberal hand, upon the east side of the river, comprising the fertile regions of what is now the southern part of Groton, and these lands were soon after occupied generally by the several proprietors.

It was upon the east side of the River Thames that James Morgan settled, and in a rude log cabin with his family consisting of wife and three sons and a daughter; and this territory, made the separate town of Groton May 1705, and again divided by setting off the town of Ledyard in 1836, has never been and still remains the prolific hive of our name and family.

He was a large proprietor and dealer in lands; distinguished in public enterprises; often employed by the public in land surveys, establishing highways, determining boundaries, adjusting civil difficulties, as a good neighbor and a Christian man, in whom all appear to have reposed a marked degree of confidence and trust.

He was one of the "townsmen" or selectmen of New London for several years, and was one of the first "Deputies" sent from New London Plantations to the General Court at Hartford, May Session 1657 (at which date he deposed his age to be about 50 years) and was nine times afterwards chosen a member of that grave and important assembly, the last time in 1670. His associates and compeers composing the General Court or Colonial Assembly in May 1657, when he was first chosen, were Governor John Winthrop, John Mason, Jonathan Brewster, Thomas Welles, etc.

To this carefully selected body of men was intrusted the whole sovereign power of the colony, and the administration of its government, in original jurisprudence of the most trifling as well as most henious offenses and causes of action, and the minutest details in every department.

James Morgan seems to have impressed this grave body of men with a high sense of his sterling honesty and integrity of character, and it appears that in a controversy between the General Court and the New London Plantation about boundaries and jurisdiction, it was ordered that the matter should be submitted to three arbiters, mutually agreed upon, New London at once named their own townsman, James Morgan, really a party in their own interest, but nevertheless the General Court as promptly accepted him, and without naming another, agreed to submit to his sole decision, which when made, seems to have satisfied all parties.

He was an active and useful member of the church under Rev. Richard Blinman's ministry, and his name is prominent in every important movement or proceeding.

"James Morgan, Mr. Tinker and Obadiah Brown, are chosen to seat the people in the meeting house, which they doing, the inhabitants are to rest silent."

(Minutes from the record.)

In 1661 he was one of a committee of the General Court to lay out the bounds of New London "On the east side of the Great River."

In 1662 he was one of a committee to contract "for building a house for the ministry" at New London.

From about this time he signs his name "James Morgan, Senior, of New London," his oldest son, afterwards Capt. James Morgan, being then near twenty-one years of age.

This year, 1662, his list on the town assessment stands the third highest in amount: and among the tax-payers of that year, about one hundred in number, only seven had a list exceeding 200£. James Morgan's list was only 250£, but this was a large estate in those primitive days.

The spot where he first built his house in Groton in 1657, and where he ever afterwards resided, and where he died, is a few rods southeast of the present dwelling (1868) of Elijah S. Morgan, about three miles from Groton Ferry, on the road to Poquonoc Bridge and this patriarchal homestead from that day down to the present occupant has descended through an unbroken line of James Morgans, for six generations. And it is worthy of note, in connection with this fact, that for eight generations as they hereinafter succeed each other, in regular order of individual precedence, each one is headed by the name of James Morgan.

He died 1685, aged 78 years, and his estate was divided soon after his death among his four surviving children.

James Morgan and Margery (Hill) Morgan had the following children:

I. Hannah, born May 18, 1642, married Nehemiah Royce Nov. 1660.

II. James, born March 3, 1644 married Mary Vine Nov. 1666.

III. John born March 30, 1645 married Rachel Dymon: married 2d. widow Elizabeth Williams.

IV. Joseph, born Nov. 29, 1646 married Dorothy Park April 1670.

V. Abraham, Sept. 3, 1648, died Aug. 1649.

VI. A daughter born Nov. 17, 1650. Died young.

Captain James Morgan born March 3, 1644, married "Mary Vine of Old England," Nov. 1666, died Dec. 8, 1711 aged eighty-eight years.

His wife Mary died in 1689 of the "throat distemper." She was born in England 1641 and was forty-eight years old when she died. After her death he married a second wife, Hannah—, born 1640, who died 1711, aged seventy-one, a few days before his own death, but after the date of his will, in which he calls her "his dear and loving wife."

His will was dated in Groton June 25, 1708 and approved in probate Jan. 22, 1712. In it he bequeathes to his "dear and loving wife Hannah Morgan" his "horse and chaise, barn, and orchard by it, and the lower field this side of the cross fence which joineth the south brook" to enjoy during her life.

To his son James his "field;" one half the barn and all his land at home, subject to the joint control and use of his widow, so long as she so remained. Also to James a lot "in the plain," near the salt marsh, "on the north side of the island." To his son William. "The land he has already a deed of," and one hundred acres, and "one little island in Packanacock plain, that is, my sons James and William shall have equally." To his four daughters, Mercy, (Mary), Hannah, Elizabeth and Jerusha, all his cattle, horses and sheep to be equally divided between them. To his grandson James Morgan his saddle, bridle, and short gun, and to his grandson William Morgan, his musket."

He was an active member and one of the two first deacons of the first church in Groton: was the principal magistrate, and transacted the chief part of the civil business around him, for many years. At the first town meeting held after the town was incorporated, in December, 1705, he was the moderator, and chosen first townsman or selectman. He was moderator of nearly every town or society meeting until near his death in 1711, and after that for many years his place as moderator was supplied by his two sons, Deacon James and Lieut. John, sometimes the one acting and sometimes the other. He was chosen captain of the first train band in Groton in 1692, under an order of the Governor and Council, authorizing a military company to be formed there, and had been then two years a Captain and commander of the "Dragoon" forces of New London County, under a special commission from the General Court.

Like his father, he was one of the Deputies to the General Court from New London serving from 1689 to 1700, and afterwards one of the first Deputies from the new town of Groton in 1708; and for several years was a Commissioner to advise and direct the Pequot Indians in the management of their affairs.

The military titles of these early days, even down to that of ensign or sergeant, were esteemed as marks of high distinction and from their peculiar importance, and the care and caution with which the officers were chosen, very justly so. These infant plantations were surrounded by hostile tribes of Indians, overwhelming in numbers: exposed constantly to the inroads of prowling bands, often irritated and always treacherous, and their very existence as well as peace and safety depended much upon the personal character, the wise sagacity, prudent counsel, and conduct, and the cool intrepedity of these chosen military guardians. Hence it was the early practice, when the leading officers of the "train band" were to be chosen, to open the proceedings by solemn proclamation and prayer, and sometimes a special sermon for the occasion was prepared and preached to the company by their minister.

Captain James lived and died upon the old patriarchal homestead of his father, James, already described.

b 1620 of Christopher [illegible]

1. Capt. James Avery came from Devonshire, England, to Massachusetts, with Governor Winthrop's company, in 1630, thence to New London or "Pequoit," (now Groton,) with the first settlers, about 1647. His name appears among the members of the "General Court at Hartford" as a "Deputy from N. London plantations" as early as May Session, 1659, and for several years afterwards. He married Sarah, daughter of Thomas Minor, of (now) Stonington. Both were distinguished families in the "Pequoit" country, and have ever been regarded as the leading names among the early settlers of the towns of Groton and Stonington. The children of James and Sarah, were :

10. Samuel, born Aug. 14, 1664.

James Avery, Jr., (3) married Deborah STALLION ~~Sterling~~, Feb. 20, 1669. He was also a distinguished man—lived in what is now Groton, and died 1728, aged 82. His children were :

11. Deborah, born Aug. 10, 1670.
12. James, 3d, born April 20, 1673.
13. Margaret, born Feb. 7, 1674.
14. Edward, born March 20, 1676.

16. Christopher, born Jan. 25, 1680.
17. Hannah, born March 24, 1685.
18. Sarah, born May 10, 1688.

Christopher Avery, (16) son of James, Jr. and Deborah, married Abigail Payson, and had subsequently, as it appears, three other wives. He lived in the N. W. corner of Groton, now Ledyard, and died in 1753, aged 73 years. His children were:

MORGAN GENEALOGY.

1. James Morgan, (probably of Welch parents,) came from Gloucester, Mass., to "Pequoit," with a party of settlers as early as the first settlement—probably in 1647. The party were mostly Welchmen, and consisted chiefly if not entirely of the Reverend Richard Blinman, and his church, at Cape Ann. May 17, 1649—The General Court or Colonial Assembly, at Hartford, "Graunted that the bounds of the plantation of Pequett shall bee foure myles on each side of the Riuer, and six myles from the sea northward into the country." * * * Provided, "That the aforesaid bounds bee not distributed to less than forty familyes." In 1650, he has lands granted him, per N. London Town Records, and in his deeds for several years after he styles himself "of Pequoit," which in 1657, March 11th, was named New London by act of the General Court, "in memory of yt renowned Citty of London." He was a large proprietor and dealer in land, and distinguished in public enterprise. He was the first Deputy from N. London plantations to the General Court at Hartford, May Session, 1657, and was repeatedly returned to his seat in that grave and important assembly in after years.

In 1659, June 15—"Deacon Caulkin, James Morgan and James Avery, are appoynted to lay out ye Gouernour's land" "at the head of Pocatanock Cove," by the General Court.

1660, March 14—"It is desired that Maior Mason, Goodman* [James] Morgan and Vncus or Wawequa"—"will view the tract of land yt Mr. Tinker desires" "and make report thereof to ys Court."

* Goodman—not his Christian name, but a title frequently found in old records, denoting a church member and head of a family, sometimes mistaken for a Christian name by the inexperienced.

In 1656, April 4, "his ⋊ mark" appears signed to the "inventory of Walter Harris* and Mary his wife," then recently deceased, dated at "Pequoit."

In 1660, he and his son James, Jr., were witnesses to the will of "Robert Parks of Mistick"—the junior signing his name in a fair hand, but the senior making "his ⋊ mark," which seems to have been his custom through life.

In 1661, he with Matthew Griswold and Thomas Tracy, was a committee to lay out the bounds of New London "on the east side of the Great River."

In 1662, he was one of a committee to contract "for building a house for the ministry" at New London. From about this time he styles himself "James Morgan, Senior, of New London," in his deeds. He was living as late as 1692, as appears from these deeds given at various times, and was then called Captain.

From the following extracts from the Colonial Court Records, he must have been born about 1607—10—probably 1607.

"General Court, Aug. 12th, 1657—James Morgan, aged about 50 years, testifyed vpon oath before this Court," &c.

"General Court, May 8, 1680—James Morgan, Seniour, aged 70 years thereabouts, testifyed," &c.

He married Margery Hill Aug. 6. [illegible]

born at [illegible] 1642. — [illegible]

2. Hannah, who married Nehemiah ~~Rogers~~, Nov. 20, 1660.
3. James, Jr., who married "Mary Vine of Old England," Nov. —, 1666.
4. John, who married Rachel ~~Dyman~~, Nov. 16, 1665.
5. Joseph, who married Dorothy, daughter of Thomas Parks, April —, 1670.

6 [illegible]

It is also probable that he had other children—see 149, 166, 179. — He removed [illegible]

The children of James Morgan, Jr., (3) and Mary Vine, were :

× William Morgan, (7) son of James, Jr. and Mary, married Margaret, daughter of James Avery, Jr., [see Avery 3—13] and had 9 children.

I have neither the names or date of birth of any of these children, except one, viz:

29. William, Jr., born 1693, and died Feb., 1748, aged 55. He married his cousin, Mary Avery, July 3, 1716, who was born 1696, and died April, 1780, aged 84—daughter (sup.) of James Avery, 3d, (12) and great grand daughter of Capt. James

Peabody & Crafts; from 1884 to 1887, with Frank Tillinghast, under the name of Crafts & Tillinghast; and subsequently alone. Since October, 1906, he has had his office in Providence. In politics Mr. Crafts has been a Republican. In 1901 he was a candidate for the nomination of state senator and was loyally supported by his friends, but was defeated, In November, 1903, he was elected first representative in the general assembly of Rhode Island, and became a member of the judiciary committee. He was a delegate to the Republican national convention at Chicago in 1904. He was re‰lected to the general assembly in 1904, receiving in the caucus the largest majority ever given a candidate in Westerly. He was again appointed on the judiciary committee. Mr. Craft is an able and convincing public speaker, and it has been said that he was the most eloquent speaker in the Rhode Island legislature since the days of Tristram Burgess. An editorial supporter of Mr. Crafts has written:

> Westerly's leading lawyer has always been a strong, consistent party man. * * * He is in no sense a politician and would receive no additional honors by representing Westerly in the General Assembly, but with Mr. Crafts in the capitol at Providence as representative. Westerly would take a front rank in State affairs, simply through his ability, force of character and the wellknown law that makes men of worth and energy gravitate naturally towards the top. Mr. Crafts does things; he is a tireless worker of tremendous energy and at every opportunity he has been on the right side of important questions in which the people have been interested; without detracting from the able assistance rendered by his colleagues it is safe to say it was mainly through his splendid work on the water works cases that the happy end of the litigation resulted. The popular counselor has a large following.

Mr. Crafts married (first) October 1, 1881. Jennie Louise Blake, of Ashaway, Rhode Island; she died November 19, 1884. He married (second) December 17, 1892, Mary Amittai Stark, of Mystic, Connecticut (see Stark). They have one child, Alberta Barnard, born July 6, 1901; who is a member of the Joseph Buchlin Chapter of the Children of the American Revolution, and of the National Society, Children's Branch of the Sons and Daughters of the Pilgrims, being a direct descendant on the maternal side of Myles Standish. John Alden and Priscilla

Mullins.

(The Stark Line).

The family of Stark is of ancient Scotch origin. The ancestry of the Scotch family is traced to Murhead, in Bothwick, in 1100. In 1347 his lineal descendant Murhead was created lord of Lacrope. In 1480, John Murhead, son of the lord of Lacrope, was named John Stark, signifying great strength.

Aaron Stark, the immigrant ancestor, was settled at Hartford as early as 1639, and was of Windsor in 1643, finally locating at New London. His name is found in Mystic as early as 1650, being among the Stonington men who took the freeman's oath in 1666. He bought a farm near the head of the Mystic river of William Thompson, the Pequot missionary, and was included within the boundaries of New London. Neither marriage or children are found on the vital records, but the probate records show that he had sons, Aaron, John and William, and that his daughters married John Fish and Josiah Haynes. His wife was probably Mary Holt. He was a soldier in King Philip's war, and received a grant of land at Voluntown, Connecticut, for his services. He died in 1685. His descendants have been numerous at Mystic, Connecticut, and vicinity.

(I) Daniel Stark, a descendant of Aaron, was born, lived and died at Mystic, Connecticut. He married Elizabeth Frink. He was a quiet, earnest and upright man, deacon in the Baptist church, and a prosperous farmer in Mystic all his active life.

(II) Jonathan, son of Daniel Stark, was born in Mystic. He was a farmer in his native town, highly respected in the community. He was deacon of the Baptist church. He married Betsey Reed. Children: Eliza, Emily, Julia, J. Russell, mentioned below, and William.

(III) James Russell, son of Jonathan Stark, was born at Mystic, Connecticut, and attended the public schools there. He learned the trade of carpenter and followed it for a number of years. He became a builder and contractor in his native town. He was a successful man of business, and commanded the respect and confidence of his townsmen. He was always interested in politics, and was a prominent Democrat, but never sought or held office. He was a member of the Baptist church, generous in charity and popular among all classes of men. He married Mary A. Williams, daughter of Philo and Amittai (Blake) Williams. Two children reached maturity: 1. James Ellis, married Caroline North Murphy, and had Lloyd Rider and Whitney Williams. 2. Mary Amittai, married Albert Barnard Crafts (see Crafts). She is a member of Rhode Island Independence Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, and of the National Society of Sons and Daughters of Pilgrims, being a direct descendant on maternal side of Myles Standish, John Alden and Priscilla Mullins.

THE AARON STARK FAMILY

✠1. Aaron Stark, the first settler of that name, died in that part of New London that is now Groton in 1685. The place and date of his birth have never been discovered. The name of his wife is also unknown.

A deposition given by him in the boundary dispute between Connecticut and Rhode Island found in the Stonington Town Records, June 11, 1673, gives us a clue to his age:

> The testimony of Aaron Stark aged sixty-five years or thereabouts testifieth and sayeth, that we being soldiers under Capt. John Mason with many more when we went against the Pequot Indians, we being landed in the Narragansett country when many of the Narragansetts came armed and tendered themselves to go with us in that service against the Pequots wherein they were readily accepted and marched with us through part of the Narragansett country until they came within four or five miles of the Pawcatuck River where we made a halt when Ninicraft and Miantonomo with many others did declare unto our commander that we were come into the Pequot country and did then advise them to be very careful of themselves lest they should be destroyed.
> Aaron Stark and Jacob Waterhouse appeared this eleventh day of June 1673, and made oath to what is above written before me
> Justice.

Aaron Stark's first settlement was in Stonington, and frequent entries in the "Thomas Miner Diary," between 1653 and 1664, indicate that they were near neighbors. In May, 1666, Aaron Stark was among those who were to take the freeman's oath in Stonington, and in October, 1669, he was accepted as a freeman in New London. Between these two dates he had purchased the farm of Rev. William Thompson, the Indian missionary, in that part of New London, at present Groton, situated on the summit of Stark's Hill.

September 30, 1669, he sold his land in Stonington to Robert Fleming, who evidently bought it for his stepson, Thomas Rose. Aaron Stark was a volunteer in King Philip's War, and was given land in Voluntown in consideration of his service. In 1673 he claimed bounty for killing two wolves, animals which at that time abounded in Connecticut.

The children of Aaron Stark were —

Aaron served with his father in King Philip's War in 1675, and like him received a grant of land in Voluntown, though it is believed that neither of them ever lived in that town.

Hempstead's Diary, under date of Nov. 20, 1720, mentions Aaron Stark as having been appointed by Justice Avery, together with James Packer and (Moses) Fish, to renew bounds between William Denison and Joshua Hempstead.

Probate records of the District of New London contain the following:

"July 5, 1705 Distribution ordered of Estate of John Stark." From the record we learn that he left a widow Elizabeth and the two daughters named above. The widow had married as early as Sept. 20, 1705, John Wicks. That he served in King Philip's War is shown by a list of volunteers in that war made in 1701 in which appears the name of John Stark "deceased."

From his tombstone in the Wightman Burying Ground we get the date of the death of William Stark, and from the records of the First Congregational Church in Stonington we find that William Stark, with his wife Elizabeth and their two sons William and Christopher, united with that church June 19, 1698, and their daughter Phebe, July 6, 1701. on the record, he no doubt being a younger son born after his father had become affiliated with the Baptist Church in Groton.

This church, the first Baptist Church in Connecticut, was formed in 1705 in the house of William Stark, and he was its principal benefactor. He gave the land for a meeting house and burying ground, also twenty acres of land to his pastor, Rev. Valentine Wightman. The house built on this land, though sadly out of repair, was still standing in 1925. Among the grantees named in the deed to the church in March, 1717/8, are the following by the name of Stark: John Stark, Stephen Stark, Aaron Stark, William Stark, Jr., Abiel Stark and Christopher Stark. The deed is signed Sergeant William Stark. He was the first deacon of the church, and of him it was said that "he was a man of good estate, a godly man, and one who hated persecution."

She m. (3), about Sept. 7, 1724, Nehemiah Smith, b. 1646, d. Aug. 8, 1727. No children.

Miss Caulkins places Josiah Haines in Pequonnoc in 1696, but from the fact that the births of his first four children are recorded in Preston, we infer that for a time he lived in that town. No record of the birth of Deborah has been found, but in her mother's will she was given most of the household belongings, so we suppose she was single and remained at home. The names of Joshua and Comfort do not appear in the will — probably they had died before their mother.

The marriage to Justice Nehemiah Smith was an old-age marriage, he being in his seventy-ninth year. He endowed her by jointure agreement with one hundred pounds current bills of credit of New England, payable within one year of the date of the marriage. Justice Smith was prominent in the affairs of New London before Groton became a town, and upon organization of the latter he was chosen third townsman. He also served as town clerk, justice of the peace and in other positions. The will of Elizabeth Smith follows:

In the name of God Amen. The 22 day of September Anno Domini one thousand seven hundred thirty-nine I Elizabeth Smith of Groton in the colony of Connecticut in New England being sick and weak in body but of perfect mind and memory thanks be given unto God therefor calling unto mind the mortality of my body and knowing it is appointed for all persons once to die do make and ordain this my last will and testament that is to say principally and first of all I give and resign my soul into the hands of God who gave it and my body I recommend to the earth to be buried in a decent Christian burial at the discretion of my Executor nothing doubting but at the general resurrection I shall receive the same again by the mighty power of the Almighty God and as touching such worldly estate wherewith Aaron Stark was formerly of Groton, where he was named as one of the grantees in the deed of William Stark to the First Baptist Church Mar. 24, 1717/8. About 1730 or 1732 John Culver, Jr., conducted a party to New Jersey, where they settled at a place called Schooleys Mountain. It is supposed that Aaron Stark was one of this company, as on May 29, 1744, he was of Roxbury (Flanders), Morris County, N. J.

John Stark was another grantee under the deed of William Stark to the church. He was a deacon in the First Baptist Church of New London (now Waterford) which church was the second Baptist church in the State, founded in 1710. The church edifice, about twenty or twenty-five feet square, with a sharp, peaked roof, occupying a sightly position on the crest of Fort Hill in Waterford, presented a fair target for British ships blockading the coast, and they so riddled the roof as to cause the building to be called the "Old Pepper Box." In a burying ground adjoining the church so late as 1850 was a stone bearing the name of Deacon John Stark. He lived in New London, as is evident from the following entries in Hempstead's Diary:

> Dec. 1, 1747 . . . I went into Madm. Winthrops & wrote the heads of an agreement between Madm. Winthrop & John Stark about taking the mill to halves &c.

> Jan. 14, 1751/2 Old Ms. Wallsworth of Groton Died in N. L. at her son-in-laws John Starks aged I suppose above 84. Her husband was William Wallsworth & she lived with him as tenant on Fishers Island above 50 years ago & then came off & he was the first that ever set up butchering in New London. 53 years since he settled in Groton & died there.

New London Probate Records give, under date of Sept. 8, 1753, will of John Stark; mention wife Martha and son John, who is to pay his two sisters, Susanna and Mehitabel, £20 each. The wife Martha and brother Abiel, executors; witnesses, Thomas Lester, Rachel Fox and Elizabeth Lester.

He was born in Groton and married there Joannah Walworth, daughter of William and Mary (Seton) Walworth. The map of the Fanning land in Groton (see "History of the Fanning Family") shows that Christopher Stark was the owner of sixty acres of land on Fort Hill in 1742, which land in 1758 was owned by Nathaniel Palmer. The Westmoreland records show that on May 7, 1754, Christopher Stark of Groton paid five pounds for one whole share in the Susquehanna Purchase, which on Jan. 25, 1768, he conveyed to his sons Aaron, James and William. This deed was made in Beekman Precinct, Dutchess County, N. Y., and was witnessed by Joanna Stark and Christopher Stark, Jr. The following deed of his interest in the First Baptist Church was made on Dec. 20, 1769:

OBLONG, DUTCHESS COUNTY

To all people to whom these presents shall come, greeting, Know ye that I, Christopher Stark at the place above written do give, grant, convey and confirm unto the said Wightman above written and to the church that are with him to their heirs and assigns forever. All my right in the Baptist meeting house in Groton in Connecticut also my right in the money that was given to the church by William Roe. To have and to hold to use and improve to their own proper benefit and behoof. In confirmation of which I have set my hand the day above written

From the above we infer that Christopher Stark emigrated from Groton to Dutchess County between 1750 and 1768. He again removed to the Wyoming Valley in 1772, where he is said to have died of old age in 1777.

!The Stark families of which I write descend from a still older immigrant family. It appears that the Vernon Township Stark families descend from either Aaron Stark, who settled in Groton, Conn. as early as 1653, or from James Stark of Stafford County Virgina, who came from Scotland and died in Stafford Co., Va. in 1754.
Aaron Stark first settler of that name in Groton, Conn. in 1685...........
Tradition in the Groton Branch makes them of Scotch ancestory. In Scotland, the family name is an old one. Aaron Stark fought in the Pequot War. Aaron's . son, William Stark, was instrumental in organizing the First Baptist Church inConn. in 1705 . The first meeting was held in Williams house. THE STARK FAMILY ASSOCIATION, North Plain Conn. has published a copy of the early history of the Aaron Stark family. This association meets once a year and publishes a yearly bulletin... I will give you a brief history of the early Starks from whom most Starks in Southern Indiana have descended. As early as 1784, six Stark brothers had settled on Formans Creek in Nelson, Co., Ky. They were: (1) Jonathan Stark with wife Margaret;(2) Chistopher Stark with wife Martha Vineyard; (3) James Stark with wife Mary Howell;(4) Daniel Stark with wife Elizabeth Wells; (5) Joseph Stark with wife Hanna; and (6)John Stark. These men were in Washington Co., Pa during the early part of the revolution.

Johathan was a Baptist preacher. Chistopher (my great, great grandfather), James, and Daniel served in the Washington Co. Penn. Militia. These brothers later settled in Shelby and Henry Counties, Ky. We know that old Chistopher Stark and old Daniel were in Virginia as early as 1775, for their names appear on the Virginia Militia Roll of soldiers paid off at Romney. With them served Stephen Vineyard. Some genealogists claim that the Vineyard family came directly to Virginia from England............

A land grant of 5000 acres was received by Bolling Stark in Jefferson County, Ky. in 1783. Bolling Stark was a native of Prince William Co., Va. Jonathon, Joseph, James, Daniel, Chistopher, and John all owned large tracts near each other. It appears to me that these men stem from the Virginia Starks. (C E Winkler's opinion. I, Gladys M. Gerding do not agree. The ones from VA came into another part of KY.)

Jonathon, Christopher, James, Daniel, and Joseph all died in Ky. and from the marriage bonds of their children, it is found distinguish among their respective sets of children fairly well. There were many many intermarriages among the children (cousin marriages) and this has caused some difficulty since no distinction is made between sons and sons-in-law in the estate settlements of the different families.

The youngest brother, John, later moved with the younger generation to Scott County, Indiana and left a will naming 8 children...........(He then lists the Indiana generations) (by Clifford E Winkler, a gr-grandson of my great uncle Robt L Stark (Gladys Gerding). This info he gave to the LDS Library in Salt Lake City, UT).

In a case of bastardy tried in the colony in 1639, the Court ordered as follows: "John Edwards, Aaron Stark, and John Williams were censured for unclean practices as follows:

John Edwards and John Williams to stand upon the pillory from the ringing of the first bell to the end of the lecture--then to be whipped at the cart's tail, and to be whipped in a like manner in Windsor in eight days following.

Aaron Starks, to stand upon the pillory and be whipped as Williams, and to have the letter R burnt upon his cheek, and in regard to the wrong done to Mary Holt, to pay her parents œ10 and in defect of such to the commonwealth; and it is the will of the Court that Mr. Ludlow, and Mr. Phelps see some punishment inflicted upon the girl for concealing it so long.

Branding was a form of punishment not uncommon--burglarly and highway robbery was blazoned with the letter B-A. 2nd. offence by second branding, and a severe whipping.

Sept., 1644, James Hallett for his theft, is adjudged to restore four fold for what shall be proved before Captain Mason, and Mr. Wolcott, and to be branded in the hand the next training day at Windsor.

These New England magistrates after the weeks courting and Ordering, entered the meeting house on the Lord's day, and seated themselves in the magistrates pew, and then sang:

"O God our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come,
Our shelter from the stormy blast,
And our Eternal home"--etc.

What changes in laws and costumes, characters and worship since that time! Now evil speaking, and evil doing and saying are rampant, and infldelity boldly presents itself all over the land.

The Church in Windsor, with which our ancestor, Mr. William Phelps, and his associates were connected, was, it would appear, organized by them and their associates in Plymonth, old England, early in 1630 as previously stated.

The call of these emigrants of their first pastors, the Rev. Mr. Warham and Rev. Mr. Mayerick, their acceptance of same, and their installment, by the Rev. John White, in the New Hospital, Plymouth, England, the Sunday before sailing; settling in Dorchester, Mass., and from there to Windsor, Stanton, Thomas, Wethersfield—in 1638, was appointed by the General Court a public officer to attend all the courts or meetings of magistrates, as an interpreter for the English and Indians, with a salary of £10 per annum for his services. In 1638 he was allowed to trade with the Indians on the river in Wethersfield for beaver—was constable in 1644. The same year the General Court granted him free trade with the Indians upon Long Island for 12 months. He was an active and useful man in transactions with the Indians. He was an original proprietor in Hartford, and was a great friend and supporter of Captain Mason.

Stark, Henry, Hartford, 1640—he was a man of worth, and after a few years died, and gave by will, a clock to the church in Hartford.

Starks, Aaron, Hartford, 1639. (This case is inserted to show the extreme severity of their punishment for bastardy.) He was placed upon the pillory on a lecture-day during the lecture—then tied to the tail of a cart, and whipped in Hartford, (probably through Main-street)—then taken to Windsor, and at the tail of a cart again whipped—then had the letter R. burnt upon his cheek, and fined £10, to be paid to the parents of Mary Holt, and then ordered to marry her. The punishment of the girl for her offence was referred to Mr. Ludlow and William Phelps to decide. She was afterwards whipped. In 1643 he was again whipped for another offence, and ordered to serve Captain Mason during the pleasure of the court.

Stanley, Caleb, son of Timothy, Hartford, 1645—became a man of much consequence in the colony, and received by his worth repeated honors from his town and the colony. Indeed the Stanley family maintained a high reputation in the jurisdiction for many years after the union of the two colonies. In 1709 Caleb Stanley was elected, or rather appointed secretary of the colony, which he held three years, and honorably discharged its duties. The descendants of the family are believed not to be numerous, but respectable. He was grand juror in 1672 and '77.

Staples, Thomas, with Philip Groves, Robert Warner, Joseph Judson, Walter Hoyt, James Avery, J. Morgan and Robert Chapman were deputies or made free in 1661. Staples deputy and juror, '49.

Stanborough, Josiah, died in 1659. His children and estate were taken into the possession of the selectmen.

Stebbins, Francis, died in 1673. His children were, Sarah Rockwell aged 20, Ruth 19, Lydia 17, Hannah 8, Joseph 5, and Elizabeth 3. Stebbins, New London, constable, '61.

Stebbins, Deac. Edward—juror in 1639 and '43—deputy in '39–41 and '48—selectman in '47—collector of funds for the students of Cambridge College, by order of the General Court, in 1645. He died in 1663, and left a grand child Edward Cadwell—his daughter married Mr. Cadwell—another daughter married Gaylord, who had children, Joseph, Benjamin, Joanna and Mary Gaylord—another daughter married Wilson, who had two sons, John and Samuel. He came among the first settlers from Cambridge to Hartford.

Capt. John Mason was the first Major General in Connecticut, with a salary of £40 per annum, paid out of the public treasury quarterly, to train the men ten days each year, 1637.

In 1637 all measures were regulated by law.

The first house built in Windsor, was called the Plymouth house.

The first highway laid out by order of the General Court was located between Hartford and Windsor, and made fit for horse and cart in 1638.

Thomas Stanton was the first public officer appointed to attend courts upon all occasions, General, Particular and meeting of Magistrates, as interpreter between the whites and Indians, (1638) at £10 per annum.

The first formal duty paid, was a duty of one shilling on each beaver skin, half yearly, to the public treasury, (1638.)

Oaths were formed for the Governor, magistrates and constables by law, in 1638; before this, the forms used in England, for constables, &c., were used here.

The first General Court legally organized and holden under the Articles of Confederation between the towns of Hartford, Windsor and Wethersfield, was in April, 1639.

The first person who applied to the General Court for remuneration for injuries done to private property by the Indians, was Edward or Eltwed Pomeroy, of Windsor, for a horse killed by the Indians, for which he was allowed, in 1639, £10.

The first case of bastardy punished in the colony, was that of Aaron Stark and Mary Holt, in 1639, (page 75.)

The first writ of attachment issued by the Court against the goods of a debtor, to hold them in security for a debt, was against Thomas James, for five pounds of tobacco, in 1639. This was the first law of attachment in Connecticut.

The first auditors of public accounts, after the Confederation, were Gov. Welles, William Hill and Andrew Ward, in 1639.

Edward Hopkins was the first attorney of record. He appeared in Court for John Woodcock, as plaintiff, in 1639.

Roger Ludlow, Deputy Governor, was fined 5 shillings for being absent from the General Court in September, 1639.

The first court constituted for Poquonnuck, was in October, 1639, to try cases of less than 40 shillings, with the right of appeal.

The first revision of the Laws of the colony was made by Governor Wyllys, Welles, and William Spencer, in 1639.

STARK FAMILY SECTION, Part I

1. AARON^{1} STARK

Aaron^{1} Stark, the progenitor of this family, was b. ca. 1608 <2>. For a clue to his year of birth, a deposition dated 11 June 1673, appearing in town records of Stonington, Conn., and given by Aaron in the boundary dispute between Connecticut and Rhode Island, read, "The Testimony of Aaron Stark aged sixty-five" <2>. Aaron d. in 1685 <1,2,6> at New London, Conn. in what is now Groton <1,2>. In his will, he mentioned his sons Aaron Stark, John Stark and William Stark; and his sons-in-law Samuel Fish and Josiah Haynes <1>. The name of Aaron's wife is not yet known.

At the time of King Phillip's War, in consideration of his service <2,4> in the Narragansett conflict <5>, Aaron was awarded land in Voluntown, Conn. <2,4>. In the records of Hartford, Connecticut Aaron was first mentioned in the year 1639 <1>. He settled in Stonington, Conn. before 1653 <3,14>.

The Diary of Thomas Minor, a missionary to the Indians <3>, dated between 1653 and 1684, showed in numerous entries that Aaron and Thomas were neighbors <2,3>. In May, 1666 Aaron was part of a group who were to take the freeman's oath in Stonington <1>. In October, 1669, he was accepted as a freeman in New London, Conn. <1>. After 1666 and before 1669 he purchased the homestead of the Reverend William Thompson, an Indian missionary. The homestead, which stood on the summit of Stark's Hill, was located in a part of New London which is now Groton <2>.

Until the Pequot War in 1637, Aaron Stark's life is absolutely unknown to us. No data has thus far been found to give any clue to his birthplace or to his family. So far as is known, he had no relatives in America aside from his wife and children, and no one knows when or where he landed here. Some family traditions regarding a Stark coat of arms seem to connect our branch with a noble family from Killermont, Scotland, with whom the Starks of Virginia and New Hampshire (now known to have been closely related) are also traditionally connected. However, our connection with them cannot by any means be regarded as sure.

From an affidavit recorded at Stonington, CT, a copy of which is given below, we know the approximate date of his birth, and also that he was one of the attacking party which, under Mason, conquered the Indians on Pequot Hill. Since this party was made up, as I have outlined in the introductory history, of the allotment from the three towns of Connecticut Colony, ie. Hartford, Windsor and Wethersfield, together with 20 men from the garrison at Saybrook, it seems clear that at the opening of the war Aaron Stark must have been residing in Connecticut for the Massachusetts contingent did not arrive until after this battle.

The first direct mention of Aaron Stark was in 1639 when he appeared in Hartford court. His residence was not given; but in as much as Windsor was spoken of in connection with him, it seems probable that he was a resident of that town, especially since in 1643 he was mentioned in the Windsor records, being ordered at that time to give his services to Major Mason "during the pleasure of the Court." No record has been found as to when this service ended. Indeed, for the next ten years he again disappears until in 1653 he was found to be residing at Mystic, CT, near his old battlefield. From this time on his life can be quite clearly followed, but during this lost 10 years he evidently married and found a new home.

Aaron Stark's affidavit - recorded at Stonington, CT.

It has not been established just where he lived in Mystic, but there seems to me no doubt that he was in charge of Major Mason's farm at the mouth of the Mystic River. About 1649 Mason left Windor and settled at Saybrook, going from there with the others to settle Norwich in 1660 where he remained a resident until his death. In 1652 he received for his services in the Pequot War a large grant of land along Long Island Sound, East from the Mystic River including Mason's Island at the mouth of the river. The next grant, joining Mason's on the East, was to Cary Latham who sold it to Thomas Miner. Miner settled there the latter part of 1653. Mason, while he kept possession of his grant and frequently visited it, never actually lived there. He undoubtedly placed someone in charge of it for him. Miner's diary began in November of 1653, and in December he records that "mason's man" came for a yoke of oxen. In January, 1654, he delivered two oxen to Aaron Stark for the use of Major Mason, and from that time on he frequently mentioned Stark as his neighbor. In 1661, he sent for Stark to come to renew the bounds between them, but Stark refused to do so until the Major came. There seems to me no doubt but what Aaron Stark was at that time the "Mason's man" referred to being in charge of the Major's farm and that he was residing there when most of his children were born.

Looking East from Pequot Hill across the Mystic River.

In March, 1664, Aaron Stark first became an owner of land receiving a grant of 150 acres in the town of Stonington for his services in the Pequot War. Apparently he never lived on this land which he sold in 1670. On November 5, 1664, however, he bought from Reverend William Thompson several parcels of land about two miles West from the head of the Mystic, and this land became his homestead. For some reason he did not settle there until about 1667.

In 1666 the controversy between Connecticut and Massachusetts for the possession of the disputed territory was settled in Connecticut's favor. The town was named Stonington and on May 10 of that year all inhabitants were required to take the freeman's oath. My Aaron was among them; but on December 2, 1667 his name was on the tax list for the town of New London. He must have left Stonington for his New London farm sometime between these two dates. On this homestead he evidently spent the rest of his life. We find frequent mention of him up to February, 1679/80, when he was for the second time elected surveyor of highways. This is the latest date that he was known to have been living. He is not mentioned again until June 2, 1685, when his will was presented for probate at the county court held in Norwich. His three sons appeared to ask that Samuel Mason might divide the land in accordance with the will. The will itself cannot be found, and apparently no copy of it was recorded. From later records it appears that he left an estate of over 600 acres.

Probate of Aaron Stark's Estate - recorded at Norwich, CT.

My knowledge of his wife and children is very incomplete. 1637 Hartford court records mention an approaching marriage with a Mary Holt, but it seems very doubtful this marriage ever took place. Even if it did, it is most improbable that she was the mother of his children, the first of whom is supposed to have been born more than fifteen years later. He probably married about 1653 just before or just after settling at Mystic. There is one possible clue to his wife's name in the record at Stonington of the sale of his land grant in 1670, when a "Sarah Stark" was one of his witnesses. Since there were at that time no other Starks anywhere near Stonington and very few in America at all, it may reasonably be assumed that this Sarah was either the wife or the daughter of Aaron. I am presuming her to be his wife because there is no record that he had children of age at that time. It also was not uncommon for a wife to witness her husband's deeds of sale. Such a signature indicated her consent, not required as now, but still desirable. Even if we accept this Sarah as his wife, there is no clue whatever as to court held in Norwich. His three sons appeared to ask that Samuel Mason might divide the land in accordance with the will. The will itself cannot be found, and apparently no copy of it was recorded. From later records it appears that he left an estate of over 600 acres.

My knowledge of his wife and children is very incomplete. 1617 Hartford court records mention an approaching marriage with a Mary Holt, but it seems very doubtful this marriage ever took place. Even if it did, it is most improbable that she was the mother of his children, the first of whom is supposed to have been born more than fifteen years later. He probably married about 1653 just before or just after settling at Mystic. There is one possible clue to his wife's name in the record at Stonington of the sale of his land grant in 1670, when a "Sarah Stark" was one of his witnesses. Since there were at that time no other Starks anywhere near Stonington and very few in America at all, it may reasonably be assumed that this Sarah was either the wife or the daughter of Aaron. I am presuming her to be his wife because there is no record that he had children of age at that time. It also was not uncommon for a wife to witness her husband's deeds of sale. Such a signature indicated her consent, not required as now, but still desirable. Even if we accept this Sarah as his wife, there is no clue whatever as to her family. A careful search of all the records of that vicinity, both for Aaron and for his children, failed to find anything suggestive of a relationship with any other family other than John Fish, John Lamb and Edward Culver who seem to have been family friends.

As to Aaron's children, there is positive proof that one was lost in childhood, and that three sons, Aaron, John, and William grew to manhood, married and left children, though much of the needed data regarding them is still lacking. That these three were the only sons reaching maturity, and that there was also a daughter Elizabeth, is practically certain. One other daughter, Margaret, is commonly assigned to him, but my research along this line has led me to reject her absolutely, but to accept as daughters "Sarah" and "Anna". This matter will be taken up in detail in the history of the children, the next generation, but in passing it is well to mention that if this Sarah is accepted as a daughter, she could not have been the witness of 1670, as she was then only ten years old.

Had Aaron Stark been a settler of Virginia, even with so little data regarding him, there would have been nothing unusual about him. But he certainly did not seem to belong in Connecticut. He was absolutely fearless, apparently, not only as a soldier in the wars, but as a pioneer in more than one wilderness, and was one of the first to be chosen for any dangerous mission. Until old age quelled his spirit somewhat, he seemed to be ever ready to risk his life for his Puritan neighbors only to find difficulty in living quietly under their laws. He seemed always to hold himself aloof from them and his name very seldom appears on the records in any way, even as a witness. In his later years he did begin to hold petty offices occasionally, and his neighbor, Thomas Miner, recorded in his diary that the minister twice "did teach at Aarons."

Unlike most of the Connecticut settlers, he never seemed closely associated with anyone, and did not settle in any of the places as one of a group. There is nothing to indicate that either he or his wife were ever connected in any way, even by owning the Covenant, with any church. It is certain that at least two of his children never received infant baptism, a most serious omission in the days when infant damnation was universally taught. To be sure, keeping any church connection presented difficulties with the nearest church a dozen miles away through a wilderness and across a large river besides. Yet most of the other children of that neighborhood were baptized, and Aaron Stark was as far removed as possible from a man who would give up anything he really desired, merely because it was attended with difficulties.

This seems the more certain from another fact regarding him. Like most of the settlers, he was unable to write his name, but signed by a mark, usually the letter "A". His sons, however, wrote their names, and even his daughter Elizabeth wrote hers at a time when many men and almost all women were unable to do so. So Aaron Stark and his wife, pioneers in a wilderness, for some reason failed to obtain baptism for their children; they did obtain at least the rudiments of an education for them, in both respects going contrary to the customs of their neighbors. If not "of" the Puritans, why did he settle among them? Perhaps he sailed for Virginia, but like some others was landed in New England instead. Perhaps he was a Scottish prisoner of war, brought to Connecticut as a bondsman. But whoever he was or whatever his purpose in settling in Connecticut, it seems positive to me that he was not a Puritan.

NOTE: Many of the dates on Helen's ancestor chart are given as two years(ie. 1659/60). This is a result of the many changes occurring to the calendar over several centuries. Refer to Brian Michaels article in the February 1995 issue of FLORIDA LIVING for more information on these changes and how they affect birth and marriage dates between January 1 and March 24 prior to the year 1752.

I ought to ment. that some slight uncert. is felt, whether this man were s. of Abraham, since Weymouth rec. show, that one JOHN there m. 7 June 1658, Sarah Waters, and he may have been s. of Abraham, and this h. of Alice have been br. of Abraham. However, as he nam. his eldest, or sec. s. Abraham (wh. serv. as a soldier on Conn. riv. Mar. 1676), my assumpt. may be good. JOHN, Malden, a tailor, had John, b. 16 Dec. 1667; and w. in 1670, Hannah, wh. d. 8 Apr. 1674; and he m. 12 Aug. foll. Eliz. Ramsdell. JOHN, Rehoboth, had Priscilla, b. 22 June 1680; and Ann, 15 Mar. 1682. Prob. he rem. from Weymouth aft. 1676, for none of this name is earlier found at R. JOHN, Weymouth, s. prob. eldest ch. of John of the same, yet may have been s. of Joseph, freem. 1681, by w. Hannah had John, b. 16 Dec. 1679, wh. prob. d. young; Abraham, 14 Feb. 1685; Hannah, 26 Apr. 1687; John, again, 20 Jan. 1690; Mary, 5 May 1691; and Benjamin, 25 July 1693. JOHN, Weymouth, perhaps cous. ger. of John the sec. of the same, and s. of John or Joseph, but of wh. I am ign. by w. Judith had Eliz. b. 26 Sept. 1687; Joseph, 11 Jan. 1692; Judith, 4 May 1693; and Abigail, 17 July 1695; perhaps others. Whatever doubt of identi. as to one or ano. John of Weymouth is felt, it is indisput. that Rev. John, gr. gr.s. of Abraham, H. C. 1729, had four s. wh. were min. viz.: Oakes, H. C. 1758, f. of Hon. Lemuel, H. C. 1800, thirty yrs. Ch. Just. of Mass.; Bezaleel, H. C. 1762; William, H. Yet it is kn. that he had sec. w. Persis, wid. of Benajah Pratt, and d. of deac. John Dunham. He may have liv. at Duxbury, or Eastham, pt. of his days. Hannah m. 5 Aug. 1678, Thomas Paine, jr. of Eastham; Phebe m. John Morton; Mary m. 1687, Eleazer Ring; and Lydia m. 4 Apr. 1689, Nicholas Snow. JONATHAN, s. of the preced. by first w. Mehitable Pratt had Jonathan, Phebe, Persis, Mehitable, James, Hannah, Eliz. Priscilla, Abigail, and Samuel, it is said, and this w. d. 1712. By sec. w. Mary Darling, m. 16 Nov. 1715, he had Rebecca, b. 1718; and tho. his resid. or date of d. are unkn. his wid. we are told, d. 9 Mar. 1754, aged 80. JOSEPH, Dedham 1636, s. of Abraham, brot. from Eng. by his f. freem. 22 May 1639, rem. soon aft. d. of his f. to Weymouth, had Joseph, b. 14 July 1643; John; and others, not nam. of wh. Fearnot was one; d. 1653 at W. bef. rec. of that town are visib. His will is abstr. in Geneal. Reg. V. 303. JOSEPH, Charlestown, m. 16 Dec. 1664, Sarah Patten, perhaps d. of William; but nothing more is kn. of him, and it may be that he rem. JOSEPH, Weymouth, prob. s. of John first of the same, freem. 1691, by w. Judith had Judith, b. 4 May 1693; Abigail, 17 July 1695; and, perhaps, others aft. our transcr. stops. NICHOLAS, Weymouth, prob. br. of the preced. by w. Deborah had Alice, b. 13 Apr. 1687; Nicholas, 7 May 1689; Joshua, 18 Mar. 1692; John, 31 Mar. 1696; Zechary, 7 May 1699; and, perhaps, more. * ROGER, Cambridge 1636, freem. 14 Mar. 1639, by w. Ann had Esther, b. June 1638; Mary, wh. d. 26 Jan. or Feb. 1640; Mary, again, 29 Sept. 1645; rem. to Hampton, there had sec. w. Susanna, wid. of William Tilton of Lynn, was rep. 1651 and 2, and d. 29 May 1662, leav. s. Joseph, Benjamin, and four ds. prob. all by first w. THOMAS, Hingham 1637, rem. bef. 1643, to Barnstable, tho. he did not sell his est. at H. bef. 1665, may have had no w. or ch. at least his will, of 25 June 1672, refers to none. Some have writ. the name Shave. Thomas, Charlestown, perhaps had w. Mary, adm. of the ch. July 1645; had John, b. 4 Mar. 1648, whose bapt. would fail to be found in the ch. rec. hav. large gap aft. 1642; rem. 1656 to New London, and in 1658 was of Stonington, made freem. 1666, in the town list of 1669 call. sen. wh. permits us to suppose he had s. of the name. The governm. of Conn. in 1675 gr. to his w. a hundr. acres, so that we may presume he was late. d. Thomas, Concord 1663. William, Salem 1657, then was a serv. of Thomas Palmer, m. 23 Nov. 1668, Eliz. d. of George Fraile of Lynn, had Samuel, b. 19 Feb. 1670, d. soon; William, 25 Sept. 1672; Eliz. perhaps Jan. 1677; Israel, July 1680; and in his will of 1 Jan. 1722, pro. 30 Dec. 1726, he names ano. w. Mary, and other ch. beside those three, viz. Ebenezer, Daniel, Benjamin, and Margaret. Eliz. had m. a Stockwell. Of this name, the gr. in 1834 were mark. by Farmer as fourteen at Harv. one at Yale, and ten at the other N. E. coll. The first eight at Harv. were min.

Shawson, George, Duxbury 1638, says Winsor, rem. bef. 1640, to Sandwich.

Sheaffe, Edmund, Boston, came from Cranbrook, Co. Kent, but when is unkn. nor is any thing told of him, but that he m. Eliz. d. of Sampson Cotton of London, had Rebecca, Eliz. and Sampson, but no dates of b. are giv. exc. 1650 for the last nam. ch. aft. d. of his f. ‖ Jacob, Boston, came with his mo. and Rev. Henry Whitfield, wh. m. one of his sis.; went first to Guilford, where he was one of the seven pillars for constitut. the ch. wh. to us appears strange, as he was so young, and unm. yet his relat. with the pastor will expla. if not justify, this distinct. He was b. at Cranbrook, in Kent, on the ch. reg. there call. s. of Edmund, b. 4 Aug. 1616, and prob. cous. ger. of the preced. In 1643 he rem. to Boston, and was engag. soon to m. the only ch. of Henry Webb; and in the rec. of our Gen. Ct. II. 46, we read this unusu. favor: "Jacob S. and Margaret Webbe are permit. to join in m. tho. but twice publish." He had Eliz. b. 1 Oct. 1644; Sarah, 14 Sept. 1652; Ebenezer, 4 Feb. 1654; a ch. whose name is not told, 25 July 1655; Mehitable, 28 May 1658; and Jacob, posthum. 23 July 1659. In 1648 he was chos. to the ar. co. and the inscript. on his tomb in the old gr.yd. tells, that he d. 22 Mar. 1659, aged 42, only ch. then liv. being Eliz. and Mehitable. His wid. m. Rev. Thomas Thacher of Boston, long outliv. him, and d. 23 Feb. 1694, in 68th yr.; Eliz. m. 7 Sept. 1660, then under 16 yrs. Mr. Robert Gibbs, and 20 Mar. 1675, m. Jonathan Curwen, and d. 29 Aug. 1718; and Mehitable m. Sampson Sheaffe. He seems to have the largest est. of any that hitherto had d. at B. His mo. Joanna d. at Guilford, July 1659. ‡ Sampson, Boston 1672, merch. wh. in indent. of Apr. 1673 calls hims. of London, m. Mehitable, d. of Jacob Sheaffe, had Jacob, b. 1677; and Sampson, 1681, H. From him most of the name in N. H. descend. William, Charlestown, m. 15 Aug. 1672, Ruth Wood, perhaps d. of Josiah, had Mary, b. 31 May 1673, bapt. 14 Dec. 1684; Edward; William; and Mary, all bapt. 13 Jan. 1689; but why some were not earlier, I am ign. Of the s. Edward, I think, had Edward; and the gr.st. shows d. of his w. Mary, 1 Nov. 1748, aged 70; and William d. 17 May 1718, and his s. William d. in Oct. foll. Among the early memb. of the ch. at Roxbury was a wid. S. and Ellis, in Hist. gives the name as of a man, with supply of goats and kids, prob. bef. 1640, yet no light has been shed on either. She may have been mo. of Jacob the first. Of this name, in 1839, ten had been gr. at Harv. and two at Yale.

The Dominick Wheeler Line

DOMINICK WHEELER, born probably in Wiltshire, England, about 1565, died, probably in St. Edmund's parish, Salisbury, between 12 Dec. 1615 and 16 Feb. 1615–16. He married in St. Edmund's, 3 June 1588, Mercy Jelly who died after December 1615.

Dominick Wheeler was a shearman or one whose occupation was to shear cloth. He apparently belonged to St. Edmund's church in Salisbury, that church so notedly puritanical in its tendencies and over which Peter Thacher was minister for many years. He died testate.

It is obvious that since Dominick Wheeler calls John Wheeler his eldest son he had other sons, possibly those indicated here.*

Children:

i. JOHN, b. about 1589, Salisbury; m. Agnes Yeomans.
ii. Mark (?), m. (lic.) 30 Sept. 1613, Dyonis Dawson, in St. Edmund's.

JOHN ^{1} WHEELER, son of Dominick and Mercy (Jelly) Wheeler, born, probably in St. Edmund's parish, Salisbury, England, about 1589, died, probably in Newbury, Mass., between 28 Mar. 1668 and 11 Oct. 1670. He married in St. Edmund's, Salisbury, 1 Dec.

* Only the marriages of St. Edmund's are printed. The baptisms might show more of the connections of this Wheeler family, undoubtedly very early in Salisbury.

1611, Agnes Yeomans, born probably about 1591–92, died in Newbury, 15 Aug. 1662.

John Wheeler came in the Mary & John, 24 Mar. 1633–34.* He was a barber and settled first in Hampton, N. H., then in Salisbury, later removing to Newbury, where he was living before 1650. For deeds see Old Norfolk Co., Deeds, 1: 51; 3: 42, Ipswich Deeds, 4: 325.

Dominick[A] Wheeler, father of our ancestor John[1], was born and died in England. He married at St. Edmund's parish, Salisbury, Wiltshire 3 June 1588 Mercy Jelly. Dominick made a will dated at St. Edmund's 12 December 1615 and probated 16 February 1615/6, in which he named his wife Mercy, eldest son John; Annes, wife of John and their sons Edward and John. His wife died after the date of probate.[1]

John[1] Wheeler (Dominick[A]) was born probably at St. Edmund's parish Salisbury, Wiltshire, England ca. 1589 and married there 1 December 1611 Agnes Yeomans, born ca. 1592 and died in Newbury, Massachusetts 15 August 1662.[2] John is believed to have come to New England on the Mary and John. He was a barber and settled first in Hampton, New Hampshire, later moving to Salisbury, Massachusetts, and then Newbury, He died between 28 March 1668 and 11 October 1670, dates his will was made and probated. His will named several sons who remained in England.[3] ..

PLYMPTON

This should be in the Smith book

dated Nov. 25, 1672, and probated April 1, 1674. In this will he directed that his body be buried "at the east end of the church;" and he gives to his grandson, Thomas Brown, the eldest son of his daughter Mary, wife of William Brown, all the houses and lands in the parishes of Hedcorn and Frittenden, County of Kent, Eng.; and he mentions his great-grandchildren, Mary, Patience and Thankful, daughters of the said Thomas Brown, also other children of this daughter Mary, of whom there were seven.

Thomas Plympton (or Plimpton) was at Sudbury by 1643. He may have come to America in the ship "Jonathan," which sailed from London, for Boston, April 12, 1639, bringing among its passengers Elizabeth Plympton and Peter Noyes. Sometime before 1649 he was in the employ of Mr. Noyes, as is shown by the following record: "Peter Noyes, Sr., did give unto Thomas Plympton, once his servant, the sum of six acres of meadow, of his third addition of meadow lying on the meadow called Gulf Meadow, with the commonage unto the same belonging. Sept. 26, 1649." (Town Records, p. 89.) He married Abigail, daughter of Peter Noyes, and had seven children, Abigail, Jane, Mary, Elizabeth, Thomas, Dorothy and Peter. Thomas Plympton and Elizabeth, who married John Rutter, were probably brother and sister, as both were legatees of Agnes Bent, a grandmother of Elizabeth. He was killed by the Indians, April 20, 1676, the day before the Wadsworth fight, while he was engaged, tradition says, in endeavoring to bring a Mr. Boone and son to a garrison house. The Plympton family has been numerous, and members of it have been prominent in the annals of Sudbury. Thomas Plympton was a tower of strength to the town in the Revolutionary War, being a member of the Provincial Congress, and the one to whom the news of the approach of the British to Concord was first brought. He was at Concord the 19th of April, and had a bullet put through his clothing. (See Revolutionary period.) The old Plympton house, a large unpainted structure, was about a mile from Sudbury centre, and was demolished a few years since.

Hugh Drury was in Sudbury as early as 1641, and was by trade a carpenter. He married Lydia, daughter of Edmund it, and so they did many times together. Then they bid him with a gun, go out of the ring, which he did, but when he was out they called him in again, but he seemed to make a stand. Then they called the more earnestly till he turned again. Then they all sang. Then they gave him two guns, in each hand one, and so he on the deer skin began again, and at the end of every sentence in his speaking they all assented, and humming or muttering with their mouths, and striking upon the ground with their hands. Then they bid him with the two guns go out of the ring again, which he did a little way. Then they called him again, but he made a stand. So they called him with greater earnestness. But he stood reeling and wavering as if he knew not whether he should stand or fall, or which way to go. Then they called him with exceeding great vehemence, all of them, one and another. After a little while he turned in, staggering as he went, with his arms stretched out, in each hand a gun. As soon as he came in they all sang, and rejoiced exceeding awhile, and then he upon the deer skin made another speech, unto which they all assented in a rejoicing manner, and so they ended their business and forthwith went to Sudbury fight.

The foregoing statements plainly show that a large force was being led to Sudbury. The great chieftain doubtless felt sure of his prey. Mrs. Rowlandson says, "To my thinking they went without any scruple but that they should prosper and gain the victory." Philip was not aware of the strong reinforcements which were to be sent to the town's relief. The tramp of Wadsworth and his company had not as yet reached his ears. For aught he knew, the forest resounded with only the tramp of his own stalwart men.

But, while the Indians were preparing for the attack, the English were by no means idle. Things were fast being put in readiness to meet the worst. The blow received was to be returned, and the spoils of conquest were to be dearly obtained. Notwithstanding the customary cunning of the Indians, and their usual sly way, the attack in this instance was not an entire surprise. Their coming was announced by several acts of hostility on the day previous to the general assault. According to tradition, they began their marauding by burning several houses and killing several inhabitants. Among the slain were a Mr. Boone and son, and Mr. Thomas Plympton, who was endeavoring to conduct them, with some of their goods, to a place of safety. This skirmishing on the outskirts put the people on their guard, and came out on the eastern slope of the hill, near the Albert Haynes place, where Mr. Plympton once kept a grocery store. A little east of this, and south of the Elbridge Bent place, there are traces of a road, that for a little distance has a stone-wall on either side, and which comes out a little south of the western end of the northern causeway, or at a point a little south of where the Water-row Road intersects the road going from Sudbury Centre to Wayland. Some have placed that part of this road which is east of the Graves Road a little further south, — that is, along the south side of the hill, rather than upon it, — but we believe the nature of the meadow at the east, and the absence of all trace of the road in the valley, together with traces of an ancient road through the woods on the hill and also near the Elbridge Bent place, are evidences that it took the course first described. Probably mistakes have been made relative to the course of this road west of Sudbury Centre, from the fact that formerly there were two Lancaster roads. (See map of 1794.)

The two-mile grant was hardly disposed of, and the Lancaster Road laid out, before there was a plan for the formation of a new plantation. The result was the settlement of the town of Marlboro. (See Chapter IX.) But the loss of population did not materially affect the prosperity of the town or delay the progress on the west side.

THE HOP-BROOK MILL.

In 1659 a mill was put up, where the present Parmenter Mill stands in South Sudbury. This mill was erected by Thomas and Peter Noyes. In recognition of the serviceableness of their work to the community, the town made them a land grant, and favored them with such privileges as are set forth in the following record: —

> Jan. 7th 1659. Granted unto Mr Thomas Noyes and to Mr Peter Noyes for and in consideration of building a mill at Hop brook laying and being on the west side of Sudbury great river below the cart way that leads to Ridge meadow viz: fifty acres of upland and fifteen acres of meadow without commonadge to the said meadow four acres of the said fifteen acres of meadow lying and being within the demised tracts of uplands; Also granted to the above named parties timber of any of Sud> bury's common land, to build and maintain the said mill. Also the said Thomas and Peter Noyes do covenant with the town for the foregoing consideration, to build a sufficient mill to grind the town of Sudbury's corn; the mill to be built below the cart way that now is leading to Ridge meadow, the said Grantees, their heirs and successors are to have nothing to do with the stream above four rods above the aforementioned cartway of said mill to be ready to grind the corn by the first of December next ensueing, and if the said grantees, their heirs or assigns shall damage the highway over the brook, by building the said mill, they are to make the way as good as now it is, from time to time, that is to say, the above specified way, over the Mill brook of said Thomas Noyes and Peter are also to leave a highway six rods wide joining to the brook from the east way that now is to the Widow Loker's meadow. (Town Records, Vol. I.)

While the new mill was being built, a way was being made to it from the causeway, as we are informed by the following record, dated Feb. 7, 1659: —

> We the Selectmen of Sudbury, finding sundry inconveniences, by reason of bad and ill highways not being passable to meadow lands and other towns, and finding the law doth commit the stating of the highways to the prudence of the selectmen of towns, we therefore being met the day and year above written, on purpose to view the highways in the west side of Sudbury river, and having taken pains to view them, do we say, conclude and jointly agree that the highway from the Gravel pits shall go through the land newly purchased of Lieut. Goodenow to that end, and from thence down the brow of the hill the now passed highway, unto the place where the new mill is building, that is to say, the way that is now in occupation, we mean the way that goeth to the south and Mr Beisbeich his house, we conclude and jointly agree, that the way to the meadows, as namely, the meadow of John Grout, Widow Goodenow, John Maynard, Lieut. Goodenow, shall go as now it doth, that is to say, in the hollow to the said meadows, the highway to be six rods wide all along by the side of the said meadows.

The new road here mentioned is, probably, mainly the same as that leading from the old causeway, or Gravel Pit, to South Sudbury to-day. Until within about a century it passed round the southern brow of Green Hill. This road was probably part of a path or trail that had been travelled before. This is indicated both by the circumstances and the language of the record. It is not improbable, that, before the formal recognition or laying out of this road, a part of it was a way from the Gravel Pit, or end of the long cause-

Probably these galleries were never put in, as they soon afterwards commenced building a new meeting-house. Before, however, it was decided to build anew, various plans were suggested relative to the enlargment and improvement of the old one. In 1650 it was ordered that the deacons should "mend the meeting house and make it comfortable." One plan was to enlarge it by the addition of "13 foote at the end of it," and that the committee should "finish the back side which enlargement is for a watchouse." A plan a little later was that the meeting-house "be enlarged by building 10 foote on the foreside of it all the length of the meeting house to be built with two gable ends in the front; and Mr. Brown the Pastor doth promise to give twenty shillings toward the work; the former order for enlarging the meeting house at the north west end is hereby repealed. It is also ordered that the back side of the meeting house be made hansom."

On Dec. 10, 1651, the town succeeded in passing a vote for the erection of a new meeting-house, the vote standing twenty-five for and fourteen against it. But this vote was repealed at a meeting January 23 of the same year (Old Style), together with all orders for the repairing or alteration of the old one. The following year it was "agreed that the meeting house shall be made use of for a watch house until some further course be taken by the town." At length it was again decided to build a new meeting-house; and in 1652 a contract was made for the work.

This contract is on the Town Records, but has become considerably worn and defaced, so that parts are almost or quite unintelligible. There is, however, a copy in the "Stearns Collection," which, with some slight immaterial alterations, is as follows: —

> The town agreed with Thomas Plympton Peter King & Hugh Griffin to build a new meeting house which was to be forty feet long & twenty feet wide measuring from outside to outside, the studds were to be 6 inches by 4 to stand for a four foot clapboard. There were to be 4 transom windows five feet wide & 6 feet high, and in each gable end a clearstory window, each window was to be 4 feet wide and 3 feet high. There were to be sufficient dorments across the house for galleries if there should afterward be a desire for galleries the beams to be 12 inches by 14 and the ground sills were to be of white oak 8 inches square. The posts were to be a foot square, and the 2 middle beams to be smoothed on three sides and the lower corners to be run with a bowkell. They the said Plympton King & Griffin are to find timber to fell, hew, saw, cart, frame, carry to place & they are to level the ground and to find them sufficient help to raise the house, they are to inclose the house with clap boards and to lyne the inside with cedar boards or otherwise with good spruce boards, & to be smoothed & over lapped and to be lyned up the windows, & they are to hang the doors so as to bolt. One of the doors on the inside is to be sett with a lock. They are to lay the sleepers of the doors with white oak or good swamp pine, & to floor the house with plank. They are to finish all the works but the seats, for which the town do covenant to give them * * * * 5 pound 20 to be paid in march next in Indyan [corn] or cattle, 30 more to be paid in Sep' next to be paid in wheat, butter, or money & the rest to be paid as soon as the work is done in Indyan corn or cattle the corn to [be] merchantable at the price current.

The new building was to be erected on the site of the old one. The town ordered "that the carpenters should provide 12 men to help them raise the meeting house," for which they were to be allowed half a crown a day. The roof was to be covered with thatch, and the workmen were to have "the meadow afterwards the minister's to get their thatch upon." In 1654 a committee was appointed "to agree with somebody to fill the walls of the meeting house with tempered clay provided they do not exceed the sum of 5 pounds 10 shillings." The parties who were to build the house were employed "to build seats after the same fashion as in the old meeting house," and they were to have for every seat one shilling eight pence. The seats were to be made of white oak, "both posts and rails and benches." In 1655 the pastor and Mr. Noyes were empowered "to appoint a man to remove the pulpit and the deacons' seat out of the old meeting house into the new meeting house." Hugh Griffin was appointed for the work, and was 'to have 18 shillings for the work if the work is done this week or next according to the pastor's approbation."

The records also state that "upon the pastor's request the town hath granted that he shall have liberty for to set up tered about it memories of things the sweetest and the saddest that had entered into their checkered experience. Here their children had been offered in baptism; here had been the bridal and the burial, the weekly greetings and partings, the exchange of intelligence of heart and home. It had been the place for prayer and the preached word; a place of watch and ward, and a place of resort in times of danger. But notwithstanding their fondness for the sacred spot, they were too practical a people to allow sentiment to interfere with their true progress, and what they believed to be their spiritual good. With their slow means of transit, and the rough roads of that period when at their best, it was a long and weary way they had to travel every Sabbath day; but when the roads became blocked with the drifting snow, or the river was swollen with floods, then it was sometimes a perilous undertaking to reach the east side meeting-house and return. In that primitive period the people of Sudbury did not desire even a good excuse to keep them from public worship; they were Puritanic in both precept and practice. They would allow no small obstacle to cheat their soul of its rights; but if there were hinderances in the way to their spiritual helps, they required their immediate removal.

Hence, a movement was inaugurated to divide the town, and make of it two precincts, in each of which there should be a church. A primary act for the accomplishment of this purpose was to obtain the consent of the General Court. To do this a petition was presented, which, as it tells its own story, and sets forth the entire case, we will present: —

Petition of the West Side people of Sudbury to Governor Dudley and the General Assembly.

The petition of us who are the subscribers living on ye west side of Sudbury great River Humbly showeth that wereas ye All wise and over Ruling providence of ye great God, Lord of Heaven and Earth who is God blessed forever moore, hath cast our lott to fall on that side of the River by Reason of the flud of watare, which for a very great part of the yeare doth very much incomode us and often by extremity of water and terrible and violent winds, and a great part of the winter by ice, as it is at this present, so that wee are shut up and cannot come forth, and many times when wee doe atempt to git over our flud, we are forced for to seek our spiritual good with the peril of our Lives.

Beside the extreme Travill that many of us are Exposed unto sum 3 : 4 : 5 : 6 miles much more than a Sabbath days Jurney, by Reason of these and many more objections, to many here to enumerate, whereby many of our children and little ones, ancient and weak persons, can very Rarly attend the public worship. The considered premises we truly pray your Excellency and ye Honorable Council and House of Representatives to consider and compassionate us in our Extreme suffering condition, and if we may obtain so much favor in your Eyes as to grant us [our presents] as to appoint us a Commity to see and consider our circumstances and make report thereof to this honorable Court. And your pore petitioners shall ever pray.

It was ordered that the town of Sudbury be served with a copy of the petition, and notified to attend the next session of the Court, and present objections if they had any. At a town-meeting in Sudbury, Oct. 4, 1707, a committee was chosen to attend the General Court, and give answer to the above petition. The committee was composed as follows: "Mr Joseph Noyes, Lieut. Hopll Brown, Ens. Samll King, Mr. James Barnard, Mr. Noah Clapp, Mr. Thomas Plymp-ton." This committee duly appeared to present a protest to the west side petition. The following are their words of remonstrance: —

The committee chosen humbly showeth,

That whereas a petition hath been presented to this Hon. Court in their late session by a Small number of persons Dwelling on the westerly side of the river in Sudbury, (though Privately carried on)

Praying that these may be a precinct by themselves &c. we do Humbly offer to your Judicious consideration

That the number thus Petitioning is but Small and that others Inhabiting on the westerly side of said River a number near Equal to them, Do oppose the same Looking on such a motion by their neighbors att this Time Especially to be Unseasonable and unreasonable, considering 1.) the Great Expense that we have of Late been att: Occasioned by the deposition of our Late, and the Settling of our Present Minister. (2.) The vast Expenses attending the same, calls and may call for, Obliges us to Request that the Division Petitioned for, may be suspended, we deem ourselves incapable of affording, 1st Two Orthodox minister's Gospel maintainance, 2nd we are Ready to afford to our neighbors what help we can in making the Causway, (so much complained of) passible in ordinary floods, by allotting to every man his quota or proposition to raise, which would be much for the Benefit of Travellers, as well as ourselves.

Finally there are also some of those who now petition for division: that did complain, and declare that the Salary granted to our present minister was so Great that the town was not able to perform it, and if they Plead their remoteness from the public worship of God: we humbly offer that if the meeting house be placed in the Centre of the Inhabitants on the westerly side of the river (where we may expect it will be), many of their dwellings will be as Remote from the meeting house as they are now, We might bring many more objections which might be of weight, but shall add no more, but leave these to the Judicious consideration of this Honourable Courte, and follow these our Representatives with our petitions to the High Court of Heaven, that this Honouable Court may be so directed in this and in every affair before them, that Gods Glory and the Prosperity of Religion may be promoted, and we, your most humble and obedient servants, may have ever cause to pray &c.

After hearing both petition and remonstrance, the Court ordered that a committee should be sent, and report what the case required. This committee was made up of Capt. Samuel Checkley, [Capt.] Thomas Oliver, and Capt. Jonas Bond. These parties "were to join with such as the hon-

Nov. 14, 1774, the town voted "their approbation of the several measures of the Provincial Congress so far as has been communicated to them." It also voted, at the same meeting, "to choose a committee to observe the conduct of all persons touching the association agreement entered into by the Continental Congress, whose business it shall be to see the articles contained therein are strictly adhered to by the inhabitants of this town."

In 1774, the town chose Thomas Plympton, Capt. Richard Heard, and James Mossman to represent it at the proposed Provincial Congress. The records just quoted are a few from many that show the fidelity of Sudbury to the great cause of freedom in those tumultuous times. It was decided as to the true principle of action, and equally prompt and consistent in carrying it out. Enough has been said to show the town's place in that preparatory period that led to the clash of arms; but we will quote a paper written by a Revolutionary soldier of Sudbury, which shows the spirit of the age and gives a synopsis of events and the way in which they were viewed by one living in town at the time of their occurrence; and although, in presenting this paper, we may anticipate some of the events we are about to narrate, yet we think it proper to do this, rather than make a break in a paper so valuable both to local and general history.

"The Causes that led the Colonies to Take up armes Against the Mother Country is proper to be Shown To Prove the Necessity the Colonies were under to resist the oppressive Measures which the Colonies were laid under; namely the stamp act; on the Stamp act Being Repaled, an act called the Declaritory act, more oppressive and Hostile to American Rights than any thing that had Preceded it. A Cargo of Tea was consigned To the Friends of the Royal Governor Hutchinson with a duty [of] three pence on a pound, but the inhabitants of Massachusetts [being] Determined not to pay that Duty, a Party of men in Disguise Entered on bord the Ships and Destroyed Three Hundred and Forty Two Chests of Tea. After these proceedings were received in England The Excitement was very strong Ancestors but like them Resolve never to part with our birthright. To be wise in our deliberations and determined in our Exertions for the preservation of our libertys, being Irritated by Repeated Injuries and Striped of our inborn rights and dearest Priveleges; The Present Generation may view those Transactions with surprise; every Rational mind must feel satisfied of the overruling hand of Providence. To bring about the great event here we must Cast our Eyes on the Father of Mercies with a full belief that He would Make his arm beare For us as he did for our Ancestors that we should be Enabled to Defend and Maintain our Rights Boath of a Civil and Religious Nature. With these impressions Strongly impressed in their Hearts on the morning of [the] Ever Memorable 19th of April 1775 Husbands left their wifes and Fathers their daughters Sones their Mothers Brothers their Sisters to Meet a Haughty Foe.

"On this eventful morning an Express From Concord to Thos Plympton Esqr who was then a Member of the Provintial Congress [stated] that the British were on their way to Concord: In 35 Minites between 4 and 5 oclock in the Morning, the Sexton was immadelly Called on, the bell Ringing and the Discharge of Musket which was to give the alarm. By sunrise the greatest part of the inhabitants were Nòtified. The morning was Remarkable fine and the Inhabitants of Sudbury Never can make such an important appearance Probably again. Every Countenance appeared to Discover the importance of the event. Sudbury Companies were but a short distance From the North Bridg, when the first opposition was made to the Haughty Enemy. The Dye was Cast and the Torch Lit by which means we Have Becom an independent Nation, and may the present generation and those unborn, preserve unimparred the Libertys, sivel and Religious so long as Time Endures—

"On the 19 of April, I was Runing across a Lot where there was a bend in [the] Road in order to get a Fair Shot, at the Enemy, in company with a Scotchman who was in Braddock's Defeat 19 year Before, after we had Discharged our Guns I observed to the Scot who appeared very Commen. His name is found on that company's call roll to which we have before referred; it is left out after the battle, probably because after his death the name was stricken from the list. He belonged to the old Reed family of Sudbury, whose progenitor, Joseph Reed, settled at Lanham about 1656. Probably he was also buried in the old ground at Sudbury Centre. Mrs. Joseph Reed, a member of the same family and grandmother of the writer, said many years ago that the body of Mr. Reed was brought to Sudbury. So, although no stone has been found which marks the grave, he doubtless rests somewhere in the old burying-ground at the centre, which was the only one at that time in the West Precinct. Joshua Haynes, who was wounded, may have been one of Captain Nixon's minute men or one of the militia of Captain Haynes. The same name is on each company's muster roll; but the one in the latter was sergeant while the one wounded is mentioned without any title. Lieut. Elisha Wheeler, whose horse was shot under him, and Thomas Plympton, Esq., who had a bullet put through the fold of his coat, were both volunteers on horseback.

After the fight the soldiers showed no undue haste to return, but some of them lingered from three days to a month to repel attack or serve their country in whatever way it might require; and, when at length they returned to their homes, it was only, in the case of some of them, to bid the loved ones good-by and then go away again to engage the foe.

About 1718 William Webster (born 1692) and his wife, Susannah Cowperthwait, came and built their house near the east bank of Cedar Brook, about where Prospect avenue now is (his first child was born 1718; see "Records, Plainfield Meeting.")

In 1720 John Shotwell "of Plainfield" (i. e., of the Plainfield Meeting), came and settled on the Fullerton tract. Another prominent Friend, John Vail, purchased 1,200 acres of Peter Sonmans in 1731. It was the northeast end of Sonmans' great tract, and joined John Shotwell on the northeast. He was of Woodbridge, and his wife was Martha Fitz Randolph. His son John (2nd), who was born at Woodbridge in 1713, married (1) Margaret Laing, and (2), about 1750, her sister, Mary Laing, both daughters of John Laing. John Vail (1st) was a millwright and, about 1735, built a mill on Greenbrook near Grand avenue, at what was later Tier's pond. He was a Quaker preacher, and lived until 1774, dying in his 89th year, but his son John died in 1754, when only 41 years of age. About 1760 William Webster owned the Vail gristmill; French's mill, as known to the present generation, is said to date from about 1782, but by whom built does not appear.[1]

2nd attempt at posting. I'm not very good at this (yet)
I have Zedok s. of William Allen Briggs s. of Benjamin s. of Jonathan s. of Clement (of Plymouth Colony). There is an alternative ancestry that gives William allen as s. of James s. of James s. of John (of Rhode Island). In this scenario, there is a Townsend Briggs as brother to William (uncle to Z). There is also Ansel Briggs, first governor of Iowa descended from the VT Briggs, but no connex yet. I've got quite a bit more. I am compiling and will share. Send e-mail; please be patient, but I will respond to all. Sally may also have been Palmeter or Parmeter. One other candisate is Sally Younglove, but I am not signed on to this one. I have also seen Harriet Parmeter instead of Sally.

Zadoc Briggs / Sarah Younglove Parmenter

Many of us descendants of Zadock Briggs and one of his two wives (Harriet Seymour and Sarah "Sally" Younglove/Parmenter) may be interested in this article I found in the Parmenter Family Genealogy Forum that relates to Jason Parmenter and Shay's Rebellion. It mentions his "brother in arms Zadoc Briggs of Leyden" which I'm sure is our ancestor as having signed a petition asking for his pardon in June 1787.

Here's a link to this article. There is a large Parmenter family in this area with many possible first husbands for Sarah Younglove.

http://genforum.genealogy.com/cgi-bin/pageload.cgi?Briggs::parmenter::171.html

If anyone finds out how Sarah fits in, please let me know. My ancestry is as follows:

Zadoc Briggs and (Probably) Sarah rather than Harriet
Zara Briggs and Sarah Penney
George Z. Briggs and Louisa Fowler
Serena Briggs and Henry Nichols
Lewis Franklin Nichols and Mary Louise Paul
Inez Nichols and James G. Singleton (my parents)
Debbie Singleton Stuart (me)

Jason Parmenter served in the Revolutionary War, and was also prominently associated with those who staged Shay's Rebellion, his principal connection with the town of Gill being the tragedy incident to his pursuit through the town by the sheriff sent to arrest him, as is related in Chapter 26. He removed to Stoddard, NH and the history of that town states he lived to an advanced age, but does not mention the place or date of his death. Jason's daughter, Cynthia, married her first cousin Oliver Parmenter, but the union did not prove compatible, as the following notice indicates:

Whereas Cynthia, the wife of me the Subscriber, has in violation of her marriage covenant, withdrawn herself from my bed and board and unjustly and without cause refuses to live with me and whereas by her unfaithful behavior I have reason to fear she will endeavor to injure my interests by contracting debts on my account I hereby notify and warn all persons against harboring or giving her any credit for any matter whatever on my account, as I will not pay any demands made against me on her account. OLIVER PARMENTER, Bernardston, 14 Apr 1790 (Hampshire Gazette, Northampton.)

Possibly this constituted a legality equivalent to a divorce as, although no divorce proceedings were subsequently advertised, both parties contracted a second marriage. (2) Jason Parmenter married Abigail Frizzell daughter of Samuel and Prudence (Flagg) Frizzell. She was born in 1734. He was a prominent man here, serving as constable and collector 1775, 1784, Committee of Correspondence, Inspection and Safety, 1778, 1779. He was also a soldier of the Revolution, going out as private 1 May 1775, in Captain Wells' Company, Colonel Whitcomb's Regiment. On file in the State Archives is a "Petition for the Reprieve of Jason Parmenter of Bernardston," dated Sudbury, 11 May 1787 and signed by Ruth Parmenter his mother, and four brothers as follows: Micah, Deliverance, Israel, and Silas. There is also another petition signed by Jason Parmenter only. (2)

The Year 1786 The Beginning of Shays' Rebellion: "The people of Massachusetts," writes D. H. Montgomery in his American History, "were more heavily loaded with war debt than those of any other state. On the average, they owed about two hundred dollars apiece. [Equivalent to over $3,000.00 today] They were willing to pay, but could not and when great numbers of these poor people were sued and thrown into prison, the multitudes became desperate. In the western part of the state, Daniel Shays raised an army of nearly 2,000 excited farmers. They surrounded the court houses at Worcester and Springfield in an attempt to put a stop to all the lawsuits for debt."

The Year 1787 Conclusion of Shay's Rebellion: The forces under Daniel Shays had continued to gain strength and by January 25th nearly 2000 rebels were under his command. Shay's threatened to attack the arsenal at Springfield at this time and was heading up the Boston Road toward this bastion with Capt. Wells' Leyden Company in the forefront, when he came face to face with General Shepard's militia of 100 trained men. When Shays continued to move toward the arsenal despite orders from Shepard to halt, the militia was ordered to fire. Four of the insurgents dropped dead on the spot. These were; Jabez Spicer of Leyden; John Hunter of Shelburne; Messrs. Root of Bernardston and Webster of Gill. As the rebels were for the most part unarmed, they turned and hastened toward Ludlow and Pelham where they were intercepted by Federal troops under General Benjamin Lincoln who captured 59 men and nine sleigh loads of rebel provisions. On February 4th, Lincoln overtook the Shays men at Petersham where the snow was waist deep. He drove the insurgent army toward Athol where it disbanded. The officers and Daniel Shays fled to New Hampshire; most of the men retired to their homes. Captain Matthew Clark and Edward Nelson of Leyden and Colrain were ordered arrested when they returned, but so strong was the feeling for these Shays men, there was talk of lynching the "government men" who threatened the arrests. In nearby Bernardston, a party of Federal Agents under Benjamin Walker attempted to arrest Captain Jason Parmenter, a "Fall Town" officer in Shay's revolt. Walker overtook Parmenter at night as he attempted escape by sleigh. Both fired simultaneously and Walker was killed. Parmenter escaped to Vermont but was captured the next day. He was soon tried, and with another Shays officer, Henry McCullock of Pelham, sentenced to the gallows.

While preparations were being made at Northampton for the execution, a party of Shays' followers under Colonel Smith of New Salem, made a raid on Warwick, capturing Dr. Medad Pomeroy and Joseph Metcalf. They hoped to detain them as hostages for the lives of Parmenter and McCullock, but the Warwick prisoners escaped. The executions were scheduled for June 21st. It is said that Parmenter spent the night before the appointed hour in continuous prayer. All other efforts to save his life seemed to have failed. Several petitions had been filed asking for his pardon. One of these, dated May 11th at Sudbury, the home of his ancestors, was signed by his mother and brothers; another was signed by a "brother in arms," Zadoc Briggs of Leyden. Still another was signed by Parmenter himself. "Nothing," wrote the chroniclers, "ever occurred in the Connecticut Valley to cause more poetic effusions."

The appointed morning dawned. At the ceremony before the proposed hanging, it is said the church was so overflowing the sermon had to be preached from a high window so the crowds outside might hear. On the conclusion of the address, the petitioners were marched solemnly toward the gallows. But just as the rope had been placed in position and the trap was about to be sprung, a horseback rider galloped onto the scene waving a reprieve from Governor Hancock. It is said Jason Parmenter was so overcome with emotion he dropped senseless to the ground and it was some time before he recovered from the shock. The Captain soon sold his Bernardston property and joined his son Reuben, in Leyden on what is now the Glabach farm. A few years later, the Shays leader is listed among those who espoused the strange custom of the Dorrillites. (3)

I am really confused. I am a descendent of Sally Briggs b. June 21, 1786 died January 16, 1861 who married Asa Haynes who was a Methodist preacher from 1805 for nearly 60 years in Guilford, Vt. Both buried in Maplehurst Cemetery Guilford, Vt. just outside of Battleboro. Can't be the same Sally Briggs. Not if they were there for over 60 years.

I am descended from Zadock Briggs, through his son Ansel briggs and Ansel' Amasa Alton Briggs. My mother's research shows that Zadock had two wives Harriet Seymour and second is Sally Parmenter. We do not know who is the r of which children or when Harriet died. It is probable that Parmenter is Sally' married name from a previous marriage, as somewhere Zadock's 2nd wife is described as "the widow Parmenter". I was interested to see that some have S name as Younglove - perhaps that is her maiden name.

Also interested in who Zadock's parents might be, as the William line is not p in our estimation.

Several others had a privilege of the commons for wood and pasture, but not in further division of land, because they had removed and still retained their farms, or because they had recently arrived. For example.

John Saffin's house. He was in Massachusetts 1673.
John Stockbridge. He had removed to Boston 1647.
Serj. William Ticknor. He was not a householder 1647.
John Rance. He was a travelling Quaker.
John Nollman. He had recently come into the plantation.
Israel Hobart. His family then in Hingham.
Henry Joslin. Recently come from Black Point.
Edward Wanton. Not a householder in 1647.
John Otis. Had temporarily removed to Barnstable.
Timothy Foster. He resided mostly in Dorchester.
James Davis. Recently arrived in Town.
Benjamin Chandler, as above.
Israel Sylvester. Had a house in Marshfield also.
Nicolas Albeson, (the Sweede, uncertain wherefore).

UNITED STATES CENSUS.

In 1790,	(65 of color),	2862 souls.
1800,	. . . .	2728.
No. of houses	. . . . .	420.
1810,	. . . .	2969.
1820,	. . . .	3235.
1830,	(60 of color),	3512.

We state the census taken in 1830, viz. 3512, according to the list of Mr Berry the agent.

It having been suspected that the census was taken hastily and imperfectly, the Town voted in November 1830, that the school agents in each district should be requested to make a Dead swamp and Black pond, and falls into the North River at a point about equally distant from the first and third Herring brooks. The third Herring brook falls into the North River about two and a half miles above. This is the line between Scituate and Hanover. It rises in Valley swamp, on the bounds of Hingham, where is a spring of extraordinary copiousness. It receives several tributaries, viz. "Assinippi or Rocky water," and Hugh's cross brook, from Hanover, and Marget's from Scituate. Its whole length may be five miles.

Satuit brook, or Stony brook from which the town received its name, is a small stream scarcely a mile in length, and falls into the harbour. These brooks are not sufficiently copious to afford an unfailing supply of water for the mills. The third Herring brook is the most abundant, and the second is the least so: but they all have failed in times of extraordinary drought. It was an object of the early planters, to seek the vicinity of these brooks, in locating their farms.

HARBOUR.

Scituate extends about eight miles on the sea shore, including the beach on the east, and the glades on the west. Nearly in the centre of this line, is the Harbour. It is small and difficult of access, on account of a bar at its mouth. It affords about ten feet water at the bar, in ordinary full tides, but at low tides cannot be passed with vessels of any considerable burden. Here are two wharves and a considerable village. The two points which form the harbour, are Crow point on the south-east, and Cedar point on the north-west. On this latter, is a Light-house, erected in 1811, showing two steady lights, white above and red below. "The four cliffs so well known to mariners, are all on the south of the Harbour, showing sandy fronts."

The harbour was within the Conihassett grant: but the town of Scituate enjoyed the privilege of landing: and two landings there, are still the Town's property. For an account of the early settlement here, see Conihassett Grant.

NEW HARBOUR.

The North River had obtained the name of New Harbour before 1636. Vessels undoubtedly early wintered in fourth

by Samuel Deane

cliff bay, and found good moorings at "Pincin's bank." We are unable to give much account of the foreign trade from the North River. "In 1681, the Bark Adventure of 40 tons, sailed from the North River for the West Indies. She was owned by Scituate and Marshfield people. (Hist. Soc. Col. Vol. 4. 2d series.)

The fact that the River would form an excellent harbour, were it not for the shifting bar at its mouth, has given rise to various proposals for a remedy. It has often been in serious agitation, to cut a ship channel between the third and fourth cliffs: but the nature of the ground renders it probable that the same obstructions would there be met. At this present time, there is a petition before Congress, for a grant to improve the navigation by a canal from the River to the Old Harbour. It is estimated that $15,000 might cover the whole expense. Congress ordered the survey, and it was completed in July 1829. We are waiting the result with considerable interest, because it is confidently calculated by many, that it would improve the water both of the river and the harbour, and avoid every shoal that now impedes the navigation. The tides of extraordinary height flow through this proposed route, as has happened in October 1829, and several times before. Stetson's tide mill at the harbour was swept through this route, and carried to Marshfield shore in the great snow storm Nov. 1786.

BRIGGS'S HARBOUR

Received its name from Walter Briggs, an early settler in that vicinity: and was so called as early as 1650; and sometimes also called Strawberry cove. It is a small cove formed by the extreme north-east point of Scituate, called the glades. We believe that vessels of small burthen were anciently built there, and fishing and coasting craft used to winter there. The Indian name of this little harbour was Mishquashtuck, sometimes written in our Records Musquashcut.

FISHERIES.

We first notice the fisheries of the streams. It is reasonable to conjecture that the first alewives were taken in the first Herring brook, as some of the earliest settlements were near that stream. These fish ascended this brook to George Moore's

For whereas the article was, that upon any matter of difference, two, three, or more commissioners of every of the confederate colonies should assemble and have absolute power (the greater number of them) to determine the matter, they would have them only to meet and if they could agree, so; if not, then to report to their several colonies and to return with their advice and so to go on till the matter might be agreed; which, beside that it would have been infinitely tedious and extreme chargeable, it would never have attained the end; for it was very unlikely that all the churches in all the plantations would ever have accorded upon the same propositions.

> > Around May, 1638, representatives from the four Connecticut River towns of Hartford, Windsor, Wethersfield and Springfield had met to discuss the need for an independent civil government and an alliance with Massachusetts on issues of mutual concern such as Indian relations. They then sent agents to Massachusetts proposing articles of confederation. The records of this meeting are lost, but it is plain that Connecticut wanted a loose alliance, whereas Massachusetts wanted a tighter union, with some sort of "preeminence" accorded to Massachusetts as the senior partner. By mid December when John Winthrop seems to have written this account, the Connecticut leaders were drafting their new constitution, The Fundamental Orders, which was adopted by Hartford, Windsor and Wethersfield in Jan. 1639.

The town's name was changed in 1640 to honor Pynchon's village in Essex

And this article we added: That we, etc, should have liberty to pass to and fro upon Connecticut, and they likewise. To these articles all their commissioners offered to consent, but it was thought by our court (because of the new articles) that they should first acquaint their own court with it. And so their commissioners departed.*
> > After this, we understood that they went on to excercise their authority at Agawam. Whereupon the governor wrote to them to desire them to forbear until the line was laid out. After a long time, Mr. Ludlow (in the name of the court) returned answer, which was very harsh; and in fine declared, that they thought it not fit to treat any further before they had advice from the gentlemen of Saybrook, etc. The governor acquainted the council and magistrates with this letter; and, because they had tied our hands (in a manner) from replying, he wrote a private letter to Mr. Haynes wherein he lays open their mistakes (as he called them) and the apparent causes of offence, which they had given us; as by making a treaty of agreement with the Narragansetts and Mohegans without joining us or mentioning us to that end (though we had by letter given them liberty to take us in), and by binding all the Indians (who had received any Pequots) to pay tribute for them all to them at Connecticut, etc (these and the miscarriages in point of correspondence were conceived to arise from these two errors in their government: 1. They chose divers scores of men who had no learning nor judgement which might fit them for those affairs, though otherwise men holy and religious. 2. By occasion hereof, the main burden for managing of state business fell upon some one or other of their ministers (as the phrase and style of these letters will clearly discover) who, though they were men of singular wisdom and godliness, yet stepping out of their course, their actions wanted that blessing which otherwise might have been expected.

Accordingly we sent men to Cutshamekin at Braintree to fetch him and his guns, bows, etc. which was done, and to disarm Passaconamy who lived by Merrimack...(Passaconamy was sachem to the Pennacooks, who lived by the Merrimack River in New Hampshire.

15 EBENEZER4 (Isaac3, Isaac2, William1), of Oxford, married, Oct. 14, 1714, Deborah Haynes, b. at Sudbury, Jan'y 30, 1690; doubtless the fourth child of John and Ruth Haynes, of Sudbury, and sister to Josiah Haynes, octogenarian, killed at the battle of Concord, April 19, 1775. He was one of the first settlers of Oxford, with his brother Isaac; and his eldest child Dorothy was the first child born there. On the division of the proprietor's lots, he drew No. 19, about four miles from Isaac's, in what is now known as North Oxford. The dwelling house which he then built, with an addition to it some years later, is large, and is still (1875) in good habitable condition. The old west part was, until about 1870, covered on the sides with the original shingles. During the few first years of his living in it, it was picketed, to protect it from the hostility of the Indians. It has the ancient large fireplaces and the huge chimney in the centre. There his nine children were born, and from that house all, but the two who died at the opening of womanhood, were married in early years of life. There he and his wife not supposed that William and Margaret were man and wife, but that they were brother and sister, for the reason that a William Haines, of Salem, married Sarah Ingersoll, daughter of Richard Ingersoll, who emigrated from Bedfordshire, England, in 1639. Although this name is spelled H-a-i-n-e-s, there can be no doubt that it refers to William Hind, for nowhere in genealogical reference to the Haynes or Haines families in this country, has the compiler found any claim to a William at so early a period as this. He is in no way connected with the family of Gov. John Haynes, nor with John or Josiah Haynes of Ludbery, who it is stated in the "History of Shrewsbury," received a grant of thirty-two thousand acres of land. These Haynes brothers with their sisters, Sufferance and Mary, were children of Walter Haynes, a Wiltshire linen-weaver, who with his wife, Elizabeth, and children all under sixteen years of age, were passengers in the Confidence from England in 1638 and settled in Ludbery. Neither was he related to Deacon Samuel Haynes, born probably in 1611, who embarked in the ship Angel Gabriel from London, June 4, 1635, reached Pemaquid, where the ship was wrecked Aug. 15, 1635. From there, he went to Ipswich, then returned to England, but was in this country again in Dover, April 1, 1640, where he is mentioned again in 1642 and in 1648. From there, he moved to Greenland, N. H., and was deacon in the First church in Portsmouth in 1671. The first mention of a man having a similar name to the above William, was one William Haynes, who was transported to the Barbadoes in October, 1685, for participating in Monmouth's rebellion.

18. William Haines of Salem (doubtless William Hind of the Paule), joined the church in 1649, and it is recorded that Sarah (Ingersoll) Haynes joined the same year. One child at least was born to them, whom they named (19) William, and who married Abigail Ward, daughter of Samuel and his second wife, Sarah (Hubbard) Ward, of Marblehead, and granddaughter of Samuel Ward and wife Frances of Hingham. Some of these Wards are referred to in the records of the First church in Charlestown, Mass. This William, son of William and Sarah (Ingersoll) Haynes, it is believed, was the same as William Hains (or Hinds) who resided in Marblehead in 1728, he being then an old man, and who it is stated, enlisted from Salem, in Capt. Joseph Gardner's company during King Philip's war, and who was present at the taking of Narragansett Fort. He is mentioned in the list of names of those who received grants of land in 1728 in Narragansett Township No. 3, which later became Amherst, N. H. It is further believed that he was the same as William Hains of Salem, "yoeman deceased," who is mentioned in a deed, 1728-9, as conveying Aaron had no family when he came over, probably from England. (A Hartford Court called him "A young Englishman of very little promise." He may have been an indentured servant, or just a follower along to the group that formed Hartford at about that time - Thomas Hooker's Dissenters. I have data on Aaron's three sons and their families. He eventually ended up in Stonington, Ct. after years of being an Indian fighter and a militiaman under Captain and eventually Generally Mason, near whom he lived at the head of the Mystic River. I will try to help fill in the spaces back to Aaron from your husband's line if I can.

Hi, Carolyn,
Thanks for your offer of photos of some of the Haynes family. I already have some photos of them which this relative in Washington state sent me. Mary Celleste, Inez and family, Frank and some brothers, etc.) Now as for the relationship---Francis Haynes, son of Asa Philander Haynes, married Sarah Ritter in 1867. Sarah was the daughter of Anna (Bruner) Ritter, a great-great great aunt. That is, Anna's father was great-great grandfather on the Bruner line. He was the Swiss immigrant who came to America in 1833. He came with four children, one of whom was Anna. So you see, the relationship to the Haynes is through marriage. The relative in Washington found me through a Richard Newcomer of the DeKalb Genealogy Society. He had photographed graves in the Eddy Cemetery for me and Jan (in WA) e-mailed the Society for info on Bruners when she found that she was a descendant of Anna. If I did not have photos of the Haynes branch, I would certainly take you up on your offer. I beleive (to me anyway) that the reason that Anna Bruner's marriage really sticks out is that she had to sign a marriage contract when she married. She was wed to Christopher Ritter, a man older than her father and from what I have gathered he had quite a lot of wealth. Anna was getting on in years for those times. She was 24 years old. Anyway the contract, in brief, was that if the marriage was consummated, Anna would be given title to a house and lot in the town of Canal Dover in Tuscarawas co, OH. If she did consumate the marriage and got the lot and house she did not get any other part of the old man's wealth, and if she left the marriage, after getting the lot, she lost the lot and everything else. How's that for looking after your wealth? Well, Anna and Christopher had the one child, Sarah, and Anna died when Sarah was 14 years old. Her elderly spouse did two years after her. Anna's story makes one of those interesting "twists" one find in research, I think. Oh yes, the lot and house were sold by Anna and Christopher a few years after they married.
Marie

Message: Hi, I am also a descendent of one of the Aarons. I have the same info that you have and then some from the Early Germans of NJ, by T.F.Chambers. My branch settled in Morris Co.,N.J. It states that Aaron probably came to NJ with the Culvers, Waterhouse, Morgan and other families of New London, Conn. I have not picked up any information on an Aaron being in the Wyoming Massacre. This area of NJ is not that far from that part of Pa. Should you find anything would you please let me know. I descend Aaron b 1709,d1772, his son Aaron m Polly Van Tile(Tassel), their son John's dau Ann Eliza m Wm S.Burdge. There is a note in Chamber's book that Aaron d 1772 may be a grandson of Aaron of New London.

Subject: Immigrant Aaron STARK & wife Sarah.

Posted by: Marilyn Roth

Message: The immigrant Aaron STARK was ordered in Hartford, CT, 1639, to marry Mary HOLT as a punishment for bastardy. (Catalog of Names of First Puritans, Geneal. Publishing Co., Balto., 1968, p. 254. Records of the Particular Court of CT, CT Historical Society, Vol. 22, Hartford, 1928, Hall, Book 1.)

However, it is unlikely that Aaron was forced to marry Mary HOLT. Note that she was pregnant in 1639, so born by 1623, probably earlier. Thus, it is unlikely that she had Aaron's children born as late as the 1670's. If Aaron had eight children from about 1654 to 1672, then why didn't he and Mary have any children between 1640 & 1654?

Aaron's wife is believed to have been the Sarah who witnessed a deed (her mark) 26 S 1670, Aaron STARK to Robert FLEMING. Note that there was no daughter named Mary, but there was a daughter named Sarah. However, the daughter was born about 1660+, so she would have been too young to witness in 1670.

CHAPTER VII.

Before the Indian deed given by Adam Puit had been obtained by Wallingford through the mediation of Major Talcott, the colony of Connecticut had granted two large tracts of land in the territory north of Pilgrims' Harbor ford to two prominent men: one James Bishop, the other William Jones, both of New Haven. Each gift was probably a pension or reward for valuable services performed. Both men had been conspicuous in the colony of New Haven before the union with Connecticut and both were influential in the councils of the colony after the union.

The name of James Bishop does not appear on the New Haven records until 1646, so probably he was not one of the original planters. Evidently he was a man of ability and high character, and after 1661 he was conspicuous and influential. In that year he was elected secretary of the colony and continued in that office until the union. In 1668 he was chosen one of the magistrates of Connecticut and was re-chosen annually until 1683 when he was made deputy governor. To that office he was re-elected each year until his death on June 22, 1691.

William Jones,1 who had been a lawyer in London, came to America in the same ship which brought the regicides Whalley and Goffe in 1660. He had married in London, Hannah, the youngest daughter of Governor Theophilus Eaton. of New Haven. The governor had died in 1658 and Mr. Jones came to New Haven to look after his wife's estate and there he made his home. He was a man of good talents and the fact was soon recognized, for in 1662 he was chosen one of the magistrates of the colony of New Haven. In 1664 he was elected deputy governor. Upon the union in 1665 he was elected a magistrate of Connecticut and was annually re-elected until the death of James Bishop in 1691 when he was elected deputy governor to succeed him. He was each year re-chosen until 1698 when he refused to continue in the office longer as he was then 74 years old. He died Oct. 17, 1706, at the age of 82, and the General Assembly which was then sitting in New Haven voted to give him a public funeral and appropriated the funds to defray the expense. The most interesting fact in his life was his connection with the two judges, Whalley and Goffe. While they were hiding in New Haven, Mr. Jones' house was their place of refuge for eleven days, and he seems to have shared the honors with Rev. John Davenport during this exciting episode in the history of New Haven.2

1 His father was executed as one of the judges of King Charles 1st; see Palfrey's History of N. E., Vol. II., p. 504.

Davenport soon after returned to his native country-- England--for the purpose of emigrating to America.

For some years he had been familiar, chiefly through his personal friend Rev. John Cotton, with the weighty affairs that were going on in New England. He had taken an early interest in the formation of the Massachusetts colony, and contributed 50 towards the procurement of its charter. He was present at the meeting of the company in London, March 23, 1629, and also at those of March 30, April 8, August 28-29, and those of November and December following.

He now resolved with his friend Theophilus Eaton, to collect a band of colonists whom, under God, they might lead out of spiritual Egypt--the house of bondage and oppression--into the distant land of promise. Many of those who had formerly enjoyed the ministry of Mr. Davenport in Coleman street, were ready to join them.

He who divided the Red sea before the Israelites gave this little company as safe a passage across the ocean. They arrived in Boston in the Hector, and another ship, on the 3d of June, 1637. Among other passengers who came

DURING the reign of James I. and Charles I. kings of England, the Puritans were subjected to a destructive oppression, and a furious persecution for conscience sake; and seeing no end to their sufferings, projected settlements in the wilderness of America, as a place of retreat for the Church of God, and where the salvation and freedom of themselves and of their posterity might be promoted and secured. Hence large companies left their native land and crossed the Atlantic. Among them were persons of wealth, learning, and distinguished piety and eminence.

On the 26th July, 1637, Rev. John Davenport, Mr. Samuel Eaton, Theophilus Eaton, Edward Hopkins, Thomas Gregson, and their company arrived at Boston. They were invited to continue there, or in that vicinity. This proposal they rejected, for they were determined to settle a new colony. Accordingly, in the fall of that year, Mr. Eaton and others explored the country along the sea-coast, west of Connecticut river, and finally fixed upon Quinipiack, as the place of their settlement. On the 30th March, 1638, the company sailed from Boston, and in about two weeks arrived safe at the place of their destination.

On the 18th April, the first Lord's day after their arrival, the people attended public worship under a large oak, and Mr. Davenport preached to them from Matth. vi. 1. Soon after their arrival, they held a day of fasting and prayer; at the close of which, they solemnly entered into a plantation

Col. Jones had no issue by the wid. of Mr. Whetstone." However one part of the story is as good as the other, prob. tho. the relat. unimport. of the Col. has left us, I think, without knowl. of a former w. The little resp. shown to the story of his origin is justif. by the strange ignorance exhibit. in the details, with wh. Once the Welsh alone enjoy. it, but it has gone upon all the winds; and it is exceed. difficult to appropr. third and later generat. Two stepsons of Gov. Theophilus Eaton were David and Thomas Yale, the former being the father of Elihu Yale.(*)

The inventory of the Eaton estate gives evidence of the wealth and state maintained by some of the ancestors of the Colonial Dames in the first half of the seventeenth century in Connecticut. There was a large amount of silver plate, and "Turkey hangings and Turkey carpets, a cushion for a very long window seat" [which window is easily recognized in the accompanying illustration], and various other cushions of both "Turkey work" and "needlework." "A tapestry covering for a bedstead at 4" rouses one's curiosity as to its characteristics. A large number of rooms, referred to as the blue room, the green room, the red room, the parlour, etc., indicate an assortment of apartments equal to the suggestion made by the record of "twenty-one chimneys."

"A silver gilt ewer and basin," (+) for use in the toilet of Mrs. Eaton, discloses a degree of luxury hardly expected in those early pioneer days, when the true Colonial Dame lived in the little Colony of Connecticut.

Gov. John Winthrop, whose name is endeared to Connecticut as the illustrious man who secured the Charter, was the son of Gov. John Winthrop of Massachusetts, born at Groton, Suffolk, 1605. He was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, and an extensive European trip found him at twenty-five one of the most elegant and accomplished gentlemen of his day. In 1631 he came with his father to America, and was chosen Magistrate for Massachusetts. Soon after he returned to England, but in 1635 came back to America, bearing a commission to build a fort at the mouth of the Connecticut River, and to hold the position of Governor. His services to Connecticut were varied and distinguished, but the most conspicuous event was his part in the construction of the Charter which secured to the Connecticut colonist all the rights of liberty he desired, and the greater feat of securing the sanction and signature of Charles II. Sagacity, diplomacy, and tact combined in Winthrop to accomplish a service for Connecticut, the large results

(+)Mr. Eaton was, at an earlier date, engaged in the "East Country Trade," i. e., with Russia and the other countries bordering on the Baltic, and lived in Denmark for a time, as an agent for the "East Land Company." He gave such satisfaction to his employers that they "presented his Wife with a Bason and Ewer double gilt and curiously wrought with Gold and weighing above Sixty Pound."--Cotton Mather, Magnalia, Book II, 27, ed., 1702.

now Ann street and Meeting House Hill road, north on Benjamin Curtis and east on highway (Swayne avenue). With it he sold a barn. Shortly afterwards Berry mortgaged the land and on it then, were a house and a barn, showing that the house had been built in the intervening time. The late Mrs. Julia Knight, who owned it, told the writer that a few years ago the barn was taken down and on a beam was found the date 1735, and that her father, Aaron Higbey, had told her the house was standing when the old meeting house was in use. This fixes the date very close to 1743 and the pedigree of the dwelling is practically certain. Ephraim was, doubtless, a brother of Divan Berry, Sr. He finally moved from Meriden on November 22, 1756, and sold the house and farm to Stephen Perkins.

The Perkins family occupied it many years, the last one being Liberty, who passed a good part of his life developing a character commonly denominated as crusty; he married late in life as his second wife the widow of one of the sons of Squire Darius Benham of Colony street, who with her son, Henry W. Benham, came to live in the old house. The boy, who had high ideals, did not get on well with Liberty and many stories are told of the hardships endured. The story in detail can be found in Mrs. Breckenridge's "Recollections of a New England Town," page 49.

The lad afterwards became a general in the army and had a very successful career. In the first half of the last century the dwelling became the property of Aaron Higbey. The house has been kept in perfect repair and no one of the very old homes in Meriden is as well preserved as this. There is much fine paneling and everything about the house indicates how carefully it was built and kept in repair. It stands on the east corner of Parker avenue and Ann street.

The name of Captain Thomas Yale has been frequently mentioned in the foregoing pages. He was born in New Haven in 1647, the son of Captain Thomas, Sr. He was a grandson of Ann, the daughter of Bishop Lloyd, of the diocese of Chester, England. Her first husband was Thomas Yale, of Wrexham, Wales. He died about 1719 and she then married Theophilus Eaton, a merchant in London, who afterwards moved to New Haven and became governor of the colony. Captain Thomas, Jr., was first cousin to Elihu Yale, after whom Yale College was named on account of his benefactions to the institution, and who, although born in New Haven, was afterwards a member of the famous and rich corporation known as the East India Company of London and later became its governor.

Captains Thomas,[1] Sr. and Jr., although so well connected, seem to have preferred the life of a pioneer on the frontiers, to that of a man of affairs in the center of New Haven colony, for the senior early moved to a large farm in North Haven while the junior was one of the original planters of Wallingford in 1670 and at [1] No reliance can be placed on the early pedigree of the Yale family, found in the pages of the genealogy compiled by Elihu Yale and published in 1850. See N. E. Hist. and Gen. Register, Vol. XXXVIII., p. 317, Vol. L, p. 72 and Vol. LIII., pp. 82-83. The statement made on page 11 of this book that Thos. Yale's mother was a daughter of Thos. Morton, Bishop of Chester, was a mistake.

On her mother's side Mrs. Cook's ancestry is as follows: Sarah Jones (McHoggan) Haines was born at Woodsville, Ohio, March 28, 1840, and died at Cambridge, Ohio, January 25, 1921. She was educated in private schools and entered college at the age of seventeen. In 1864 she was graduated, in the same class with her future husband, Lewis Gregg Haines, at McNeely College, Hopedale, Ohio. She was the daughter of James McHoggan, Jr., (born, Westville, Connecticut, February 3, 1815; died, Moscow, Ohio, November 9, 1892), who married at New Haven, Connecticut, November 8, 1836, Mary Green Meadows (born, Milford, Connecticut, October 16, 1819; died, September 12, 1899). James McHoggan, Jr., was a son of James McHoggan (born at Dumferline, Scotland, 1782; died at [p.359] Westville, Connecticut, April 27, 1845), a weaver of cotton and woolen goods and the inventor of several improvements in textile machinery, who married Martha, daughter of Ashbell Lines. Mary Green Meadows, wife of James McHoggan, Jr., had most notable ancestry. She was the daughter of Robert Carter Meadows (born in Liverpool, England in 1780; settled in Connecticut; and lost at sea near Turk's Island in 1827) who married, in New Haven, Connecticut, in 1807, Sarah Jones, daughter of Isaac Jones, who served in the Revolutionary War, and his wife, Mary Pond. Isaac Jones was the son of John Jones, Jr. (1712-1759), and Hannah Bassett (1719-1759), who were married in 1738. They both, died in Durham, Connecticut. John Jones, Jr., was a son of the Reverend John Jones (1667-1718), a graduate of Harvard College, who married Mindwell, daughter of Rowland and Sarah (Whiting) Stebbins. Reverend William Jones was a son of William Jones (born in England in 1624; died at New Haven, Connecticut, in 1705), who was a magistrate of the New Haven Colony in 1602-1603; Deputy Governor in 1664, and again from 1691-1697; Commissioner of the United Colonies, 1664; Member of the Governor's Council, 1665; Assistant to the Governor, 1665-1691, and a Judge of the County Courts in 1695. In 1659 he married his second wife, Hannah Eaton (baptized at St. Stephen's, Coleman Street, London, England, October 6, 1632; died at New Haven, Connecticut, in 1707), daughter of Theophilus Eaton (born at Stoney Stratford, England, in 1590; died at New Haven, January 7, 1657), one of the founders of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, named in the grant of James I, dated March 4, 1628-1629, and came to Boston in 1627. He was assistant to the Governor and Company of the Colony, 1629-1630; one of the founders of the New Haven Colony; Magistrate there, in 1639; signer of the Articles of Confederation of the United Colonies, 1643; in the same year Commissioner of the United Colonies and first Governor of the New Haven Colony, until his death in 1657. He married, in England, in 1627, Anna Lloyd, widow of Thomas Yale and daughter of the Right Reverend George Lloyd, Bishop of Chester, and his wife, Anne Wilkinson. Bishop Lloyd traced his notable Welsh ancestry to Coel Coedhehawy (295 A.D.), through Rhrodri Mawr (843-877), King of All Wales; through his grandson, Howel Dda (907-948), the great lawgiver of Cambria, whose laws continued in force for four hundred years; through his great-great-grandson, Rhys ap Tewdor Mawr (died, 1098), the founder of the second Royal Welsh Tribe; through his grandson, Rhys ap Gryffydd (died, 1197), representative Sovereign of North Wales; through Gruffudd ay Cynan (died, in 1136, at the age of eighty-two), King of Wales, the last to bear the title; and also to Marchudd ap Cynan, Lord of Brynffenigl in Denbighland, founder of eight noble tribes of North Wales and Powys in the ninth century. Mary Pond, the wife of Isaac Jones, also came of a notable family. Her father was Peter Pond, and her mother, Mary Hubbert (born in Boston, Massachusetts, in 1723; died in Milford, Connecticut, in 1761), daughter of Zachariah Hubbert, who married, May 15, 1722, Mary Hobby (born in the Province House, Boston, February 19, 1702; died, 1730), daughter of Sir Charles Hobby, Knight, son of William and Anne Hobby of Boston. Sir Charles Hobby was knighted by Queen Anne, in 1705, for bravery during the earthquake in 1692 at Jamaica, where he was in command of the sloop Seaflower. He was Captain of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston, in 1702-1703, and again 1713-1714; and in 1708, Captain of the Boston Militia. In 1710, he commanded one of two Massachusetts regiments in the expedition against Port Royal and the following year he was Deputy Governor of Annapolis Royal. From 1713 Sir Charles was a Warden of King's Chapel, Boston, serving until his death, which occurred in Boston about 1715.

Chapter 11 Colony of Massachusetts Bay

The year following, John Davenport, a celebrated clergyman of London, arrived at Boston -- with him came his friend Theophilus Eaton, a rich merchant. They and their associates had been exiled. They were cordially welcomed in Massachusetts, and urgently pressed to remain in that colony. They preferred to go into the wilderness rather than dwell in the midst of so much controversy. Rumor had told of the fine region found to the west by the pursuers of the Pequods. Eaton, with a few men, after exploring the coast of the Sound, spent the following winter at a desirable place in that region. As soon as spring opened, the company sailed from Boston; in due time they arrived at the place where Eaton had spent the winter; there, under a large tree, on the Sabbath after their arrival, Davenport preached his first sermon in the wilderness. A day of fasting and prayer for direction was observed, and then they formed a government, pledging themselves "to be governed in all things by the rules which the Scriptures held forth to them." Such was the settlement of New Haven, and thus was it to be governed. They purchased from the Indians the right to the land -- Eaton was elected governor; and to the end of his life, for more than twenty years, he was annually chosen to that office.

Part 1 The English People Found a Nation in America
Chapter 13 New England's Plantation

"The business came afresh to agitation" in London; the project of colonizing by the aid of fishing voyages was given up; and from that city, Lincolnshire, and the west country, men of fortune and religious zeal, merchants and country gentlemen, the discreeter sort among the many who desired a reformation in church government, "offered the help of their purses" to advance "the glory of God" by establishing a colony of the best of their countrymen on the shores of New England. To facilitate the grant of a charter from the crown, they sought the concurrence of the council of Plymouth for New England; they were befriended in their application by the earl of Warwick, and obtained the approbation of Sir Ferdinando Gorges; and, on the nineteenth of March, 1628, that company, which had proved itself incapable of colonizing its domain, and could derive revenue only from sales of territory, disregarding a former grant of a large district on the Charles river, conveyed to Sir Henry Roswell, Sir John Young, Thomas Southcoat, John Humphrey, John Endecott, and Simon Whetcomb, a belt of land extending three miles south of the river Charles and the Massachusetts bay, and three miles north of every part of the river Merrimack, from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean, to be held by the same tenure as in the county of Kent. The grantees associated to themselves Sir Richard Saltonstall, Isaac Johnson, Matthew Cradock, Increase Nowell, Richard Bellingham, Theophilus Eaton, William Pynchon, and others, of whom nearly all united religious zeal with a capacity for vigorous action. Endecott -- who, "ever since the Lord in mercy had revealed himself unto him," had maintained the straitest judgment against the outward form of God's worship as prescribed by English statutes; a man of dauntless courage, and that cheerfulness which accompanies courage; benevolent, though austere; firm, though choleric; of a rugged nature, which his stern principles of non-conformity had not served to mellow -- was selected as a "fit instrument to begin this wilderness work." In 1628, before June came to an end, he was sent over as governor, assisted by a few men, having his wife and family for the companions of his voyage, the hostages of his irrevocable attachment to the New World. Arriving in safety in September, he united his own party and those who had gone there before him into one body, which counted in all not much above fifty or sixty persons. With these he founded the oldest town in the colony, soon to be called Salem, and extended some supervision over the waters of Boston harbor, then called Massachusetts bay, near which the lands were "counted the paradise of New England." At Charlestown an Englishman, one Thomas Walford, a blacksmith, dwelt in a thatched and palisaded cabin. William Blackstone, an Episcopal clergyman, a courteous recluse, gifted with the impatience of restraint which belongs to the pioneer, had seated himself on the opposite peninsula; the island now known as East Boston was occupied by Samuel Maverick, a prelatist, though son of a pious non-conformist minister of the west of England. At Nantasket and farther south, stragglers lingered near the seaside, attracted by the gains of a fishing station and a petty trade in beaver. The Puritan ruler visited the remains of Morton's unruly company in what is now Quincy, rebuked them for their profane revels, and admonished them "to look there should be better walking."

Chapter 16 Colonization of New Hampshire, Rhode Island, and Connecticut

In equal independence, a Puritan colony sprang up at New Haven, under the guidance of John Davenport as its pastor, and of his friend, the excellent Theophilus Eaton. Its forms were austere, unmixed Calvinism; but the spirit of humanity sheltered itself under the rough exterior. In April, 1638, the colonists held their first gathering under a branching oak. Beneath the leafless tree the little flock was taught by Davenport that, like the Son of man, they were led into the wilderness to be tempted. After a day of fasting and prayer, they rested their first frame of government on a simple plantation covenant, that "all of them would be ordered by the rules which the scriptures held forth to them." A title to lands was obtained by a treaty with the natives, whom they protected against the Mohawks. When, after more than a year, the free planters of the colony desired a more perfect form of government, the followers of Him who was laid in a manger held their constituent assembly in a barn. There, by the influence of Davenport, it was resolved that the scriptures are the perfect rule of a commonwealth; that the purity and peace of the ordinances to themselves and their posterity were the great end of civil order; and that church members only should be free burgesses. A committee of twelve was selected to choose seven men, qualified for the foundation-work of organizing the government. Eaton, Davenport, and five others, were "the seven pillars" for the new House of Wisdom in the wilderness.
